The subject of this sketch is but twentyyen years of age and yet is "A Man of aineas" in the full sense of the phrase, is a son of Jacob L. I then superintended his father's farm, in western part of the city within its limits two years; he was employed the next ar by Frey & Weidler, and after the death Mr. Weidler, Oct 5th, 1883, he was taken to partnership by his father, in which siness he remained until Dec. 10th, 1886. The Wonderful Business Growth.

Among all the business improvements
the city, we have lately noticed none
ve made more rapid progress than Frey Eckert. When they bought out Benj, ubaker on December 10, 1885, over three ars and four months ago, they had but y-nine hundred dollars ($5,900) worth stock, which was all in their small store
No. 3 East King street. Six months had y-nine hundred dollars ($5,900) worth stock, which was all in their small store No. 3 East King street. Six months had ircely passed, when their business gave omise of such quick growth that they revised all of their boots and men's heavy best to the basement, which they furthed up as a boot department; six months ore had scarcely passed, when they and it necessary to raise their shelving, in the boot department had to be sived all round the walls, as all as double shelving through the area to accommodate their rapidly treasing trade; and last spring it became cessary to build their store shelving up the celling, and rent in addition a large om on second floor above New York are which they used-as a surplus stockom and which was kept constantly full goods; thus to keep up with the deands of their steadily increasing trade, sy have increased their stock from $5,000 $15,000 or $16,000, almost triple in such hort time. If we were to give the and $15,000 or $16,000, almost triple in such hort time. If we were to give the anal increase of daily sales in dollars and its as taken from their sales-book, the der could hardly believe it possible. The business stand is best known as that Morris Levy's, who sold out to Dulon Buchmiller, of Lancaster, about Jan. 1884, who sold out to Benjamin Bruker, of Petersburg, July 25, and who id out to Frey & Eckert Dec. 10, 1885, he changes in such quick succession, bjected them (Frey & Eckert) to such ficule, for the first year or more, but it ems the "Boys," as they are generally med in the shoe trade, have come to stay, it is always interesting to some of our the differential the shoe take, have come to stay. It is always interesting to some of our iders, (at least) to know how attachments formed; the young men became quainted at the Y. M. C. A., both being embers of that organization.

This house has enjoyed the utmost contence of their patrons, as their word is sair bond. ir bond.

It is interesting to note the changes in air mode of conducting business; all of air predecessors did a credit business the the rule; "if you can get $2 for an icle, get it, if not, sell it for $1.50 or 75." It took a great deal of pluck and arage for them to change to a "one price" shouse is to rather pay five, ten or fifm cents more per pair for shoes, make at much less on them and give customers a benefit of it; another is, at all times to we customers the advantage of cheaper irchases.

Hints About the Store.
We were somewhat surprised at first to a the handsome and expensive fixtures is economical firm bought and have seed in their store (as they both apply emselves very closely to business in ortic save money) but when we learned at they bought out all the fixtures of one Philadelphia's most prominent shoe cases, situated at 824 Arch street, and hown as "the model shoe house," at less an half cost, we do not wonder in the ast that they took advantage of the situant and have placed and furnished up their pre with such handsome fixtures at about a price ordinary fixtures can be built ore with such handsome fixtures at about e price ordinary fixtures can be built rhere in Lancaster. The general impression is that the prop-ty was bought by the firm, but that is not e case; it was purchased and improved Chas. H. Frey, one of the members of e firm.

One of the greatest improvements they we made, and the only one like it in this ty, is that they have their store divided to two separate departments, one excessly for ladies and children, and the her for men and boys.

In addition to their present help of two lessmen they have added a lady cashier ho spent most of her life time in the store of who, upon request, can wait on any of the customers wishing her to, as there are ways ladies, and especially aged ones, he prefer having a lady wait on them.

This house has just received a large lot very fine fans, which they will give to approaches. As the acts by opening have been almost exhausted, the firm ordered and have received 3,650 more which will be given to men and boys.

On account of their trude being retarded by the improvements and removals in rea of store, they will heap their store open every evening until further notice. They wish us in this way to thank those of their pairons who braved the dust, dirt, and paint just in order to patronize them.
