

FARMERS IN SESSION.

The Third Institute of Lancaster County.

ESSAYS READ AND DISCUSSED.

THE CULTURE OF SORGHUM AND SUGAR BEETS CONSIDERED.

Dr. Matthew Harvey, of Chester, Pa., member of the State Board of Agriculture, Lancaster, Pa., read an essay on the culture of sorghum.

The third annual meeting of the farmers' institute of Lancaster county at Ebleman hall was formally opened at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon with President John H. Leada, of the Agricultural and Horticultural society, in the chair and a good attendance of farmers.

President Leada said he was the third of his kind in Lancaster county to hold a farmers' institute and he hoped it would be a successful one. It is less than half a dozen years ago that the first institute was held in this county.

On behalf of the agricultural society he extended a hearty welcome to all, and hoped that they would be benefited by the interchange of opinion.

Calvin Cooper was appointed secretary of the institute.

HOME ADORNMENT.

"Home Adornment" was the subject of the first essay on the programme, and it was read by M. D. Kendig, of Cresswell. He advocated the planting of trees, vines and shrubs around the house, the keeping of all the buildings in good repair, the field divided and well fenced, and if the house stands back from the road the pathway should be lined with shade trees.

Mr. Baker, of Colorado, said that home adornment is not to do with keeping children at home. He referred to the memories of the old homestead that were revived, when many years after leaving it one returns to see the familiar trees he loved so well as a child.

PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE FARMING.

"American Agriculture, Past, Present and Future" was the subject of an address by Thos. Baker, of Colorado, Colorado township. He said that agriculture always has been and will continue to be the most important vocation of man, because all others depend upon it.

The railroads spanning the continent have brought into the market valuable land. Our sons are anxious to get some of the cheap lands in the West, and the consequence is a depreciation on the value of lands in the East. In 1835 a farmer bought a farm at $15 per acre, and now it is worth $100 that property has depreciated, that it cannot be sold to day for the amount of the mortgage, and the result is that the sheriff will sell that farm.

The labor question never assumed such proportion as at the present time. It must be apparent that the condition of the laboring man is in the East in a deplorable state. We have the result of a mutual adjustment of labor and capital by mutual arbitration. Strikes are totally unworthy of the enlightened age in which we live. The look-out is a degrading method of settling these disputes.

The farmers of America cannot wait for a war between the East and the West. At present the farmers of the East are in a state of transition. Western land is increasing in price and in the East it is decreasing, through the natural law of supply and demand.

Mr. H. M. Engle said the future of farming would be more encouraging until there is a more equal equilibrium between the price of lands in the West and the East. He believed that farms might be made more profitable if applied to other industries that will ameliorate the condition of the farmer.

Mr. Hiller, of Conestoga, believed that the superiority of the West has resulted in its climate. Its mode of farming cannot last long. It cultivates no grasses and its land cannot hold the stock that the West has. Western farmers are very little more to beget the roads to market than to the Eastern farmers.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa. He gave an outline of the faculties of the human mind, the whether the raising and manufacture of beet sugar from beets was better suited and more profitable than the raising of sorghum. F. K. Diffenderfer answered that the plant for beets is more expensive than the plant for sorghum.

The question was further discussed by Messrs. Branson, Cooper, Leadow, Megie and Collins.

The latter gentleman took the position that the crops best suited to the farm and for which there is a demand should be raised. He advocated the strictest economy on the part of the farmer and urged all to live within their income, no matter what crop they raised.

Chemistry of the Kitchen was the subject of an essay by John C. Linville, of Gap. Farmers, he said, ought to be the healthiest, happiest and longest lived people on the face of the earth, but they are not.

He next considered the possibilities of the potato crop and said that he made experiments that indicated a yield of from 800 to 1,000 bushels per acre, but in field culture he never got anything like the average yield of potatoes in 78 bushels per acre and the average price 60 cents.

Mr. Branson took exception to Prof. Collier's statement that the sorghum crop was not exhaustive.

TUESDAY EVENING'S SESSION.

There was a good attendance at Tuesday evening's session of the institute. First of all, Prof. Collier read an essay on "The cause of the present depression in the value of real estate in Lancaster county," by Andrew M. Franis, esq.

Mr. Baker, of Colorado, said that home adornment is not to do with keeping children at home. He referred to the memories of the old homestead that were revived, when many years after leaving it one returns to see the familiar trees he loved so well as a child.

The railroads spanning the continent have brought into the market valuable land. Our sons are anxious to get some of the cheap lands in the West, and the consequence is a depreciation on the value of lands in the East.

The labor question never assumed such proportion as at the present time. It must be apparent that the condition of the laboring man is in the East in a deplorable state. We have the result of a mutual adjustment of labor and capital by mutual arbitration.

Mr. H. M. Engle said the future of farming would be more encouraging until there is a more equal equilibrium between the price of lands in the West and the East.

Mr. Hiller, of Conestoga, believed that the superiority of the West has resulted in its climate. Its mode of farming cannot last long. It cultivates no grasses and its land cannot hold the stock that the West has.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

Dr. Ellwood Harvey's lecture. "A Comparison of the Human Mind With the Minds of Other Animals" was the subject of a lecture by Dr. Ellwood Harvey, member of the state board of agriculture, Chester, Pa.

REPORTED FAVORABLY.

THE BILL TO REGULATE THE CHARGES BY TELEPHONE COMPANIES.

Three Dollars a Month to be Charged For the Service-The Measure Providing For Compulsory Education Also Passes the Secretary of a House Committee.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—In the Senate today bills were reported favorably on a bill to regulate the charges by telephone companies.

Water, Lehigh, and other corporations to pay bonus on their authorized increase of stock, instead of the amount paid in.

Wood, Minna, prohibiting the sale of tobacco to persons under sixteen years of age.

Bill was passed finally as follows: Relating to the competency of witnesses in civil cases where the assignor in action is dead or has been adjudged a lunatic, permitting the contradiction of a living witness by the testimony of a witness deceased, as provided by the common law of 1857.

In the House today the following bills were favorably reported: Providing for compulsory education, fixing monthly telephone charges at not exceeding three dollars; requiring informants against liquor to give the latter five days notice of such charges; fixing annual compensation of the auditor general at $300; giving the auditor general an additional clerk; to provide better exits at theatres and other places of amusement; to prevent truancy.

Bill was reported negatively as follows: To confine and punish tramps; to abolish the office of justice of the peace; to amend the law relating to the practice of law; to amend the law relating to the practice of law; to amend the law relating to the practice of law.

Bill was introduced as follows: Jones, Allegheny, to punish disorderly conduct in townships. Collins, Luzerne, providing for a hospital in the middle coal field. The Philadelphia, to regulate building in cities.

END OF THE BIG STRIKE. New York Knights of Labor Acknowledge That the Street Car Companies Were Over.

The great railroad strike of New York is over. The Knights of Labor have given up the fight and the companies score a victory, but a very costly one.

When the reports were all in it was found that the total loss to the railroad companies was $2,000,000, and that the loss to the public was $10,000,000.

New York, Feb. 6.—The various officers of the railroad companies on the East side this morning were crowded with strikers seeking employment. Many of those who applied were not taken.

At the office of the Dry Dock, East Broadway and Battery company, more than 150 men had applied for work before 10 o'clock. Their services were accepted or rejected according to the needs of the business.

By 11 o'clock all roads on the east side were running cars on schedule time. The strikers have returned to work.

Both men fired at the same time and it is a question which is the guilty one. The outposts on the body of Stricker McGowan, proved conclusively that he was shot by Officer Snyder, the ball taken from McGowan's head exactly fitting the officer's revolver.

It is estimated that about two thirds of the strikers have been re-employed. The strike on the West side is weakening.

In the Senate of Pennsylvania Tuesday night bills were introduced by Mr. Green, limiting the time for killing quail in the State to November 15 to December 15; by Mr. Koser, for the appointment of a commission to prepare a uniform system of text books for the public schools, and which accepts of the county commissioners to purchase property for the purposes of county institutions.

DIED BY HIS OWN HAND.

The Astoria Crown Prince Shoot Himself After Being Wounded by a Poisoner.

The London Daily News on Tuesday printed the following special from Moscow:

The following are believed to be the circumstances under which the death of the Astorian crown prince took place: A beautiful young baroness, not tall, but rather dark, and of a lively disposition, arrived at Moscow and took up her quarters in the gamekeeper's house, not far from the station, the care of her being those of the gamekeeper and his wife. At midnight when the crown prince had hidden his gun, she went to her room and found her husband, already equipped for the morning's chase, went to the house to ask the gamekeeper about details of instructions on some points.

He knocked loudly at the door and a window opened and a man jumped out and away. The baroness, who had been waiting, walked up to him and recognized the crown prince, who had fainted. The shot had been fired at her for about an hour when she entered the house and found her husband lying on the floor.

Then the crown prince came to and was taken to the hospital, where he died. His wife was ordered to the country, where she was to remain for the remainder of her life.

All business was suspended in Vienna on Tuesday, and houses were draped in black. The body was taken in procession from the chapel of the Hofburg to the Capuchin church, where the imperial party had assembled, and after impressive services, the body was taken to the imperial vault.

Democratic Nominations to Congress. Where the Party Will Meet to Name Candidates in Pennsylvania.

The Democrats of this city will meet this evening to name candidates for offices in different wards who will be placed in nomination on Saturday evening. The place of meeting are the Eagle hotel, North Queen and Orange streets; Second ward, Theodore Wendt's hotel, Chestnut street; Third ward, Mrs. Jacob Efinger's hotel, South Queen and Vine streets; Fourth ward, John Panta's hotel, on West King street; Fifth ward, Philip Wall's Green Tree hotel, on West King street; Sixth ward, Schilling's hotel, North Queen street; Seventh ward, Kuhn's hotel, on North Land street; Eighth ward, Kuhn's hotel, on Manor street; Ninth ward, Arnold Hess' hotel, on North Queen street.

The school directors to be elected this spring are as follows: Two from the Sixth ward, two from the Fourth; one from the Second, and one from the Fifth.

A Sad Case. There is a case of suffering in the Sixth ward, which needs prompt attention from the charitable people. It is in the family of Lorenzo B. Loomis, at No. 612 North Christian street. The man had no employment and was without a cent in the world, and surrounded by a family of six small children. The woman was laid out by some of the neighbors, but there was no money to pay for a coffin. The case was reported to a police man, and this morning they started to collect money to bury the woman.

Officers Meet. The following officers of the Red Rose Uniform Company, No. 20, of the Myrtle Chain, were elected last evening: Councilor, D. H. Rotter; secretary, G. M. Blaufer; treasurer, J. J. Haasler; chaplain, C. J. Shulmyer; captain, Hiram McKeirry; first lieutenant, J. F. Debol; second lieutenant, Samuel Fox.

The following non-commissioned officers were appointed: Sergeant, Charles Long; inner guard, G. Thacher; outside guard, Thomas Acres.

Almost a Fire. There was a fire at the house of Alderman Halbach, No. 111 North Plum street, last evening. Howard, a sixteen-year-old son of the alderman, started down stairs to get some wood. He took with him a lantern and a stick of wood. As he opened the door a stick flew up, striking the lantern and knocking it down. The lamp broke and the oil was soon on fire. The young man fought the flames for a time, and called his mother. The two succeeded in checking the flames before much damage had been done.

Tuesday Night in the Senate. In the Senate of Pennsylvania Tuesday night bills were introduced by Mr. Green, limiting the time for killing quail in the State to November 15 to December 15; by Mr. Koser, for the appointment of a commission to prepare a uniform system of text books for the public schools, and which accepts of the county commissioners to purchase property for the purposes of county institutions.

The House resolution, favoring a service pension bill, and the House bill for the incorporation of cities of the third class were referred. The House bill, authorizing the election of assessors for three years was reported and read a first time.

Change in Business. B. Frank Trout yesterday disposed of the stock and fixtures of his billiard room in the basement of the City hotel. The purchaser was George B. Robinson, who will conduct the room in the future. Mr. Trout will open a billiard room in the basement of the City hotel in connection with his shirt manufacturing business.

The Young Democrats. A meeting of the Young Men's Democratic club of this city was held last evening at which several new members were elected. The society is now in a very flourishing condition financially.

No School on Account of Cold. There was no session of the Ann street school today owing to failure of the heaters to comfortably heat the building. The small boy is happy in consequence.

IF IT IS A FALLER IN IOWA.

One State Where Prohibition Doesn't Prohibit Druggists from Selling and the Law Openly Defied.

Charles Norris, a member of the big glass manufacturing firm of George W. Deming & Co., Muscatine, Ia., arrived in Pittsburgh a few days ago, and was interviewed by a Post reporter as to the effects of prohibition in Iowa.

"It does pretty well, apparently, in the rural districts," said he, "but in the cities it is absolutely no good. I am a temperance man, and favor a system that will promote the cause of temperance, but from my observation of the way state prohibition is carried out in Iowa, I regret to say it does not seem to be the thing we are looking for. Even in the rural districts there must certainly be the same although of course it is not so noticeable. But in the cities prohibition has created a situation that threatens the foundations of society instead of the foundations of sobriety and obedience to law. In our own town of Muscatine there are 30 saloons, and the regular operation of the law, running full blast in the cities, would with all our prohibitory statutes there seems to be no power to suppress them. It is a very bad business when they had license, if not so, because they are defying the law, and therefore, bend every effort to make the most of their opportunity while it lasts. But if I can see, there is no other way. But if I can see, there is no other way. But if I can see, there is no other way."

The great question of revenue then comes up. While these saloons run right along, going business day and night, they are paying taxes. They have money enough in that way to pay for their liquor and their profit is clear. While the state is receiving a suppression of vice or criminality, it also loses the revenues from the saloons.

"I think the conditions are the same in every State in the Union, and Pennsylvania will find it out. The result of a trial will be just as unsatisfactory as it has been with us in Iowa. The elements of the law, against prohibition are strong enough to make it a very bad business. It seems as if the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks in saloons and in retail individual stores would not work in individual stores. The only way to make it work is to have the saloons and the saloons would be to make it universal. But so the experiments in the states have not been sufficient to encourage a trial of prohibition in the nation."

Tragedies O'Connor Tripped Up. We have received a circular from James Owen O'Connor, tragedian, politely inquiring whether we could find it congenial and possible to help him to remove the almost intolerable incubus and burden of chronic rheumatism and the helplessness and mismanagement of the hospital, which has been afflicting him for some time. He is a man of fine physique, all more or less alike, but none like O'Connor, though a fourth out, upon the envelope, resembles the cabbage crowned king of tragedy. As we always find it congenial to help people suffering in any way, we compassionately turned to the doctor, a few moments of conversation disclosed, in the briefest of testimonies that might lead to remove any incubus or other variety of dies that might befall the man, the name of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our reputation justified, a quotation from the London Standard of October 2, 1888, as follows: "O'Connor, a tragedian who has won a high place among his contemporaries, was seen and heard at his bedside in a fine hospital ward of O'Connor. To our intense surprise the name appeared, in the prominent position which our