LANCASTER, DECEMBER 12 1805

The Polecat. ator Ingalis, after several days ren, prints a statement in reply to Whitney's suggestion that he shably was the author of the false out the president and his wife. had this suspicion because of his known ill feeling toward the presiand his equally well demonstrated alty of disposition. Mrs. Whitney Togalis as a brute, and concluded the mysterious assaults on the presi-ential household, which nobody apred to father, would naturally come

In his reply, meditated upon so long, he s not been successful in removing this ion, but he deepens it. He says deed, that Mrs. Whitney is mistaken d that she only dares to make the herge against him under the protection ber sex. He finds that the president s inspired her letter and declares that bas no more ill will against him than he has against the yellow fever; and that weapons are those of the gladiator ad not of the assassin. And then he at ace proceeds to prove his hatred of the dent and his assassin-like character declaring that he heard months ago e stories Mrs. Whitney talks about, and others much worse, which time and events alone can verify or disprove; and be affirms that "if the partisans of he executive are wise they will be silent." Thus clearly intimating that the tales are true. He then slobbers laudation upon the president's wife, and concludes with a declaration that his need deny the accusations leveled against him, shows the president to be guilty.

If that statement from the Kansas senator does not justify Mrs. Whitney in pouncing upon him as the polecat in the case, we are mistaken. He is the only person so far discovered, since Mrs. Whitney's letter who has ventured to affirm the truth of the tales that she depounced as utterly false; and which he even says are mild compared to some he knows of. He will find it bard to show how he can make such a declaration, relterating slanders which he has declared that only an "assassin would atter," while vowing that he does not use the assassin's weapons. His statement proves him to be guilty of such methods, just so far as it intimates the truth of the allegations against the president. The Kansas senator shows his malice and his stupidity at once. It is strange indeed that a man capable of so deliberately writing himself down an ass can occupy the president's seat in the Senate of the United States. But the lesson he teaches is that station does not adorn or elevate the man. The high place he occupies is to him a pillory. It exposes him to the people as a despicable little creature, who is not only mean and spiteful, but who is unable to conceal from sight and smell his contemptible qua ities.

The Senate Debate.

A fresh gladiator has appeared on the Democratic side of the Senate debate upon the tariff, who not only knows ething about the question be discusses but has a proper appreciation of the posision of the Democracy upon it. Senator since the Republican party had obtained control of the government, it was the duty of its representatives to endeavor to legislate for the good of the country; and he wanted to know how the senator proposed to reach this and by driving through the bill he had reported by the solid Republican vote, without discussion, and without yielding in the least to the manifestly proper amendments offered from the Democratic side. Senator Allison replied that he did not propose to act in any such way ; and when Senator Gorman reminded him that Senator Sherman had declared that the bill should go through as the committee had reported it, he replied that the committee itself was aware that it needed amendment; thereby intimating that Senator Sherman had been very unnecessarily eager to abrogate his duty as a senstor, to offer such amendments to proposed legislation as he should think proper. Senator Gorman declared that they were ready, on his side of the Senate, to help to perfect the bill and to vote for such rates of duty as "to show that protection to American industry, to the full extent of providing for the difference in cost of labor here and elsewhere, would be favored by it; but it would oppose the unduly high rates offered by this bill as tending to build up monopolies even beyond anything that had been dreamed of even in war times." He charged that the bill had been framed for party purposes in the election ; and that now, the election being over, the Senate should legislate for the country and the exorbitant duties proposed in the bill should be re. duced. Senator Allison, while denying that the bill had been framed for party purposes, declared his desire that it should be considered carefully, and his willingness that it should be amended properly.

The discussion put a new phase on the appearance of the debate. Senator Sperman's declaration that the bill should go through as presented by the committee was promptly buried from sight; along with Sherman. Senator Allison, who had been driving the bill through with a solid Republican vote, Sook a reef in his sails ; and accepted an amendment reducing the duty on steel beams to a cent a pound, after Secator Harris' amendment of six-tenths as is the Mills bill, had been rejected, Shat was undoubtedly too low a figure; shough a cent seems to be as much too high. We do not understand that it s steel beam makers require a higher duty than eight-tenths of a cent a pound to adequately protect their manufacture and to give them the home market at a tair profit. But the adoption of this dment shows that the Senate Raablicans are willing to concede (cme) blog; and that the Democratic Sersesecuring proper rates of duty in the bill.

More Removals.

It is said that Mr. Randall proposes fo ident's appointment of a successor to Daily Intelligencer. surprised at this, and consider it a very proper movement by Mr. Randall. If there is good reason for the removal of the Philadelphia appraiser and his a seistant it should be at once made known. At present the very general belief is that no such reason exists, and with this impression the removals are not popularly approved and the Senate may reasonably be asked not to approve them. We consider it quite the most silly thing that has been done under this administration, which has very seldom done a foolish thing; and we cannot believe that the president took hand in it with knowledge. The best track to take upon it is the back track. The removals should be cancelled.

THE Christmas number of that excellent dramatic paper, the New York Mirror, which stands at the front among journals of its kind, has made its appearance. For years the paper has been putting out beautiful holiday editions, but the one of this year is better than ever. There are this year is better than ever. There are thirty-five pages in the paper. It is brim full of the most interesting reading matter, with first-class pictures of leading actors and actresses. Among the contributors to the handsome number are prominent members of the theatrical profession and others. Some of these are William Winter, Harrison Grey Fiske, editor of the Mirror; Joseph Howard, Jr., William Gillette, Ed. Ha-rigan, Herrman, Howard Paul Nym Crinkie, Milton Nobles, Tony Pastor, Fanny Rice, Estella Ciayton, Kate Claxton, Florence Marryatt, Roelna Vokes and others. With the paper a beautiful sup-plement is given bearing a copy of Virgil Tojette's famous painting "In the Wings."

THE oyster pirates have stoutly resisted the law stuce the dredging began this year, The result of Monday night's battle demonstrated that the police power is going to provail the balance of the fishing season. And so it should. The owners of oyster beds must not be robbed, even if the entire police force of Maryland has to be invoked Capture and punishment of a part of the army of pirates will probaby break up the band of outlaws.

THE New York Board of Trade gets into a ferment overy year about this time, over the defenses of that port from the rayages of foreign navies in the event of war, and it is soon to be silrred up to consider a plan for the establishment of a state naval militia force. Rear Admiral Roe has submitted a plan which suggests that the several sea coast states should build a war ship spices, to be armed and officered by the eneral government, and used as training ships. Each ship is to hold 100 men from 16 to 25 years of age, without any educational limits whatever. This first would then turn out every two years one thoueand men well fitted for the pavy. As an improvement on this plan, it is suggested that the oyster dredgers of the Chesapeake, the pir who have defied the power of the state navy of Maryland, would make as good material for our navy as could be found. A cruiser should be sent among them, not for conquest, but for recruits.

GENERAL SCHOFIELD has announced that at the close of each year hereafter, commencing with 1889, an order will be published " making mention of gallant or specially meritorious acts or conduct in service on the part of either commissioner otheses or enlisted men of the army, and containing the names of those who have received medals of honor and certificates of merit." He directs that whenever any service is performed in a way conspicuous for skill, courage or gallantry a full report of the facts shall be promptly made by any officer who knows them. It has long been a matter for regret that we have in our army absolutely no provision for the recognition of services of this kind and not only have the most conspisuous deeds of gallantry passed warded, but often unknown outside of the army. Our Indian wars seem to be pretty well over, and many a thrilling example of devotion to duty has been lost sight of Possibly the future historian will give all his space to the brave resistance of the noble red man with never a line for the soldiers who had to perform the dangerous and disagreeable duty of knocking poor Lo on the head every time he stood up for his rights and his whisky. The Indian has been abused by himself, and by others quite as bad as he is, but the people have feit so shamed by the Indian business that they have not given credit to the troops on the frontier who are expected to obey orders blindly and put down every uprising that may be pro. voked by the mismanagement of agents or others, or by the rescality of land grabbers and speculators. This idea of a roll of honor will give an annual record of interest and value and will doubtless help to make the men eager and daring in their work. We should have something in this country like the British Victoria cross, a decoration given by the highest power in the land for the reward of actions of the most remarkable and rare bravery.

THE Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger warmiy praises President Cleveland for the selections of officers from the line of the army for promotion to staff corps. About 200 officers were seeking for the appointments just made, but the president made his selections regardless of influence or "pressure," and all officers chosen show over 20 years service with their regiments. "President Cleveland has not, during his term, appointed a single civilian to the army, nor has he pro-moted an officer by "jumping" him over the grade next above that which he held at the time of promotion. Mr. Cleveland carried this principle so far that he steadily refused to appoint young men from civil conscientiously reserving these vacancies, as the law requires, for the graduates of the military academy, and for such meritorious non-commissioned officers as were recommended for promotion, and he is the only president who has done this."

"Diseases, desperate grown, by desperate appliances are relieved or not at all." The roots of wisdom is to check them before they reach so far by onying a bottle of faivation Oil. Price 2 cents.
