The Daily Intelligencer.

LANCASTER, OCTOBER 19, 1858,

The New York Rat Hole. The New York Tribune has always been a strongly parlisan journal and since Horace Grealey's day has been noted for its malevolence as much as its prejudice. It is so conspicuously unfair and malicious in its attacks upon its political opponents that it wields no influence and commands no respect outside the ranks of the hide-bound Republicans. It is their organ. It is ready for any job the party leaders have on hand for it. And Chairman Quay is just the man to find it dirty work to do. Its latest essay has been the effort to convict Congressman Cox of unlawfully using his frank to send political matter through the mail. Its evidence is the possession of a package of such matter sent under Mr. Cox's frank to some postmistress in the interior of New York. It appears from the statements made in Congress regarding the matter that the frank is a forgery; and that the package was sent out though a Republican conspirary to get up this charge against the Democracy. The conduct of the Tribuna sustains this suspicion. It has refused to give the franked package to the special agent of the postoffice department who was directed to inquire into the fraud.

But it turns out that Chairman Quay and other Republican congressmen have been doing what the Tribunc falsely charges against Mr. Cox. The postmaster general says that he has notified Senator and Chairman Quay of the discovery of unfrankable matter in the mails under his frank, and has received no response from him. Evidently he does not claim that his frank is a forgery; and does not think his offense very great in sending out Republican documents at the cost of the government. Nor isit; if he never does anything worse for his party, he will greatly abuse his reputation for rascality. He has now about him, in New York, a set of men who have no other aspiration than success in political fraud and who have earned high reputation as political cracksmen. The whole Pannsylvania gang is there, save brother Cooper, who stays solitary and alone at home to gather in the stray pennies from manufacturers and others that the national fat-frying concern has left. His successor in the chairmanship is over helping Quay; all the state capital scamps are there; and the Philadelphia crowd. Bill Chandler and Johnny Davenport, rodents of like feature, are in the rat hole, too, and if there is no successful result to their labors, it will not be because of unscrupulous and incessant gnawing.

What Astonishes Them.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson, an old-time Abolitionist, is running for Congress on the Democratic ticket in the Fifth Massachusetts district, and the Republican press thinks that he is out of place in that company and must have greatly changed his views to get there. It is another illustration of how difficult it is to see oneself as others see us, and how prone man is-especially the Republican man-to raise his hands in hely horror at the deeds of others which are but mild copies of his own. Astonishment that the abolitionist Higginson comes now into the Democratic tent, has no proper place in the Republican mind, that was once, and still assumes to be, the champion of negro equality with the white man, but to-day denies to the Chinaman permission even to live upon our soil. The old doctrine that Higginson and the Republican party preached was the political equality of men; who were all, according to it, born free and equal. To-day the same Republican freedom shrickers and equality preachers denounce the Chinaman as unworthy of political or social association and refu e entrance to the land to those who are out and naturalization as citizens to the few who are in.

No wonder Mr. Higginson finds that old things have passed away, and needs to seek new foundations for his political house. He comes to the Democratic party, that wants to keep the Chinaman out as it wanted to keep the negro out and to reserve the country for the white race that governs it. He finds that question settled in favor of keeping the black man and casting out the yellow; and straightway, like a sensible man, he hies himself to fresh political pastures and to the party that believes on the vital issues of the day what he believes; to a party that wants to reform the tariff to the country's present needs; and that wants to slay the trusts that are crushing the competition that is its life's blood. Mr. Higginson has laughed off bis old skin with its dead issues and in the living present finds himself in sympathy with the progressive and sparkling forces of Democracy.

Why He Changes.

Seth Low, who was lately It publican mayor of Brooklyn, New York, who last year advocated on the stump the Republican ticket, and who is a man of high standing and ability, now speaks for the Democratic national ticket. The reasons are clearly and forcibly stated by him. He finds himself unable to act with the Republican party, because he is in favor of a tariff reform and it is not. This issue he flads to be the one of principal content on in the campaign, and upon it his views are entirely upon the Democratic side. He is not for free trade; but he is in favor of reducing the tariff duties to such a degree as may bedone without injury to domestic industry, and he is particularly persuaded that free wool will be good for the wool producer, manufacturer and consumer. He finds the Republican party declaring in its platform in favor of a prohibitory tariff and opposing a reduction of revenue by way of the tariff. while the Republican Senate proposes such reduction without making it. It is clear that the Republican party is the one demanding excessive tariff taxation; and upon that issue Mr. Low separates

It is evident that the m st intelligent portion of the Republican party revolts at its tariff doctrine. The Senate Republicans could not agree upon a bill that they would support. One has been proposed by their committee, which they have not dared to press to discussion and passage before the election. They asked for an adjournment, when they had ample time to enact their bill before the election if they had desired to do so. They said in excuse that the House did but that was because the House had nothing of importance to do. If the Senate had passed its tariff bill, the responsibility would then have passed to the House; and if its members had not come together instantly to act upon the Senate measure, the Republican party would have had the opportunity of showing that the Democratic party feared to do, what we now declare the Republican party fears to do; namely, declare itself definitely upon the tariff issue in a law of its enacting.

Travels of a Statesman.

While Chairman Quay is hard at work colonizing colored voters in the doubtful wards of New York, the colored vote in other parts of the country is slipping steadily away from Republican control. In West Virginia the movement is very marked, and even in Pennsylvania the colored men are beginning to assert their right to vote as they please and not as Republican bosses dictate.

To the inexpressable relief of his party, Statesman Landis has fled from his native county, and simultaneous with his appearance in West Virginia comes the announcement that the Democratic national committee has received most encouraging news from that state. The statesman himself favors the columns of the New Kra with a statement of the probable result in West Virginia. It can be considered quive as reliable as his famous essay showing that the farmers of Lanaster county made $2,000 a year apiece out of the tax on wheat and corn imports in spite of the fact that there were no such imports. Mr. Landis should proceed to Wheeling, W. Va., as the apostle of war tariff protection for a certain Major Loring who there employs 1,200 men in making nails, has had the audacity to declare a hope that the Mills bill may pass as he can then sell nails in England at a profit. A way out in Dakota county, Minnesota, a Republican club of of the county committee has resigned, while the farmers all over the state are giving evidence of profound disgust with the Republican platform. The break is the Northwest is much more plain and certain than the one discovered by Mr. Landis in West Virginia. THERE is great interest in the military spectacies now being furnished by Italy fo

the entertainment of the German emperor because they afford a measure of Italy's war strength and arouse the suspicion that the kaiser is not appraising it for nothing. He has reviewed armies and fleets and noted the pride of Italians in both and the national spirit that has revived in that old country. Italy has been spending great sums on her navy, and that is Germany's weak point, so that the young king must have gazed with satisfaction upon the imposing naval demonstration at Naples when "the most powerful fighting ship of modern times" was launched by a government that would be eager to aid him in a war with France. That power has a strong navy and is constantly at work making it stronger. If Italy and I rance can match power on the ocean the odds will bardly be as overwholming against the latter as at first appears, for with that minute attention to detall and scientific accuracy which has always characterized the French they have organize I and perfected their army and weapons until the whole nation is now a splendid military machine. If it should appear that they have not lost the military virtues of their fathers another great war may work he fall fall of German de general tottering of thrones that must follow a triumph of the republic. The much talked of German military reforms aim chiefly at a lightening of the equipment while the French have devoted more attention to the perfection of weapons. 350,000 Lebel ritles are now being issued to the French army. They are lighter and of smaller calible than the other leading magiz ne rifles and measure over the sword bayonet 4 feet 3% inches and weigh 9% pounds with eight cartridges in the magazine. "Its ammunition produces no smoke, and the report of its detonation can scarcely be heard, consequently the position of the party on the defensive is not betrayed." If all of this, and particularly the last point about smoke and noise, is true the military efficiency of the French has been enormously increased.
