Getting Together. The New York Sun quotes the remark f Samuel J. Randall, to the Washingon correspondent of the Louisville me and the next president. We felows have all got to get together-and I um certain that we can and we will whip them out of their boots in '92." And the Sun cries, "get together." And so we all say, -we will get together. It s not much of an undertaking, for we have not been far apart. The issue upon which there was division, that of the tariff, is one that is rapidly settling itself. It was unwisely put upon the party, as we suppose is now generally conceded, in the manner and form in which it was done. The fears of the manufacturing interest were rudely aroused by the exploitation of the abstract truth of free trade doctrine, in the president's message, which nevertheless advocated a protective policy ; and the party, notwithstanding its adoption of the highly protective Mills bill, was kept busy de-fending itself from the imputation of free trade designs; its members became irritated; and the Republican manufacturers were so alarmed that Wanamaker filled his bag, when he went around among them, with the greatest case; and the election was bought. It would not be bought now.

manufacturers would not contribute now, and Democrats of every shade of opinion on the tariff issue see that the march of events is removing all cause of antagonism among them upon the question of the tariff. It has become dear that the manufacturing industries of the country are rapidly reaching a point where they can produce as cheaply s abroad, and that the only thing urgent in tariff tinkering is the release of duties on raw materials. Whether the duties are high or low on manufactures will soon be of little consequence, as the home competition will keep prices down below those of foreign products.

There is no cause for further irritation over the tariff; and there certainly should be none in Democratic councils because of it. The general tariff policy, that the party represents, is that of tariff reduction, which the evolution of events is bringing about by their own The party, is content with its position and will obtain all the political Republican protection foundation is falling from under it because the country is outgrowing it; and upon all other vital questions of government the Demoeratic party occupies an equally advantageous position. The administration of Cleveland placed it in good position for future political contests. Defeated by the purchase of the vote of one state, it carried with it the majority of the pular vote : and at the next election will attack a party fraudulently scated, strongly perfumed, without character and discordantly led.

The Democratic party will be together it will have a policy and a clear repute. Whoever its candidate, he will be worthy; and its success will not be measured by a number of voters that may be bought, even if there is enough money then 'eft in the manufacturers' bags to buy; which looks doubtful just now. Mr. Randall's confidence in Democratic victory three years hence has abundant justification.

The Story of Friction.

There is so much talk going around of friction between the president and his cabinet over the appointments to office, that it may be assumed that there is something of truth in it, however vigorous the denials; and it is noticed that these are not very vigorous. The main trouble seems to be that the president proposes to be boss; and that he further inclines to go slow, that he may give personal consideration to the appointments; and he is quite happy that the plan he adopts of only making new appointments at the expiration of the old commissions, gives him opportunity to go slow as well as to satisfy civil service re-

Mr. Blaine, the head of the cabinet, who has been hitherto esteemed a very lively sort of man, has not shown much friskiness since he entered the cabinet, though he is giving some sign, of life at present. Gen, Lew Wallace and Col. Beverly Tucker, the former a Union general and the latter a howling Confederate, were put on the commission to go down to Hayti, and staid there two bogrs; when it was learned that Hypory just twas conquerer of the country, Il was discen commission to inquire how ding on a contest there was to end. If feet P. Blaine was ced the president to select Beverly Tucker as a foreign envoy, it can hardly be said that his recommendations are not effective. Nor can this be said of them in face of the fact that Blaine's private secretary has been made consul to Liverpool, one of the fattest gifts of the state department. The physiognomy of this secretary has been printed in the country journals, and does not show a type of greatness above the private secretary order. So that Mr. Blaine seems to be getting along very well so far. Doubtless the president is a slower goer than he would be in his place; but this is hardly misfortune for the country. Jingo

The Cronin mystery does not fade away before the light the detectives and police throw upon it, and it remains in a fine condition for the enterprising genius of the Chicago papers. They sations of the kind that Western readers appear to enjoy and before the thing is worn out the most versatile and rilliant liars in Chicago will probably be quite exhausted. Meanwhile the police are making a good deal of noise over a few men who hardly Detective Bruce gets well advertised by worth the notoriety. Private red a large sum of money to kill ronin and was paid part of it in ad-McGeehan must have reached dest moment of his life, for he is he of those weak-brained noisy villatus lows. He wants to be known as "bad man" with the accent or the "bad," It might do him and the community some good if he would get hung by mistake, for if he does not finally happen to murder some one he certainly encourages murderous thoughts in others. A man who goes about declaring an intention to kill is not a safe member of the community even if he is a liar. McGeehan quarrelled with his wife and left her in Philadelphia because she objected to his constant neglect of work for the Clau-na-Gael and its quarrels, but womanlike she now comes to his defense with the statement that he was opposed to bloodshed and would have nothing to do with it. Now that he seems to have escaped danger by proving an alibi it is hardly likely that the "bad man" will be thankful for this

This ferocious talker illustrates a very common though curious weakness of humanity. The desire to be thought reckless and dangerous is a relie of barbarism not hard to find.

THE May report on the condition of winter grain is very favorable. "The present winter wheat crop has had a good degree of immunity from adverse conditions, from the day of seeding to the present time. With general exemption from drought, a plant bed in medium tilth, mild weather late in autumn for growth of stalk, high winter temperature for root development, least up to February, and an unusual avoidance of injury by the changeableness of March, the condition of wheat in April was necessarily quite favorable, as appeared in the previous report. There was one somewhat remarkable peculiarity of the record of the temperature in February : it was much lower than the normal, and actually lower than in January, except in the South, yet no serious injury to the wheat followed." The report from Lancaster is good, and with the exception of Lackawanna and Venango all wheat reports from Pennsylvania are very cheering. Rye and barley are also generally reported in good condition. Meadows and pastures throughout the country are in fine condi-

THE New Eca pretends to wonder where all the money is to come from to build the forts and ships demanded for the defense of our coasts, and thinks the surplus will not go far to supply the needful. It is quite possible that the Era don't know that it takes a long time to build navies and defenses, and the estimated expenditure must be spread out over many years. Of course, it may be a part of the Republican programme for the maintenance of unnecessary taxation, that money should be spent as rapidly as possible, and it can be squandered on this line very easily; but if the work is carried on with the object of securing defenses instead of spending money, the cost cannot keep pace with the growth of the surplus.

WE publish an account of the rapid extension of the cultivated area of the country taken from the May report on winter grain just issued by the agricultural department. A large portion of this same report is devoted to answering an inquiry of the National Grange as to the export trade in our agricultural products, and the possibility of extending it. In view of the enormous increase of acreage the reply of the department is not encouraging and must be particularly gloomy news for the high tariff farmer. This burean now under control of the high tax men reports as follows: "One-tenth-of our agricultural products s exported. No other nation exports so large a proportion. Yet the articles shipped abroad are few. They are cotton, tobacco, meats, breadstuffs, and cheese. All other articles together are but 3 per cent, of the exports. Seven-tenths of the cotton product seeks foreign markets; the quantity can not be increased except to meet slowly augmenting demand for cotton goods throughout the world, which is at a rate much slower than the growth of agricultural population in the cotton states, The exportation of tobacco is not increasing materally or so rapidly as home consumption, and it can only be enlarged by a reduction in price. The exports of wheat go mostly to one nation, and can not be greatly enlarged, though a slight increase may be effected by a reduction in price. Enlargement of the surplus must inevitably reduce the price of wheat and flour, both at home and abroad."

"What other products can be exported? It is folly to look to foreign nations for a market of any of the bulky products of agriculture which are common to the agrisulture of every nation. The more concentrated products may be profitably ex-ported. More cheese could be sold if its reputation for quality should be kept up, and there were more disposition to eater to fastidious or peculiar foreign tastes. Butter exports could be enlarged if they were of better quality. Evaporated or preserved fruits, oranges of the Southern or Pacific coasts, wines from Calfornia, may seek a profitable market, as surplus stocks, as a safety valve to the home market. It should be the policy of all agricultural organizations to promote variety of production, first to tempt new demands for consumption, and ultimately to enlarge the list of exportable products. '

Butter, cheese and dried fruit are the only things that the poor farmer may have to lean upon, as the vast West is turned into a grain field and the value of his products falls. Europe may need it, but she can not take it, for we refuse even raw materials in exchange, SENATOR HENRY B. PAYNE, of Ohio, has declared he will not be a candique for re-election. He says he has reached a period in life when he wishes rest from public service. Democrats in Cleveland do not think that Calvin 8, Brice will be a candi-date, but John McLean, George H. Pendle ton, ex-Congressman James E. Campbell, and Judge Seney are all mentioned.

For the past twenty years he conducted the Keystone, one of years he conducted the Keystone, one of the leading hotels in that city, until last May, when he transferred his interest to his son-in-law, ex-Postmaster Whitner, He was also interested in the Reading terra cotta works and leaves a large estate.

GENERAL DRUM'S RETIREMENT. Career of a Brigadier Who Rose From the Ranks. Adjutant General Richard C. Drum was on Tuesday placed on the retired list of the army on account of age. General Drum is believed to be the first private sol-dier that ever attained the rank of brigadier general in the regular army of the 1 nited States. Since his promotion to that grade it has been attained by another man —Chief Signal Officer A. W. Greely— —Chief Signal Officer A. W. Greely—who also began as a private. General Drom is a native of Westmoreland county. Pa., and is 62 years of age. He enlisted for the Mexican war in Deember, 1846, and was commissioned second lieutenant on February 18, 1847, through the influence of Simon Cameron. He served with Scott in all his battles. When the rebellion broke out he was assigned to duty at San Francisco, and on When the rebellion broke out he was as-signed to duty at San Francisco, and on March 13, 1865, was breveted brigadier general for faithful and meritorious ser-vices in the adjutant general's office dur-ing the war. While serving under Lieu-tenant General Sheridan at Chicago as assistant adjutant general of the military division of the Missouri, in 1877, he rendered valuable assistance to his commander in subdiving the most that commander in subduing the moo that attempted to secure possession of the city during the great labor troubles. On the death of Adjutant General Townsend, in 1878, General Drum was appointed his successor, with the rank of brighdier general. The most exciting episade of his administration arose from the proposition to return the rebel flags to the Southern states. This was in June, 1887, and President Cleveland was forced to bear the brunt of the Grand Army of the Republic's wrath until it was discovered that the proposition had originated with General Drum, in a letter of April 30 to the secretary of war.

General Kelton, who has been assistant adjutant general, will act as adjutant general until an appointment is made to fill the office.

A Hungry Man's Desperation.

George H. Vere, an English law clerk, a slender, dark-complexioned man of medium height and middle age, who had been wandering the streets of New York penniless and sick in the rain for four nights, and who for three days has been without food, passing by Delmonico's on Monday night caught glimpses of the gay throng eating and drinking comfortably within, and expressed his exasperation at the sight by smashing with a paving stone one of the windows on the Broadway side. As he expresses it himself:

"I was going past, and I saw the swells inside cating and drinking, and clinking their glasses and looking so happy, and careless, and I thought lish't it a paradox that I should be wandering about out here in the wet, ragged and cold and miserable, while others so near are feasting on the most expensive luxuries they can find! Then I had a sudden impulse: I was half mad with hunger and with the sciaticar in my head, and I didn't care what I did nor what the consequences were. I didn't threat the stead of the state of the state of the part anylogy for the A Hungry Man's Desperation.

what the consequences were. I didn't throw the stone to hurt anybody, for the shades were drawn on that side, and I couldn't even see that there was anybody near the window."

Vere was seized at once by persons who saw him throw the stone, and handed over saw him throw the stone, and handed over to a policeman who came up a moment later. He was held at Jefferson market court on Tuesday in $1,000 bail for trial on a charge of malicious mischief, and was locked up in default of bail. He said he was a law clerk in Lincoln's Inn, London, was a law clerk in Lincour's lim, London, that he came out here two years ago and went to Florida, where he worked on an orange grove during the season. Vere was taken sick after he got to New York with rheumatism and lay in Brooklyn lodging houses until a few days ago. He a little money, but soon had to fall upon his clothes to get food. He had a little money, but soon had to fall back upon his clothes to get food. He asked for work at dozens of places and was willing to do anything. His appearance was against him, for all his good clothes had gone to buy food. Five days ago the last of his money was gone, he had nothing more to pawn, and he had to spend his nights on the streets.

"THAT EXASPERATING BLUNDER! What President Harrison Says of Reverly Tucker's Appointment.

Both Harrison and Blaine are in a state of irritation over the Haytian commission. The interview between them Tuesday morning might have been somewhat heated if it had not been that Blaine brought Lew Walkace with him. Wallace had just been to tell Blaine what he wanted to tell the president—that he did not want to tell the president—that he did not want to go to Hayti; that he wanted to go on to West Point as a member of the board of visitors, which was the business which brought him hither, and that unless his presence on the Haytian commission was considered indispensable he must decline. The president told him to wait until it should be finally determined whether any commission should be sent to Hayti. Then the president saked Blaim how he came the president asked Blaine how he came to recommend such a man as Beverly Tacker, whom he had been told was not only indicted for conspiracy in connection with the assassination of President Lincoln and in connection with an attempt to introduce yellow fever into Northern cities dur-ing the war, and other anti-Union plots but whose accounts as consul to Liverpool, before the war, had never been settled be-cause of a deficiency of $21,000, Blaine is reported to have said that he was not aware that any of these charges had been proved against Tucker, and that in the absence of proof he would accept Tucker's denial, especially as President Grant himself had invited Tucker back from Canada; President Hayes had ap-pointed him a Chinese commissioner, and President Garneld a visitor to the nava academy, to say nothing of other appointments under Republican administrations. ments under Republican administrations. He said that Tucker had been recom-mended to him by ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, and Stephen B. Elkins, his son-in-law, who had taken Tucker into business relations, namely West Virginia Central railroad, of which Binine is also a director. The presi-dent told Blaine frankly that he thought he had made a great blunder, which would harm his administration, because no good explanation of it could be offered. The only thing to do now was to try to repair

Blaine left the White House to go down he river with the party invited to meet Sir Julian Pauncefote in a much I more metancholy most than when he went in. His guests could not help commenting upon it. As for the president, he has talked of little than "that exasperating blunder," as he terms it.

Mysterious Mali Robberles.

The mails arriving in Reading for the past year have been mysteriously and systematically robbed, and the officials are entirely at sea as to who is the thief. Letters containing checks, drafts, postal orders, etc., have been missing by the wholesale, etc., have been missing by the wholesale, and half a dozen inspectors, who have been unable to ferret out the guilty parties. Mails coming from New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg are alike robbed and a mystery surrounds their disappearance which is simply unexplainable. One Reading firm last week alone lost sixteen hundred dollars in checks and drafts, and others have similar reports to make. Among have similar reports to make. Among business men the excitement is great. The payment of the stolen checks and drafts was stopped.

He Fought Against Napoleon. 232 From the Little Falls (N. Y.) Times, On Saturday Martin Yagens, of this village, will celebrate his one hundredth birthday. He is probably the oldest per-son in the Mohawk Valley. For the past two weeks he has been in rather feeble health, but is able to move about, though he is obliged to rest on a couch occasionally during the day. Otherwise he bears his great age remarkably well. Mr. Yagens was born in Schles-wig-Holstein in 1789. He fought in the battle of Waterloo on the victorious side and still distinctly remembers that bloody contest which ended so disastrously for the great Napoleon. He came to this country in 1848 and in 1860 motors! From Albany to Little Falls, where he has since resided. George Baker, of this village, who is married to Mr. Yagen's stepdaughter, has documentary evidence showing that Mr. Yagens is as old as he claims to be. He has been the father of twenty-two children, of whom only two survive, Mrs. Peter Flood and Miss Lizzie Yagens, both residents of Little Falls.

THAT We can do nothing unnatural or impossible. We can't puint a cork so as to resemble a rock that it'll sink to the bottom if cast into a stream, but

THAT We are selling all kinds of Season-able Clothing, Furnishing Goods at prices which we guarantee are the Lowest in this or any city in the Union.
