o fame of that Columbia Argosy. ma rolling mill, has reached To stands in magnificent grandeur, thing in golden spleudor upon the man of the broad Susquehanna, where salers roll on to the great dam that the way of the silvery shad and sends m to the net. Here, where the shad captured, the Susquehanna rolling all gathers in the golden shekels, and divides profits that make other iron the fortunate influence of the scene, that brings this answer. There may be that in the majesty of the great water which rolls by its side that gives to the Ill its princely attitude and income ; or may only be the very skillful guidance at is given it by that veteran rolling the has been guiding the fortunes of the an runneth not to the contrary; and General Patton, as a wise and success fall iron master, is a Democrat. He is a sovelty among his kind in his politics; ad those iron masters who envy the ess of the Susquebanna rolling mill may profit themselves by imitating the general's politics. It is easily demonstra-ble to the fair and intelligent man that every iron manufacturer ought to be a ocrat; but there is nothing like the coss of a Democrat in the business rein so many others of wrong politics all, to clinch the argument; and we present the Susquehanna mill and its management as a shining filustration of the most of Democratic handling of iron to make much money in the business.

Those Republican iron masters, who do not know how to do the trick, may say that it is not done, and that the Susqueanna has not made the profit claimed for it; but the stockholders know they have their dividends, and that is satisfactory evidence to them. It is true that the mill has now stopped to put in boilers and get ready for a new campaign; and that it has also lowered its rate of wages. The latter fact only shows that a Demooratic iron master has sense enough not o pay more wages than his neighbors. tral Patton goes along with the mills all the towns around him, and pays the highest wages paid anywhere in the untry districts of Eastern Pennsylvania; and proposes to keep on, also, paying the highest dividends.

The Boomerang in War.

The railroad people keep up their heavy fire on Andrew Carnegie, whom they seem to think very vulnerable to their attacks. The Railway World comes along now with a statement of his rise and progress to his present station from the lowly condition of an emigrant's son, and finds that the favor of railroad dents has started and sustained him until now, viper like, he turns around to ng the bosom that cherished him. And the fact appears to be that Andrew is a ad creation of the first water, and we admit that ingratitude may be his

But the remarkable thing to note in the controversy between Carnegie and the allroad officers, is the fact that there is $30 much feeling on both sides to let their sonduct be persuaded by the usual considerations that govern this class of crea they hurt themselves. The railroad railroad railroad railroad railroad which continued until the close Therabbi, in charging that Carnegie is the statement was very favorable. creator of their excessive favor and that he owes them gratitude which he pays with abuse. It is the admission of the high offense against the public which is charged against them; and it is only the blindness of anger which would induce them to meet Carnegie's charge, that they favor some shippers in their rates, by a statement that they favored him. They are like the gunner who went out with a heavily charged gun for plover, which kicked and knocked the

It may afford them much satisfaction know that they hurt Carnegie by howing how he came to his fortune and how he prospered upon the railroad practices that he now deinces. But Carnegie has the imse advantage over them of flying now on a straight course, however, stocked his flight may heretofore have no. It may be a case of lately dereloped honesty in one who no longer has my temptations to be vicious; but it does not hurt a good cause that its advocate was once its enemy, but rather helps it. On the principle that a thief is best set to catch a thief, the anti-discrimination cause in Pennsylvania may congratulate itself if Andrew Carnegie, who now advocates it, be is all the better armed against it. The ogues having fallen out, honest men have a good show for their dues. It does not all affect the force of Mr. Carnegie's facts, that Mr. Carnegie is not immaculate. ey will judge them by the force that stheir own, and which does not come from him. He may be inspired by wrong motives and prompted by an evil spirit; but the facts that he presents will be as tible as though he were as pure and patriotic as he claims to be.

The Issue Made. The Pennsylvania assembly has not only set its foot upon the neck of the inti-discrimination bill, but on the same by it throttled the proposed law to enure a fair casting of the ballots, that has successfully tried in Australia for any years, and is being largely adopted by our states. It does not suit the Republisa dictators of this state ; its object being secure to each voter the certainty that he can cast a secret ballot. Naturally this does not suit men who want to buy voters, and to know that they cast their bullet according to contract; and who want employers to know how their men s. So the bill has been smothered.

The patience of the people of this state on very great, under the domination of the Republican ring that has for so years dealt with them as it pleased. the people should permit the sions of the constitution to negatived for fifteen years, because the refusal of the Legislature to act as mosts them to do, is very remarkable; they will longer permit it seems in-The issue of the elections of spear is made up. It is the people the Republican ring and the railExponent of beef, bog and dairy products in the month of March reached a value of 95,682,200, over three million in excess of Anour this time of year expect the fol-lowing item in trade reports after state-ments of business depression: "The indications are that when the reads open up and spring work gets fully under way, there will be a great revival in all kinds of business."

THE scological tastes of President Harrison are worthy of comment. Before the presidential election his devotion to this branch of science appears to have been known to a few who surprised the nation by their strange gifts to the president-elect, by their strange gifts to the president-sicot, including, we believe, a bear, a baid eagle and a robust and cheerful jack rabbit. A dispatch from the capital now states that the president's daughter, Mra. McKee, has returned from Florida bearing as a gift a young and smiling alligator; and in this connection the weighty fact is mentioned that a bull pup was recently received at the White House. The country was duly informed of the disposal of the bear, but for all that is known to the contrary it may for all that is known to the contrary it may be assumed that the bull pup and the alligator are additions to the menageric established by the baid eagle, the jack rabbit and the baid English butier, so badly left by Lord Sackville.

As to the zoological value of the collection but little can be said, as we are not familiar with alligators, bald esgles and bull pups, but the jack rabbit is evidently the symbol of rapid progress and quick dodging, and a warning that no jackass need apply. Not even poor forlorn Dudley.

In the "hermit kingdom," as Cores is called, they are having hard times with a vengeance. A recent traveller through the country said that the Coreans might be counted upon to look at all matters in a way as opposite as possible to our own, and laid down the general maxim that whatisid down the general maxim that whatever was right in America was wrong in Corea. The statement does not appear so absurd after reading the report of two Americans who have just passed through a part of the famine stricken district of Southern Cores. They found the cattle all killed for food or sold, and bands of starving people journeying north in search of food, and when foreigners attempted to aid these suffering wretches the government of Corca interfered. "The foreign office communicated with the committee saying that the government would consider it as reflecting on the generosity of the government to have foreigners to subscribe their money toward helping its people and requested the com-mittee to desist." The idea of forbidding charity to a starying people, and for such reason would not have occurred to any but Corean statesmen. The coin of the country is the "cash," a heavy copper disk with a hole in the centre so that many may be strung together, for it takes a great many of them to buy anything. The only ald given by the government to these starving people has been the distribution of seventy cash apiece on two occasions. So low is the value of this colonge that strings of a hundred cash circulate without anyone troubling to count them, and a common form of fraud is the removal of a few cash from each string,

THE great iron Eiffel tower of Paris is escribed in a very thorough manner in the Engineering and Building Record, by the report of Mr. Eittel before the French society of civil engineers. Before undertaking the work, a very careful examina-tion of the soil was made to a depth of fity two feet. The foundations were made by means of compressed air and iron calssons, such as are used in founding bridge plers. The tower is a vast lightning rod, and to carry off the electricity, two cast iron pipes, 20 inches in diameter, will be laid to each pier, 59 feet below ground. These pipes turn up to the surface at one end and will be connected with the iron posts of the tower.
