e quiet day in Winter beauty eleces, nd sunset clouds are tinged with orimee

dys, As if the blush so of our faded roses Onne back to tlat this sombre Christmas

A lonely crow floats o'er the upland ranges, A robin carols from the chestant tree; The voice that changes not awill our changes Sounds faintly from the melancholy sea. We sit and watch the twilight darken slowly Lies the last gleam upon the lone hillside, And in the stillness, growing deep and hely, Our Christmas guests come in this eventude.

They enter softly ; some with baby face,
Whose sweet bine eyes have coarcely looked on life;
We bid them welcome to their vacant places;
They wen the peace, and never know the atr.fe.

And some with steadfast glances most us Their hands point backward to the paths they trod; Dear ones, we know how long ye struggled And gled upon the battle-f. ld of God!

And some are here whose patient souls were By our hard words, and looks of cold die

Brother, Comes to His birthday feast with us to-night. Thou Who wast born and cradled in a manger Hast gladdened our poor earth with hope and rest;
O best beloved, come not as a stranger
But t-rry, Lord, our friend and Christmas guest.

-From Good Words.

SANTA CLAUS MESSAGE A little maid with looks of gold, and eyes of heaven's own blue, I spied as on one evening cold The town I wandered through!

I said unto myself, What prize Upon this maid bestow, That I may see the merry eyes Lit up with simple glow?

1'll send her gifts both rich and rare, From friends I'll greeting bring, And all these tokens of my oure With love and joy shall ring And so when Willie breaks the toy

But "Ill have another one. "And Santa Claus will bring some, too For Willie-then I know

He will not (as I've seen him do) Treat my own playthings so! For oh! those baby fingers' grasp

Have often made me cry, as from his eager little clasp as vain to wrest I'd try. He breeks my dolls, dear 'Banta,' see

He tears my books, and now, I cannot arep my tops or be Ab. little maid, your griefs are deep.

Your little heart is tried; But soon upon the roof-tree steap Old Saats U aus will ride! And down the chimney wide he'll spring,

And to your stocking steal, Till, when you see the gifts he'll bring, Your wounds will quickly heal! so, little maid with golden hair and eyes of heaven's own blue,

I send you now a Christmas fair,
And now a greeting true?
