The curiew cried, and I raised my head, For I mit the good folk near; Sitm little shapes in the fading light. Duck and dim, but their cyce gleamed to Add they halled me thin and clear.

In they event with a restling sound. Like dend leaves blown together; Inde me fashion their dainty shoon, "O the morrow"s e'en is the Feast o' the Moon And we dance on the wan white heather." So I took their gay stude, woven well, As never a mortal weaves; Fashioned daintily, fishlosed fair, Little red shoon that the Pixies wear, Of the blo.d-red Autumn leaves.

They stood at my knee, they crowded near, An I shilled a piping tune, Their great eyes glowed, and they whispers "Quick!"

And my work went merrily, "tic-tae-tie," By the light of the yellow moon, Thanks and thanks for thy labor done, And ays when the Summer's o'er, And rapers carry the last brown sheaf, We'll send our sign of a yellow leaf, A leaf blown in at the door.

" So shall ye know that the time bath come, And morry at heart shall ree, It is and go where we filt and fleet, Pollow the track of our twishing feet

And the glow of our golden eyes." They recled away through the starlight air And cried "On our crystal shore, O Friend, you shall "scape the Winter's grief, Follow the sign of the yellow leaf, The leaf blown in at the door!"

So shall I know when the time hath come. And morry at heart shall rise, Rise and go where they filt and freet. The little red shoon on the twinkling feet And the glow of the golden eyes.

Winter will come with snow stilled skies, And the neighbors' hearths aglow; But the owls will drowse on my cold heart stone,
For I shall be gone where the birds are flow.
And the great moon daisies blow.

I sit at work 'neath the lintel low. And the white-walled street is still; The twilight deepens dim and gray,

To-morrow it may be-not to day— And I wait the Fizies' will. —Graham R. Tomson, in Longman's Magazine.

Doubt Brightening into Hope, And hope into certainty, is the pleasing transition through which the mind of the nervous, dyspeptic invalid passes who tries a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is alike incomparable and inimitable. Increased vitality, a gain in weight, tranquillity of the nerves, sound appetite and sleep are among the blessings which it is within the beneficent power of this medicine to confer, and it is not surprising that after acquiring this new dowry of health the grateful sick should sometimes utter their praises of the Ritters in terms bordering on extravagance. "Out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh," and the proprietors of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have sometimes been obliged to suppress these clopiums lest they should be accused of blowing their own trumpet too loudly. For constipation, biliousness, kidney complaint and incipient rheumatism the Bitters is also a deservedly popular remedy. of the nerves, sound appetite and ,sleep are
