When we pay our rat and comply with their requirements as to the manner in which we shall use their instrument, we think that we have done all that is necessary to satisfy their just demand. But their manager says that he is required to take the instrument out if the lease is not signed. Yesterday he took the instrument out of the Penn iron company's office because they had failed to sign the lease left with them a month ago, with notice to sign in thirty days. It is very doubtful whether the company has power to act thus under the present laws; but it will be well to amend them so as to distinctly deny to it such arbitrary power.

They are having trouble with salt water in Northwestern Ohio. They can not keep it out of their oil and gas wells, and some valuable oil wells have been abandoned because no adequate remedy could be found for the trouble.

The latest reports from Zanibar indicate a better state of things along that coast, though the Germans and British are still exchanging accusations of harsh dealing with the natives, and the probability is that between them the inhabitants within reach have a miserable time.

Mr. Harrison's cabinet is hard to frame. Since Allison has declined to be a member of it, his ardent desire to enter seems to have deserted him, and it is rumored that he, too, will decline the honor. John Wanamaker is about the only reliable member left; and it may be safely assumed that he will continue to be reliable and will rally around that cabinet as long as Harrison will let him.

A WELL KNOWN oil driller, Charles L. Sprague, has been telling a reporter of the Pittsburgh Post the extent of his disgust with the Colorado oil field. "Oil shapers out there," he says, "have mapped out an enormous territory, and they are booming it for all it is worth and a great deal more. In my opinion it will never amount to a great deal as an oil field. Drilling is confined to narrow limits, but persons interested in the business have bought up nearly 100,000 acres, and all this is mapped out as territory. The fact is they don't know whether it is or not, and the chances are it is not. Dry holes are found there as well as elsewhere, and there are no large wells to compensate for them. You can hear out there of wells doing 50 and 60 barrels a day, but I never saw a well yet that produced more than 10 barrels a day. The best wells are found at Florence, and I doubt if there is a well there doing over 25 barrels. I looked after a well that did, but hard work, about 15 barrels a day, and it was reported by the owners as doing 40. There are about 50 producing wells around Canon City and Florence. From what Mr. Sprague has seen of the Colorado oil field, he would state he thought it was a good quality of oil as far as it went. It was about 31 degrees gravity B, and refiners say it yields 40 per cent of an excellent quality of illuminating oil, the residue being a good lubricator, worth 50 cents to $1 per gallon in the Eastern markets. It has a pleasant odor and stands a good cold test. So it would appear that there is to be no serious rivalry of the Standard from that quarter."

Mr. Harrison does not get his cabinet together before he gets to Washington. He will be no slower than some of his predecessors. Garfield was in this case; and so was Buchanan, who did not have his cabinet completed until after his inauguration, when he filled it out with his most brilliant member, Judge Black, of Pennsylvania.

Every now and again a trade turn puts rich things within your reach at the price of common. Some we tell of, some have never a word in the papers. No day but somewhere about the store (maybe in a dozen places) fifty cents of money will buy a dollar of worth.

Here are 2,500 pieces French and Bohemian Glassware, crystal, colored and cornelian. Some twisted, convoluted and rainbow-streaked, some as simple as dewdrops; not one of them that is more than half price.

Crystal Glass: Parafra, Trimbler, Oil and Vinegar Crates, Trimbler with Handles, Colored Glass: Ornamental Vases, Bouquet Holders, Flower Holders, Crystal Kettles.
