LAWCASTER, NOVEMBER 8, 1888.

Looking for the Cause. though Chairman Brice prudently her to yield New York until the count is in, there does not seem to oh room for doubt that it has been by a small plurality for the Rean national ticket and the Demostate ticket. Indiana is also ally Republican. The president, to spaper reporter, expresses his belief the election is against him, and Thurman declares the same; and may settle down now to this opinion.

The president said to the reporter that not his defeat, but the defeat of the les of the party that he reprented; and this is true; but that party er his leadership, and that it met defeat because of misconception the ws which he impressed upon its standwill hardly be questioned.

Ir. Cleveland came up to the meeting Congress one year ago with a solid with an opposition that had no ing cry or policy. It was unarmed ad helpless. He gave them arms and issue. He made the tariff question s issue, upon which the national ion would be decided, just eleven onths before that election was to take see. The courage of this movement as unquestioned; its policy was greatly loubted.

It seemed unnecessary to start this new se, upon which to fight the impending residential battle, when the Democratic orces were in good condition for the contest and needed no new weapon. But it was said that, though it might be pore prudent political policy to avoid new issue, there was absolute necessity or finding a remedy for the gorged state of the treasury ; and that a recommendation of tariff amendment was incumbent pen the president.

With his duty manifest, Mr. Clevead was not the man to quail before it; nd the responsibility for introducing he issue of the tariff into the campaign upon the situation rather than upon him. The only mistake that he can be rged with making was in the manner of the introduction. What was needed was tariff reduction; and if this had been mmended so as to show that object was simply to reduce redundant revenue and do without dwelling upon the abstract benefits of the policy of free trade, which is a condition to which the nation is consedly not adapted, it is not likely that the recommendation would have been ded with political disaster.

The mistake made was wholly in the sanner in which the necessary tariff reluction was introduced to the people and the opportunity given to the alert litical opponent to misrepresent it as a solley of free trade. That was the first ession given of the new Democratic olicy; and the efforts of our congresssuspicion of it through the president's

There never was any reason to doubt that this would be a political injury to the Democratic party in the East; but the confident expectation has been that it might profit it in the agricultural West and Northwest. This theory seems to have been a delusion. The West does not seem to have gravitated toward the Democracy; por the East to have gone strongly inst it. A condition of political paralvsis seems to have ruled and to have kept the parties in pretty much the place they held four years ago. The change has not been great; which has been a ocratic calamity, as the party should being in power, have greatly increased Its strength throughout the coun-Ly. It seems to have stood still the natural gravitation of votes towards it as been stopped; and the decision of a great national contest has been again made by a handful of voters in a single tate; a majority undoubtedly bought. For it is another feature of this conthat immense sums of money have on spent in it. Money and management decided it. It is Quay's victory. The parties were brought close enough by the doubt of the Democracy's good faith in its declaration in favor of protection to industry, to enable the Republican chairman to buy a victory with to fry abundantly out of manufacturers Our view.succinctly stated, is that a sus delon of free trade tendency, based upon he description in the president's message of the injury of high protection and supported by the crazy applause of free trade by democratic Wattersons, came in check the strong tide which had set in among the intelligent voters of the country, especially in the Eastern states, loward the Democratic party, by reason of the clean and capable adminstration given to the affairs of he country by its great president; ed that there was no time to educate people up to renewed confidence in party and its doctrine, before the section day came and brought opporunity to the unscrupulous enemy to sther the millions of the frightened canufacturers that enabled it to carry deciding state of New York.

The Napoleon Theirs.

Chairman Quay carries off all the s of this occasion, and has earned sception which the people of Beaver hero on his return to his native ids; and the title which his enthusiastic Madelphia, "the Napoleon of Amerisirman Brice is not a Napoleon. is a broad suspicion that Chairman is a failure in the field of American And the wonder is as to how he the field marshal's hat; nobody ever before of Brice as a manager of thing but railroads, and as a rich man. was a rumor that he declared that had complete was worth. But it seems to have been a mistake. We note that Judge Thurman says that with the money that he and Brice asked for, but did not get, they would have carried Ohio; which does not look as if Brice was doing all the paying himself. He may be a very good man though not a Napoleon; in fact Napoleons are not good men.

Business and the Flection.

Stocks opened strong on Wednesday morning, but were soon depreased by news indicating that the result of the election was still in doubt. Republican papers attribute the rise and fall to the effect of Republican success and misfortune, but the thoughtful citizen knows that the fact that the agony is over is enough to cause a revival of stocks and general brightening up of business. There may be sober times ahead of the stock market and the business world, if Republican president should make any serious attempt to order his administration upon the platform of his party.

The present administration averted : terrible financial convulsion last year by magnificent handling of its powers, but if from the same causes of the drain of excessive taxation and the dangers of a surplus a similar emergency should arise, we will be at the mercy of untried financiers hampered by principals not practical. They may be able to meet the test, but the experiment will probably be expensive. Adversity is said to be the best educator, and perhaps a little education of this kind may prove more efficient than a campaign of intellect.

GENERAL BENET, chief of ordnance, discusses in a forthcoming report the Label bility of adopting a magazine rifle of small calibre for our own army and malitis. It seems that the important feature of the French arm is the powder used. The French minister of war has made no serious attempt to conceal the mechanism of the weapon, but great precautions have been taken to keep the secret of the peculiar explosive used. "It is known to produce no smoke, little noise and a slight recoil, all of which qualities are admirable. To these It adds that of giving an extraordinary muzzle velocity and range, as its oft-quoted penetrative effects have indicated. But of the powder that produces these effects it is only vaguely stated that it is probably a compound of gun cotton and collection General Benet is in favor of a small calibre arm, whether or not it is a magazine gun ; but he shows quite plainly that until some thing like the French powder can be used we should do nothing, as the character of the whole weapon must be accommodated to the force used.

A rew lone leaves are quivering in the lalo, Our new blown hope is shivering at the gain Of Harrison in Gotham. The day is chrocless and the sky is gray, men, our newspapers and our orators, enforced by presidential interpretation, have since been assiduously given to correcting this first impression and to convincing the voters that the Democratic policy is not one of absurd free trade, but of smple protection. There is nothing that the beanse of the country rejects more decidedly and properly than the policy of free trade, and it was a great calamity that the Democratic party came under that the Democratic party came under that the Democratic party came under the policy of the months in Europe wearing a cardigan

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

PRILADELPRIA, Thursday, Nov. 8, 1888. In Dress Goods the charm of cheerfulness comes close to the matter of fact. Soft, warm shades that lean lovingly against the light, and prices that taper toward the vanishing point. That line of fifty-centers we pointed out the other day tells the story as well as any. Some of these goods would cost us more than 50 cents a yard to-day.

Of these all-wool, good weight half-dollar Dress Stuffs there are more than 250 styles and colorings - Serges, Foules, Cloths, and Tricots.

Look at one. A Suiting stuff that's never gone for less than 75c. Every thread of fine wool. Soft, firm, and in half-adozen modest mixtures. 50 inches wide, 50 cents! Think of an ample dress pattern, choice in every way, for $3!

outheast of centre. Have you picked out the Hat yet? Just as well choose from every going sort as from two or three kinds. A Hat store with clear, bright light in every corner of it isn't the place for cheats. It's in a dingy, dismal, dungeony room that quality and color can limp without your suspecting it. There isn't a lighter Hat store than ours, or one better filled or with fairer prices. Very likely you've never seen another where light, stock, and cost were all so far your way. Phirteenth and Market streets.

We've let a good part of the season slip without a word for Dress Trimmings. You take them for granted. Think of whatever the proper caper is in Haberdashery and you know where to go for it. If you don't know, there's one certain place to find out. We counted Buttons the other day, just the new Butt ns in metal, ivory, pearl, jet, and crochet; 1,349 styles. Skipped a little myriad of other sorts.

Just so with Braids and Gimps and Cords and Fringes and all the Garniture brood.

We are bringing these things in all the time from wherever they are best made. Of course some extreme things are every now and then getting just a trifle out of the swim. When they drop a little behind the current we fish them out and quicken the prices. To day the knife marks are on a lot of Soutache and President Braid Gimps. They are at one level price-25c. A year ago the same qualities were 75c.

No day but you're likely to find something that you'll look at as half a gift. Northeast of centre.

The price-hurried Laces went out with a jump yesterday.

We have twice as much salesspace for it as last year. That means the fullest possible comfort in buying. Some popular lines are one-third and onehalf last season's prices.
