He esemed to be greatly excited and suddenly dashed up the steps leading from Prince street into St. Mary's church yard. He ran about in the yard and the men who had obarge of him endeswored to drive him down the large stone steps in front of the church, which lead to Vine street. His buliahip refused to go out by this route, but seemed to think that be could improve on the mode of exit. He ran up the yard, almost to the market house, and then tried on the mode of exit. He ran up the yard, almost to the market house, and then tried to scale the iron fence, He succeeded but partially, as he got his front feet over while his hind ones remained in the yard. He was then in a bad predicement, being unable to move backward or forward. A orowd collected and a number of men secured planks, rails, &a, with which they built a platform and the built was rescued. He was but slightly injured, being scratched accessed and a sold was rescued.
