The Daily Intelligencer.

LANCASTER, NOVEMBER 6, 1858,

Their Little Whistle. The Republicans manage fairly well to ep up their show of confidence in the alt, notwithstanding all the signs of political weather are against them; when the politicians are brought to he test of putting up their money, they how much weakness in their knees. They do not like to wager their money. though they have no scruples against betting upon which to place their reluctonce. There is something in the air which deprives them of the appetite for betting. It is a new situation for them. This generation does not recollect the time when the Republican betting man was not up with the lark in the morning and abroad with the owl at night, seeking his prey. It is very aggravating to him that ventures occasionally a timid wager, based only upon his hope that Chairman Quay will see the party through with the abundant money he has fried out of its frightened manufacturers.

There is not another thing in the situation to support the Republicans' hope; and upon this miserable reliance they must be content to rest. Chairman Quay will bea bigger man than anyone else in the party, if his party achieves success with all the chances against it; and there will not be a hole too small for him to crawl into if it fails. Such is the difference between success and failure, in this funny world of ours; which will hall Harrison, too, as a great man if he is elected, and if he is beaten will rate him as the respectable old mediocrity that he really is. It is well for a man to be a candidate for president, while he is a candidate; but it is very unwholesome for his repute to be a beaten candidate.

It takes a good man to stand the strain of that trial; to go under and swim ashore takes stout muscle. We are sorry for Harrison. He had a grandfather, who was elected and then died. The grandson was nominated on the theory that election runs in the family; but they misunderstood it; it was death that was the family trait.

We have deep confidence that Harrison's election is an impossibility. There never has been a time when it was possible, and we had but to await the coming of election day to be sure that there was nothing hidden in the womb of futurity to bring it about. The day has come, and every breeze that has blown has been strong and mighty against Republican Buccess.

. To-night our readers may seek their couches early and wait contentedly for the news of the morrow, though we do not suppose they will do it. The news from New York city, doubtless, they will want before they will be easy. There is every prospect that it will be good ; but should the majority in the city be less than sanguine expectations looks for, as it may well be, our confidence in the final result will not be at all shaken. It is written that the Democratic ticket is to-day elected, and upon that faith we rest.

The Fashlon In New York.

Ever since A. T. Stewart, the great New York merchant, died, the lawyers have had a feast upon his estate; but there is one of the fraternity who early fastened upon nearly the whole body of it. and has enjoyed the body to this day. His name is Hilton-Judge Hilton. When Mr. Stewart died he was acting as his confidential adviser. The business passed into his hands. Mrs. Stewart took the stocks, bonds and real estate. Hilton managed them for her. After ten years or so she died; and after awhile her heirs began hunting up her estate, which seems to have disappeared under Hilton's hands. An expert accountant has been going over the books for the past summer, and is now giving in evidence the result of his examination.

He finds that Hilton as boss partnerin A. T. Stewart & Company's business, had some eight millions of the concern as his interest; and that upon this he received interest, commission upon insurance of its marine risks, and commissions upon guarantees of its accounts, beside his share of the profit; so that in a few years he got the profit the concern made and then wound it up with some fifteen millions to his credit.

He found also that he loaned Mrs. Stewart money, that good lady continually living beyond her income and running several millions behind her annual income in her annual expenditure during her ten years solitary course of life after her husband's death and when manned by Hilton. She owed that interesting and affluent gentlemen six millions when she finally slipped her cables and left his company.

The amiable Hilton having kept both sides of his account with Mrs. Stewart had only himself to blame if the balance was not satisfactory to him. He is not the one complaining. Mrs. Stewart's heirs are doing all of that. One thing they object to is his charging payments to Mrs. Stewart's account with interest, but omitting to credit with interest on payments by her. But this is the fashion of the New York fluancier : we even knew one to charge his client with interest upon the interest payments made him upon his own money.

The Supreme Issue.

The New York World grows thoughtful over the spectacle of thousands "of full grown men shouting no free trade over a proposition to reduce a war tariff of 47 per cent. to an average of 42 per cent., with the free list extended only 100 articles, and more than 3,000 left subject to the highest duties in the world! And this is the end of a "campaign of education." The World need not be sad, for the end is not yet; and no matter how this election may go, the campaign of education will continue. The spectacle referred to only shows how badly such a campaign has been needed. Foreigners have been greatly impressed with the interest that has been shown by large masses of the people in a question of political sconomy; that has been thought too dry and prosy. Royalists and aristocrats have argued that a republic must fail when confronted with problems like this requiring thought and reading for solution, but we have shown them that an educated nation, ruling itself with dignity and forethought, is a possibility, and even if the decision of the ballots to-day should present the abourd spectacle of a people veting unwill only show the conservative and cau. 65c. Scarce; desirable, and tious instincts of the voters, and indicate that they want more time for thought. It must be confessed that the simplicity of the question before them hardly justifies the least hesitation in an answer. The voters ought to know by this time what free trade is and what a war tariff is, and they should be able to see that the shortest road to free trade is by way of that war tariff advocated by the Republican party. If they persist in going to the one extreme, reaction will drive them to the other. The nation will, we believe, choose the only logical and sa'e course, the cautious revision of the tariff advocated by the Democratic party. Such an issue of this struggle would be a glorious triumph for free institutions.

THERE is an office begging in Washington which twelve appointees have refused It is that of type-writer in the bureau o steam engineering, salary $900. In the naval war record office nine ladies have retused a $750 office. The trouble appears to be that the class of work required commands a better salary.

THE average clergyman has had no little friction with the struggling world that he is hardly competent to judge of the motives and character of the people he meets, tu: there may be exceptions and the chaplain of Stafford prison, who writes the following to the London Daily Telegraph, appears to be one of them.

As a prison chaplain of nearly twelve years' standing, I claim to speak with some authority on the point, and I say unhesitatingly that II a society for the manufacture of criminals were set on foot, that society could in no better way further its ends than by pressing for the imprisonment of every little boy and girl who could, on any decent pretext, be brought before a bench of magistrates.

Clearly the prison avaitem over there is Clearly the prison system over there is not altogether beautiful and prisons in general appear to be well devised for the manufacture of criminals. The question is what are we going to do about it? Wanted a social economist to devise something perfect for the management of all grades of riminals from the boy who steals an apple to the broker who steams a railroad,

It is probable that the next Congress will be strongly urged to furnish modern vessels for the training school of the navv. but if the revival of our merchant marine can be stimulated the training ships need only be used to give finishing touches to the education gained upon the decks of cosan steamers. They will then be the smaller cruisers and gunboats of the navy equipped thoroughly with the most elaborate devices of medern warfare. The old ships now used for training boys for the navy are very different from the vessels that these boys will be required to work and fight on, and if we can not have a merchant marine we mus have special school ships. Commodore W. S. Schley will suggest in his forthcoming report that accommodation should be mad for 2,000 boys. He would like to send al of the vessels out on a roving commission, enlisting boys at the sea ports. He is also anxious to secure boys from the Pacific slope. The establishment of direct commerce with South and Central America would avert the necessity for any artificial factory for seamen.

WANAMAKER'S

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1888. Store open all day as usual.

When Low Price and High Quality set the pace there's sure to be a quick stepping business. Such a combine don't come from haphazard buying or selling. There must be thought and know-how behind it all.

Look through the store. There isn't a counter-spot that isn't made specially interesting for you in some way.

A Suiting stuff that's never gone for less than 75c; that would be a lively seller at 75c. The price is 50c, the width 50 inches. Every thread fine wool. Clean, no grease. Nothing in it that oughtn't to be there. In half-a-dozen quiet mixtures. Southeast of centre.

One of the toughest stuffs you'll come across. Hard, wiry, springy to the touch, and yet soft and yielding enough to drape gracefully. For knockabout wear, but neat and modest. We never heard of it for less than 371/2c. The price today is 25c. In checks and small plaids, dark effects.

In all the crowded Dress Goods there's no kind completer in its way than stuffs for Second Mourning. They are at the Black Goods counter, a storeful by themselves. We have given more thought to them than ever. More styles, more that are very modest priced. Half-a-dozen to set you thinking of all:

Serge, broken hair-line cluster stripes, 50c, four styles. Serge, graduated cluster

50-inch Serge, 2 styles, hairlines 1/4 and 1/2 inches apart,

WANAMAKERB worth 75c as the market goes. 52-inch cloth in checks and plaids, 75c; 4 styles. A little finer, $1. Stripes, ombre stripes and checks, with plain to match, 85c.

We told you the other day how Camel Hairs have again come to be one of the most fashionable Blacks for ladies wear. The genuine Camel Hair softens and betters with use almost to the end. How shall you know the genuine? Buy of a reputable dealer. Then you're safe; his guarantee will be behind it. If you wish to lean on your own wit, here's a hint: They say real Camel Hair—the hanging hairs—takes a jet black, while the blackest of the make-believes has a grayish cast.

Six or eight qualities of Black Dress Goods that have been 65 to 75c go down to 5oc. Stripes, plaids, fancy weaves and plain. Ends of lots, and yet a bit too big to be bundled off to the Remnant counter.

Northwest of centre. Because Jewelry is mostly extravagant is no reason the prices should be. Why should't Diamonds and Watches and the golden bits and ornaments that almost everybody likes in one shape or another be had just as other merchandise? A little corner of a little counter used to do for our lewelry and such like things. We have added and added. Never space enough for the busy times. Jewelry without extravagance ! Where else do you hear it?
