to whether the prohibition amendment be made a party question. To ch we have to say that, so far as the ratic party is concerned, the quesa answers itself; since that party has dways opposed the prohibition policy, as rary to its fundamental doctrine. Democratic party is founded upon defense of the individual liberty of citizen and upon opposition to ary laws that unduly interwith it. It proclaims that man is free to do as he to do, so that in so doing he not interfere with the same right d by other men,and do them injury may get drunk, if he is a fool ; and the ot call him to account, unless he public exhibition of his drunkenes, or in any way offends against the the of his fellow to enjoy peace.

the propriety of the school superintend ent's conduct in taking a number of the teachers on a trip to Washington and thereby causing the schools to be closed for two days. If the superintendent acted without proper authority, the board of directors should certainly call him to account for it. We believe in strict discipling being main. lieve in strict discipline being main-tained throughout the school system; and as well by the directors over the superintendent, as by him over the tenchers and by them over the scholars. If the superin-tendent took the teachers away from their schools for two days, without the authority of the board of directors properly given through their representatives, there re-mains no question that he should be re-buked therefor. And it does not seem to be denied that he did not ask the permission of one at least of the sub-com mittee of the superintending committee, in charge of a district some of whose schools were closed by his action, and whose permission it was clearly proper that he should have sought; and clearly Dr. Levergood was right in reporting to the board that these schools had been closed without his permission. Such report the rules demand from the superintending committee whenever a school is closed; and in this case, where schools had been closed in nearly every district, should not have been omitted. DR LE CARON, atime Beach, is, according to his own account, about as mean a spy as can be found in history. A STEAM heating device for railway trains invented by Mr. J. R. Wilson, of Pitteburg, is soon to be tested on the Penn-sylvania ratiroed. A Fort Wayne engine has been remodelled to heat the water. In the dome over the centre of the boiler, which was formerly known as the sand box, which was formerly known as the sand box, coils of copper pipe will be laid; through this the water will pass. The ateam of roulates around the pipes inside the dome and it is claimed the coldest water can be made scalding bot in a few minutes.

THE importance to this country of a succentul manufacture of a cast steel gun lies in the saving of time that would be possible if our cities and see coast could be defended by heavy cannon made in this way, and the guns, now considered by all governments the only kind that can be relied upon to resist the terrible wrench of the large charge of strong powder, take about twenty times as long to build as the cast guns would and, further, it will take us several years to establish the plant necessary to make built up guns of large calibre. If we can manage to make reliable cast steel guns we will have schieved what Krupp, Armstrong and the Creuzot engineers gave up long and more valuable time. It will be a grand triumph of American ingenuity and we hope it may soon be assured, but it is not time to brag just yet.

The University of Pennsylvania has long boasted a fine library, but for many years it was accessible only to the pr cosor because there was no fund provided for the payment of a librarian. Our own Franklin and Marshall college has the nucleus of a library, which has only lately been made properly available by the volunteer labor of a professor. These instances are cited only as samples of the many points at which an unrestricted legacy or gift could be effectively applied, and yet lifte of this kind are so rare that Dr. Smith, of Trinity college, was astonished when Mr. Walter Keney gave him a check with the simple direction: "Spend that money for whatever you think best for the

LAST fall there was opened with great ceremony a line of railway about twenty-five miles long rejoicing in the ambitious name of the Royal Trans-African railway. This road is in the Portugese province of Angola and runs from Loands through a very fertile and highly cultivated country o Ambaka. Its building is not an evidence of the superior energy of the Portugese in Africa, but of the terrible ravages of the slave trade and particularly of its encouragement by the Portugues. The road was built chiefly because of the great scarcity of native carriers who have for many years been used to transport the products of this fertile Portugese territory to the coast. The Portugese traders have long been infamous for their barbarous part in the slave trade, but this business has grown to such great proportions with the recent progress of Mohammedanism in Africa that slaves are becoming scarce among the Portugese traders. Whole districts depopulated by the slave raiders do not recover and in this part of Africa at least, the inhuman business is working out its own doom. There is too little confidence in the energy of the Portugese to warrant any hope that the royal trans-African railway will fulfill the promise of its name, but it has already replaced an army of miserable slaves and boasts one train a day.

Hon. Louis A. Mackey, president of the Bild Eagle Valley raircoad company, diedoof heart disease in Lock Haven on Friday. He was born in White Deer township, Unity county, in 1819. He graduated at Union college, Schenectady, N. Y., in 1837, and was admitted to the bar in 1840. He settled in 1841 in Lock Haven, where he practiced his profession and became elargely interested in railroad enterprises. In 1874 he was elected to Congress and served four years.

Levi J. McCormick, aged 77, who died at Chambersburg on Friday, was a native of Chester county. He drove a horsecar on the Columbia & Philadelphia railroad for several years, and the past 40 years he was conductor on the Cumberland Valley railroad. It was while driving the stage between Gestysburg and Harrisburg that he was engaged to carry President Van Buren's first message from York to Harrisburg. He was instructed to carry it in an hour and a haif, if possible. Horses were stationed along the route at different points for him, and his only delay was in dismounting and again mounting another steed. He dashed into Harrisburg in one hour and twenty-six minutes efter isoving York, having four minutes to spare.
