O tender songs:

Heart-beavings of the breast that longs
Its best-beloves to meet:
You tell of love's delightful bours,
Of meetings amid jasmine bowers,
And yows, like perfume of young flowers,
As fleeting-bul in me sweet.

O glorious souge ! That rouse the brave 'gainst tyrant wrongs Resounding near and far; Mingled with trumpet and with drum, Your spirit-stirring summons come, To urge the hero from his home, And arm him for the war.

O montriful songs!
When Sorrow's host, in gloomy througs,
Arsall the widowed heart; You sing in softly soothing strain,
The praise of those whom death has taken,
And tell that we shall meet again,
And meet no more to part.

Of lovely songs—
Brea hiegs of heaven! to you belongs
The empire of the beart.
Enthroued in memory, still reign
O'er minds of prince and peer and swain,
With gen!le power that b nows not wane
Til thought and life depart.
—Thomas Dermedy.
