ERT C. CART RILLED NEAR THE CONES-TOCA BRIDGE ON MONDAY.

ie Returning From a Fishing Trip le is Run Down by Harrisburg Accommodation-The Inquest.

Albert C. Gast, a well-known Lancaster man, was fatally injured by the cars of the commy variant ratiroad about a mile cast of the Conestoga bridge, on Monday evening. The deceased lived with his father, Christian Gast, one of Lancaster's tending citizens, at No. 224 West Chestout street. He was very fond of fishing and vesterday morning he and ag and yesterday morning he and corgo Latz, a young man who resides cor the Lancaster cemetery, started on nt the greater part of the forenoon about neighborhood of Jacob Stauffer's mill and caught but few fishes. Between 11 and it o'clock they concluded to return to town.

Luts wanted to walk across the fields to that way, but Gast was anxious to take a by road which led towards the railroad. ney could not agree on this and each went own way, Gast taking the net and the fish that had been caught with him. Lutz arrived in town about I o'clock in the ernoon and did not again see Gast alive. ortly before half-past five o'clock Gast peared at the place where he was killed. was walking on the south track and hen he stepped out of the way of an east aund freight he was struck by engine No. 132 attached to Harrisburg Accommodation head striking one of the rails. The train which struck him was backed and the man, who was then unconscious, was taken on ard and brought to this city. He was laced in the baggage room and Dr. George . Welchans was quickly sent for, but th ensued in about fifteen minutes. At first it was not known who the dead an was, as his face was covered with dirt m the tracks of the railroad, but it was elieved that it was Gast. The father of the seesed and his brother, William H., Rerwards arrived and they identified the dy. Ambrose Bitzer soon came in and identified the fish-net found with Gast, he having loaned it to him in the morning to ishing. Lutz came next and he was greatly surprised to find his late companion dead. He found in one of his pockets a match box that he had loaned him during the afternoon. Dr. Welchans' examination of the body showed that each leg was roken in two places, below the knee, the k was broken and there was a terrible ent in the middle of the forehead caused no loubt by the head striking the rails.

The deceased would have been 51 years fage had he lived until next November. He was born and raised in this city and in early life learned the trade of a confectioner. the war broke out he enlisted in the 79th regiment and was a member of the Company A, first commanded by Captain William Kendrick and afterwards by Captain George W. Huffnagle. Consider-able of the time he was with General Negley's staff and spent three years in the army. At the battle of Chaplain Hills, Kentucky, he was shot through one of his legs. He was married at one time, but was divorced from his wife years ago He has THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

Before the body had been removed from the baggageroom last evening, Coroner Homaman impanelled a jury, to hold an inquest, consisting of S. A. Stephens, Jere Vondersmith, Frank Adams, John McPherson, Jacob B. Kiehl and nanuel Vogel. They viewed the body and then adjourned until this morning. The time set for the inquest was 9 o'clock, order that the engineer of the train that killed the man could be present. The esuployes of the Pennsylvania company usually attend inquests as they see fit, and they did not arrive until almost 10 o'clock this morning, thus delaying the inquest over a half hour.

Henry Andrews, the engineer, was first examined. He testified that he reached the point where the accident occurred, which is near Landis' warehouse, about 4:15; he saw the man ahead; he was walking on the south track and was carrying something; witness thought he was a track man; as the freight neared him he stepped on to the north track after looking back at the approach of the engine; witness whistled four or five times and just as the man to be stepping off the engine struck him; he was carried along about 20 yards on the pilot or the engine and then dropped along the north side of the track ar Landis' crossing.

Harry Otstot, fireman of the train, cor roborated the engineer. The jury rendered a verdict of death from the shock caused by the accident. They attached no blame to railroad company or employes.

AN ART DISPLAY.

Charles H. Barr Takes Possession of His

New Store in Centre Square. Charles H. Barr has just moved into the beautiful new building in Centre Square, which has been erected by B. J. McGrann, where he will in the future have his book and art store, and he had his opening yesterday. The store room is 75 feet in length and 20 feet in width and is one of the handsomest rooms in the city. The first 50 feet of the room in the front is filled with a very large stock of blank books fine linen papers, sellaneous and standard works, etc. The 25 feet in the rear of the store is separated from the front by a very handsome curtain, and that is the art department. The walls are covered with pictures of all kinds, including oil paintings, line engravings, water colors, etchings, carbon otographs, mezzotints, etc. Among the oil paintings are three that are very beautiful and are valued at $650 each. They come direct from Quopil, of Paris. One is "The Return from Fishing,"by George Haguette, another is "Sleighing in Russia," by J. Rosen, of Munich, and the third is a coast scene by F. Stockenberg, of Munich. There is also a beautiful Millais etching entitled "Over the Hills and Far Away" and a very handsome colored photograph of a "Russian Wedding Feast" with a pyrographical frame. In the room there are hundreds of pictures the prices of which range from 50 cents $650 and Mr. Barr wishes everybody to inspect them whether they wish to purchase or not. Addressed the Cigarmakers.

About one hundred eigarmakers of this city attended the meeting in Roberts' hall last evening and listened to a very inter-esting address by Charles F. Seib. Mr. Seit is a forcible speaker and he was listened to with the greatest attention. He explained the necessity of organization in trade and the benefits thus derived. He claimed that eigarmakers elsewhere through their unions have increased their wages and reduced their hours of work. He claimed that the cigarmakers of the Ninth district have three times as much work to do for the same amount of pay as About twenty new members were reselved into the union after the meeting. It was decided to hold another meeting at the mme place on Thursday evening, and there will be a special meeting for ladies only on Friday evening.

Lowell's New Factory. Mr. John W. Lowell leased to-day from Lawrence Knapp the large building on the corner of Grant and Cherry streets, in the rear of the Presbyterian church. This new rear of the Presbyterian church. This new and commodious building will give ample room and light for Mr. Lowell's horse collar factory, which will be moved in a and a wholsele harness factory and to es-tablished shortly in the same building.

A JAPANESE LADY. The Wife of Japan's Minister at Wash

The Wife of Japan's Minister at Washington.

The Japanese household is one of the most interesting at Washington, and when its doors are thrown open to society the curious rush pell mell for a glimpse of it.
Mme. Kuki, who presided over the household until about a year ago, was foul of society, had her gowns made by Worth, and learned to speak English while here.
She was eminently Asiastic in appearance, and it was on account of her failing health that the minister asked to be resalled. The minister's ward, Miss Kuki, the daughter of Viscount Kuki, is still there, and will romain until she finishes her education.
She is a pupil at a fashionable school on M street, and is quite a young lady, although she is no larger than a 14-year-old girl. She is learning to ride horseback, and takes several morning lessons every week at the riding academy, dressed in the regulation habit and silk bat.

The present minister, Mr. Mutsu, is a typical Japanese, lithe, slender, active, alert, a polished gentleman and a deep thinker. He is swarthy, and his eyes are black as night. He learned to speak English in Japan, and while he doesn't speak it fluently, expresses himself very well and understands readily. He is a devoted husband and very proud of his pret y wife, who has but to look as if she desired anything to get it. He is in favor of the highest position for women, and advocated their advancement and freedom. Mr. Mutsu was appointed by the emperor governor of Yokohama, and several years afterwards political complications arose and he was thrown into prison, where he was confined for four years and a half. After the political upheaval he was Teleased, honers were conferred upon him, and on the recall of Minister Kuki the emperor made him his minister to the United States.

Mme. Mutsu, although she is the mother of a daughter taller than herself, and has not the slightest objection to telling her age up to the latest date, is very young and girlish looking; far more youthful in fact than many a belie who has been ou season or two. She is by far the prettiest Japanese lady ever seen in Washington. She is petite, with a pretty, graceful figure, and the timest bands and fest imaginable. Japan, and is a clear olive in hue, her checks Japan, and is a clear olive in hue; her checks are like the damask rose, and her eyes large and dark and sparkling with intelligence. Her eyebrows are straight and delicately penciled, and her abundant coablack hair is rolled back from her forehead and coiled on top of her head. Her teeth are white and even, and her lips are full and ripe red. Her expression is very quiet, but when she smiles her whole face lights up and becomes radiant. Unlike most Japanese, her face is a perfect oval, and in the American dress, which she has adopted, one has to look a second time to adopted, one has to look a second time to assure himself that she belongs to another race. As one of the ladies in waiting to the empress she became accustomed to the empress she became accustomed to dress and liked it.

She has excellent and refined taste in dress. She dislikes pronounced or conspicuous colors, wearing soft, delicate tints herself, and for evening prefers white. Most of her gowns are made in Paris, and are splendid and costly. She has a natural preference for soft silks, of course. Her diamonds are beautiful, and the necklace she wears on state occasions is a most she wears on state occasions is a most curious piece of workmanship. It en-circles her neck like a collar, and is fashioned of sprays of flowers and leaves of diamonds that almost conceal the setting, and almost reaches the top of a low bodice. It had to be altered several times in order to get it to fit her slender throat. She wears it only on very great occasions, such as a reception at the White House or a state dinner. She has another necklace somewhat smaller that answers for more ordinary wear. She does not often wear decollete gowns, preferring the V or square-neck, and has her gloves reach the shoulders. She is a frague, delicate little creature, with scarcely muscle enough to lift an ordinary chair, and looks with wonder on the activity of American ladies. She rarely activity of American ladies. She rarely walks except in the garden behind the house, and has walked on the street but once in daytime (then just around the block with a lady), and twice at night for a short distance with her husband.

This is how the charming little lady from the Orient spends her day generally: She has her coffee and roll in bed, French fashion; gets up about 10 or 11, practices talk-ing English, has a late breakfast or lunchon, studies a great deal, sometimes for six or seven hours if she doesn't go out; makes and receives calls, practices on the koto, writes letters to her friends in Japan, working for hours at long columns of puzzling Japanese characters, and, most delightful of all to her, chats with Mr. Mutsu. Then comes in the evening an elaborate dinner of six or seven courses, and later some amusement at home or away from it. Neither the Minister nor Mme. Mutsu drinks wine, but always have it for company. With every box from home comes Japanese food, but American cocking pleases them very well, especially our roast beef and potatoes. They have a bright daughter of about fourtecoor fifteen named Saya, prononneed She is taller than her mother, a trifle darker, and has the rosiest of rosy cheeks. She speaks English very well, is quick at repartee, and full of life and fun. In speaking she is very dramatic, acting what she tells, and talking with eyes and tongue. She has a big mast off for a pet that is over three feet high and weighs 138

RICHARD STEWART'S RIDE.

He and His Horse Fall Down a Thirty Foot Rallroal Embankment

Richard Stewart, an old man, who lives near Bellemont, in Paradise township. had a very exciting adventure last night, and it is a great wonder that he is living to-day to tell of his experience. He came to Lancaster yesterday afternoon, having taken the train at Leaman Place, where he left his horse, on which he rode. He left this city for home at 8:35 in the evening, arriving at Leaman Place at 9 o'clock. He mounted his horse, which is an old animal and blind of one He started down the turnpike towards Williamstown, but the night was pitch dark and, becoming confused, he turned to the right below the station and came around back of the warehouse, where he got on the railroad. Stewart does not seem to have known where he was, for he rode on the railroad track a distance of 300 yards or more east of Leaman Place to a railroad bridge. Workmen are now enmaking extensive repairs to bridge, and new abutments are being made on the east side. The half blind horse, with his confused rider, did not stop for the bridge, but crossed it in safety. On the cast side the animal got into the open work. The result was that he and his rider tumbled through and slid or rolled to the bottom of the embankment. Stewart soon picked himself up and finding that he was not hurt, started for the first light that he saw, which was in the house of a man named Marrion. He then went to his home at Bellemonte. His son and others organized a party and went to the place where the old man said he had fallen. At the foot of the embankment, near the large derrick, they found the old horse lying on his side, apparently asletp. They aroused him up and found that he was but slightly bruised

The escape from death by the fall was something remarkable, but it was a great wonder that both man and horse were not killed by a train while on the railroad

Lancaster Classis

MANREIM, May 21.- Lancaster classis of the Reformed church in the United States met in annual session in St. Paul's church, on Monday evening. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. M. Titzel, D. D., of the First Reformed church, Lancaster. The liturgical services were conducted by Prof. J. S. Stahr, Ph. D., of Lancaster, and Rev. E. N. Kremer, of Salom Reformed church, Harrisburg.

Dr. Titzel's sermon was a masterly de fense of the power of the gospel over against the idea that there are other efficient means of saving men. After the close of the service the stated clerk called the roll. Rev. J. W. Meminger, of St. Paul's church, Lancaster, was elected president, and Prof. G. F. Mull, of Franklin and Marshall college, was elected corresponding secretary. After fixing the hours for the opening and closing of the sessions the classis adjourned until this morning at 9 o'clock.

Jacob Stoey, Frank Rittenhouse, Peter Sensenderfer and Mary Overly have been prosecuted before Alderman Pinkerton, on the charge of drunken and disorderly conduct. Mrs. Overly, who lives in Faegleys ville, is also charged with keeping a disor-derly house, which is a nuisance to the

A Heavy Storm.

This afternoon a very heavy rain storm, which was accompanied by thunder and lightning, visited this city. Rain fell in torrents for a short time washing the streets thoroughly, carrying off all the dirt and flooding the sewers. There was also a slight fall of hail, but the stones were not of great size, and they are not believed to have done much damage.

The Finest Shoes.

"Why do you not keep Fine Shoes"? remarked a young lady the other day. We do—too many of them, we often think. It's a variety that serves to perplex, rather than to please; so many bright and attrac ive shapes are there, that one finds it difficult to select the handsomest. We could dispense with a number of makes and still present a better exhibit of Fine Shoes than you'd find anywere in Lancaster. This is just as true of Gentlemen's footwear as it is of Ladies'. Every shape we have —not standard—is the conception of a genius in his calling, whose test moments are devoted to fashioning and creating the handsomest effects in leather for exacting and discriminating patrons, and is a favorite in the fashionable Swim, America over. Every fine leather is represented in the makes of shoes here. Prices moderate always less than those prevalent in Philadelphia for precisely the same makes of goods. Special shapes, in one or more kinds Special shapes, in one or mare in of leather, we engage to furnish in accord with directions given.
