hear the laughter of a child Down where the meadow banks are all retted with shifting lights and wild, And dreamy shadows fall.

I see two passing, where I stand;
I catch the sweet soft undertone;
But they are walking hand in hand,
And I am here alone.

No statutory enactment was ever hailed with greater satisfaction than the prize law of the Connecticut Legislature, which forbids hens to trespass on other people's gardens, the penalty for violating it being a fine of $7, with costs, to be inflicted on the owner of the trespassing hens. The effect of the law has been magical; hens no longer rule in that state. One may ride for many miles in the country and not a hen will he see. Every fowl is sequestered behind picket fences whose pales are 15 feet high. The result is that peace prevails everywhere in the rural districts, the cause of most petty bickerings between neighbors having been abated, and it is the opinion of many country people that he opinion of many country people that other presently.

Some farmers, however, cannot believe that the gallinaceous millentum has really come to pass, so they have taken the pains to hang "ne trespassing" signs on their premises to ward off a danger that wise and great legislation has already averted. Notable among the husbandmen who have done so is Mr. Cephas Williams, of Voluntown, on the eastern border of Connecticut, who has long been troubled with the hens of neighbors. A few days ago he had painted an elaborate sign, and he erected it in his garden, so that everyone who passes his house may read in large letters:

NOTICE.

We hereby forbid any hens or chickens trespassing or scratching on these premises after this date on penalty of the law.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the precise remedy to remove the obstruction effectually, but without drenching or weakening the blockaded bowels, a consequence always to be apprehended from the use of violent laxatives, which are among the most permicious of the cheap nostroms swallowed by the credulous and misinformed. The flat of experience, and of the medical fraternity, sanction the claims of the medical fraternity, sanction the claims of this standard aperient.
