Differing Stories. tatement that he died of apoplexy sitted to have been made out of the cloth. The second story, that he ted suicide, is probably equally he third tale, that he was shot by an husband, has about it the greatest of of probability, and we may believe it to be about the truth. It is not likely that the heir to the Austrian throne rould slay himself, to accommodate an in-mod humband, who gave him his choice streen suicide and a duel. It is not a thely choice for the heir to an empire to ave presented for his consideration ; and a would have been in order for Rudolph to have any such troublesome fellow looked

Of course if the crown prince had been It unsound mind he might have been out any reason at all; but then the would not be necessary to induce a woman into the case to acount for the tragedy. We have always neerstood that Rudolph was a particularly bright and dashing prince. There tiess is insunity in his family, and pliepsy that leads to it; but he was riusane nor epileptic. He was a very gay Lothario and only thirty years old. pretion and wisdom at that age; and Rudolph was busily sowing his wild oats. After a while he would possibly have become a good man and would have died in the fullness of years, a pillar of the church. Men are apt to become plous with age; perhaps because they bene sensible, or perhaps because they get scared. Rudolph at thirty was not thinking of futurity, but of his friend's wife and his friend's wife doubtless shot him ; and thereby if he was an Austrian was hardly a patriot; because Rudolph's life seems to have been necessary for the preservation of the empire. It falls spart at the death of the emperor, whose maining child, a daughter, cannot ascend its throne, but will take that of Hungary away from Austria. There does not seem to be any promising successor to the Austrian throne to be found among the royal family. Epilepsy sorely afflicts the nephew who is the probeble successor of the emperor; a disease long prevalent in the Hapsburg

The public is being reminded just now by the newspapers of the physical and mental weakness of the Euro pean royal houses, which is charged to their long inter-marriage. Doubtless the inter-marriage of relatives filioted with constitutional disease destructive to their families but so would be the inter-marriage of families afflicted with like diseases, whether related or not. It does not seem to be the relation that is injurious. but the intensifying of inherited weak-Whatever the cause, it seems to the fact that the royal families of Europe are not in good physicondition. They will probalast as long as they are wanted, which perhaps will not be very long, the tendency of the age being toward democracy. England's government is really democratic, and its royal; house but an expensive ornament, which the nation will hardly pay for much longer. France is out of the royalty busi ness, and seems bound to always hover between a democracy and a popular dictator. Germany, after Bismarck, may be any thing; and the Russia czarship will soon go begging, if the place does not grow pleasanter to fill, as the years pass on.

Moderating. Bismarck has shorn something from the war proclamation of his representa-Sives in Samoa; he has directed that the foreign residents shall not come under the amation of martial law and that the German consul shall not consider himself the absolute ruler of the islands. But we do not see that he has abated his hostility to the islanders or withdrawn his proclamation of war against them. How he proposes to carry on the war without coming in collision with this nation, does not appear. But as it is evident that the German officers in Samoa have been seting upon their own discretion and that they do not have the entire support of the home government, there is good reason to believe that an amicable understanding will be reached by Germany and the United States. No one can believe that Germany desires trouble in a distant portion of the earth, and with the United States, at a time when she needs to husband her resources and her strength for the conflict that is generally believed to await her at any early day in Europe. The German interests in Samoa ere too trifling to fight for. Her reprecontativas there have shown that they are quite willing to take what they can get by bluster and intimidation. A German trading firm is said to carry the strman power in its pocket; it is this concern probably which has been issuing the proclamations, making the noise and achting the natives. But when it comes to fighting the United States, the German chancellor will quickly let the German merchants drop.

Cider in Verment.

For the benefit of our correspondents who have lately been troubled over the intoxicating quality of cider, we repeat the statement of Mr. W. E. Nicholson, seeds to the New York Tribune in a letter from Rutland, Vermont, which shows that eider is permitted to be made and drank in that prohibition state, notwithstanding its conceded ability to make the drinker drunk. The Vermont hw, however, carefully prohibits "traffic eider at places of public resort and to habitual drunkards." Cider may not be sold at a church may be held therein and the good end would justify the pious churchmen in making proit out of the weakness of the Vermont stomach for the juice of the apple. Mr. Nicholson announces himmaif as a flery prohibition law. He also avows that he places not the best at the places not the best at place and sinter; at their deaths the following bequeuts become operative: Evangelical Lutheran church of the Holy communion, $10,000; Orphane' Home and Asylum for the Aged and Infirm of the Evangelical Lutheran church of Germantown, $10,000; Penneyivania Hoppital for Insane, $10,000; Philadelphia Home for Insane, $10,000; Philadelphia Home for Insane, $10,000; Orphane' Home for Insane, $10,000; Orp for instance, unless perchance when a fair low Prohibitionists of Vermont shows how the most virtuous resolution to preserve the strictest consistency is apt to be overthrown by the weakness of the flesh. These Prohibitionists of Vermont, who do not care for whisky and beer, but dissipate on coffee and tea, and shudder at alcohol, shut their eyes to it in cider, because they so dearly love the appetizing old Vermont apple juice.

Our esteemed cotemporary, the Lancaster Inquirer, calls the Bible "an old chestnut." The Inquirer is for prohibition; and as the Bible is not on that side, it finds it to be so much worse for the Bible. The Christian prohibitionisi—if there can be such a crea-ture—wonders every moment how it can be that his Lord drank wine; and when he drinks,it himself in communion he does not seem to know it; such is his state of mental decrepitude.

GERMANY has balted for the present in her mad colonial career, but it may be interesting to note what might happen if we should plunge into hostilities with the German empire over the Samoan question, the great American pig or any other grand lesue. China is giving indications of resent-ment at the rough handling of the exclusion ment at the rough handling of the excitation business by the Senate, sud It has been intimated that Congress may soon have to consider very serious news from that part of the world. The temper of Canada on consistency may bind a Republican admin-istration to continue that provoking enarl. A France German war threatens darkly, and the Samoan business may make us the natural ally of France; it will not be the first time that we have fought together for freedom. By letting Canada go England could and probably would keep out of the row and without considering our northern neighbor, with whom we would hope for partingle between America and France on the one aide and Germany and possibly Italy on the other. National sym-pathies might suggest a very different arrangement, but we don't quarrel on a would probably pair off and glare at one another in a state of armed neutrality. There would be a tremendous paval struggle between Italy and France; a more of French and Germans. Meanwhile we would rush ahead with the building of a navy and be all ready to fight on a large scale by the time the trouble was all over. On a smaller scale, however, we could hold our own and take care of Samos if France could only manage to keep Italy in the Mediterranean and hold the strongest Serman ships away from us. Perhaps we might be able to get a score of regiments soroes the ocean ferry in time to help the French on land, but in any European was our chief exertion must be naval.

WE publish as a supplement to-day if chapters of the book "Jonathan and His Continent," by Max O'Rell, The appearance of this book is generally regarded as literary even', and though many readers will find points to criticise, and at times be at a loss whether to take the author seriously or not, the work as a whole will be found pleasant reading, and there is not often pleasure in trying to see ourselves as

In 1873 General Grant was so Impressed with the abuitties of Albert Barnes Stein. berger, of Pennsylvania, the son of an iron master who had falled in business, that he sent him to Samoa, to report on the measures necessary to stimulate our trade. Steinberger found Malietos, the king who was afterwards stolen by the Germans, struggling with Topus for the Samoan throne and he managed very speedily to have the bust-He produced and catablished a constitution providing for short term kings to be chosen from the seven great chiefs and a premier. he was also chief justice. He only remained in Samoa for a year, however, as the founding of empires had not been a his return he submitted a report which was only excelled as a work of art by the stories he told of his adventures. While living by his wits in Baltimore he received a message from a Hamburg firm, asking how much he would take to come over and give them information about Samoan trade. He replied $5,000 and expenses, was told to come, and was sent to Samoa to represent the powerful trading firm of J. Caesar Godfrey & Co. John H. Latrobe, of Baltimore, went with him, and a dinner was given to them in Baltimore before salling, at which General Grant, Mayor Latrobe and other noted men were present. On his return to Samos 10 was at once made prime minister and appointed John Latrobe chief Justice, and en captain general. Steinberger pursued a Jingo foreign policy, but the commercial interests of the islands prospered amaz-ingly under the administration of the Americans. American Consul Foster, however, didn't approve Steinberger's policy, and was particularly suspicious of the Peerless, the ship that had brought the Pennsylvanian to Samos, and which con-tinued to cruise around the islands. An English man-of war, the Barraceuts, shortly appeared, sent for the express purpose of discovering whether the United wanted to annex Samos, though of course nothing was said about that Captain General Latrobe went aboard one day, gorgeously attired, as became his dignity as the head of the combined military and naval forces of Samos, he wasn't received with much respect by the English captain, Stevens, and not long after General Latrobe had his revenge, when, acting under his orders, two Samoan sentinei stopped Captain Stevens, the British consui, and a lieutenant of the Barraceuta, while they were riding along theroad, and, despite furious English oaths, refused to allow them to proceed further. The matter was reported to Consul Foster, and the first step leading to the downfall of Prime Minister Steinberger was the seizure of his vessel, the Peerless, for violating the law of neutrality by carrying arms. This seizure was made by Consul Foster, with the assistance of Captain Stevens. Early in 1876 Steinberger was seized by a squad of, marines, taken on board the Barracouts, transported to the Fiji islands and turned loose without other capital than his wits. Latrobe then left Samos. Steinberger

How Mr. Gladstone Reads. From the North British Daily Mail.

Mr. Gladstone usually has three books in reading at the same time, and changes from one to the other, when his mind has reached the limit of alsorption. This is a necessary corrective to the tendency to think only of one thing at one time, which sometimes in politics leads him to neglect that all round survey of the situation which is indispensible to a prime minister. During the beginning of the Irish question in 1880, he was so absorbed in the question of the coercion of Turkey that he could hardly be induced to spare a thought for Ireland; now it is just as difficult to get him to think of any political question but that of Ireland. He complains sometimes that his memory is no longer quite as good as it used to be, but although that may be true, it is still twice as good as anybody else's, for Mr. Gladstone has an extraordinary faculty of not only remember, but for forgetting those things it is useless for him to remember. His mind is thus unencumbered with any unnecessary top-hamper, and he can always at a means and the present the present of speak of the property of the present of the property of the present of the pr From the North British Dally Mail. to remember. His mind is thus unencum-bered with any unnecessary top-hamper, and he can always, so to speak, lay his hand upon anything the moment he wants it. This retentive memory was no doubt born with him, but it has been largely developed by the constant habit of taking pains. When he reads a book he does so pencil in hand, marking off on the margin those passages which he wishes to remember, querying those about which he is in doubt and putting a cross opposite those which he disputes. At the end of the volume he constructs a kind of index of his own which enables him to refer to those things he enables him to refer to those things he wishes to remember in the book.

February 1st closes our business year.

The stock account is taken. We stop, we think, scratch our heads for ideas and plunge in the push and drive of another year.

Our energy is increased. Our faith in the old square dealing ways is confirmed. You have confirmed it.

The first month of the calendar year is over. People say it has been a dull month. Not so here. You have believed our announcements. Each special offering of January has brought quick-echoing, greatly increased B. MARTIN & OO.

Perhaps we may have some tales of stock-taking to tell. If we do, we are sure of readers; more than "Robert Elsmere." Excuse the reference for sake of the simile, which is good.

Won't you read for your pocket more than for head or heart?

We think you will. We will supply daily readings in all the papers, which you must not overlook. They will touch your life.

The store is bright and full of things that you want. That's enough to tell to day.

SICK HEADACHE.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams, No. 278 Seventh St., N. Y., testify that they have both been suffering with liver complaint for about five years, during which time they have spent a large amount of money and tried many remedies, but to no purpore. Finally, hearing of the genuine Dr. C. McLane's Liver Fill's prepared by Fleming Bros., Pitusburg, Fa., they purchased four boyes, which they took according to the directions accompanying each box, and now pronounce themselves perfectly cured of that distressing disease.

This is to certify that I have been subject at times to severe headache; sometimes the pain would be so severe I could rest neither day or night. Hearing of the genuine Dr. C. McLane's Liver Fills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pitusburg, Fa., I seat and got a box, or which I took two pills on going to bed, for two nights. They relieved me entirely. Some time has elapsed and I have had no more trouble from sick h adache.
