The Great Flood. aly news in the journals, the sought of the people, is of the life and property stands unc-in the annals of this country, or other in its modern history. dark distinction it is indebted valley, where nearly all the loss d. The cause of this is occurred. The cause of this is ar believed to be the bursting of the reservoir, eighteen miles from lown, which filled the narrow valith its torrent. It has not een positively ascertained that water did the damage, and its rg owners suggest that a dam at station, four miles from Cresson, have been the one that broke. cems to be little reason for this ion, which comes naturally from horror stricken at the thought of baster charged to their property. Is to be said for them that, if their did break, they can hardly be the engineers of the Pennsylvania d company and of the Cambria company. To every one who of the immense less caused by the g of this dam, the reflection must why was it not foreseen by the of the great companies that had the at stake? That it was not forion of the result that has would have caused compt abatement of so terrible a There are stories affont that m was suspected to be weak; but all such tales may be rejected in of the interests involved in its If they are true, we can only a great carelessness in the offiof these corporations, or a lack of

All was needed for safety was repair to the adjacent hills; that which was needed to prompt flight was the knowledge depth of water that would fill the y, when the greatest possible was let into it. It was a simple ledge; one largely of mathematicalculation; the width of the being known and the poswater being a matter of form by far the largest pro-rately faced death for a pur-

and the victims were men who

the earth in a few moments with all their property, leaving not even a will or any trace of a lifework, leaving in many cases a solltary mother, child or husband half wild with grief and lonely.

The soldiers of the war on both sides died for a purpose which they believed worthy the sacrifice of life, with all the glamor of martial glory around them and the flerce excitement of desperate battle. The victims of the flood met death in its most awful forms by fire and flood. No inspiring music, thundering cannon or patriotic sentiment nerved the thousands to meet their fearful doom and yet there are true stories of heroic deeds of women, men and children that pale the fame of martial heroes, and many a noble death can never be recorded by earthly chronicles.

The Governor and the Judges.

We failed to guess rightly what Gov. Beaver would do with the judges' salary bill. He vetoed it. With protestations of the highest regard for the judiciary and extremest pain at being obliged to do it, the governor did it. He did it because the spirit moved him to. The governor has a spirit that is not always asily read. The reason the governor gives is that the constitution forbids the increase of a state officer's salary during his term. This clearly forbids the judges now on the bench from receiving an increase of salary; and the law, if it had been signed, would have applied only to judges bereafter to be elected. But the governor says truly that the law was passed with intent that it should benefit the present judges; and he seems to fear to trust its interpretation to the judiciary, lest they should take the salary; which action be truly says would bring the body into contempt among the people. The only difficulty in the governor's position is the necessity it puts him under of supposing that the judges would defy the constitution to get $1,000 a year for themselves; which is a rather severe reflection upon the judiciary. Certainly they may not be a very extra lot, as a body; but we doubt whether they are as bad as the governor makes them out.

UNDESCRIPTED bodies are being buried at Johnstown without photographing. The neglect of this simple and effective measure is an outrage upon the relatives and friends of the victims,

A YEAR ago thousands were drowned by the floods in China, and famine is still busy among the survivors. These wholesale calamities can not be realized until they come near home.

THE first reservoir built on the site of the one that is supposed to have given way with such appalling result, was the one constructed for the purpose of supplying water to the old canal across the Alle ghenies before the days of railroads. The site was purchased from the Pennsylvania railroad in 1879, by the South Fork Hunting and Fishing club, who rebuilt the ruined dam at an expense o 17,000. The wall of the re-constructed dam was three hundred and eighty feet thick, at the base, and thirty-five feet thick at the top, but some residents of the valley expressed fears that the work was not strong enough and asked that experts should examine it. The Cambria iron works, the Pennsylvania railroad and the hunting and fishing club each selected an engineer. Nathan McDowell represented the club. This board made a careful examination ore. But the people felt no fear, And pronounced the wall perfectly safe, but ing the flood to subside, as before. suggested some precautionary measures which were fully carried out. Pittsburg engineers and members of the club decline to believe that this dam has given way and think that the bursting of the dam at Lilly Station may have furnished the rushing wall of water spoken of in all accounts. It is also suggested that the banking of wreckage against the bridge may have formed a dam, which by its sudden sweeping away overwhelmed the valley towns, Disease and Death Force their way into many a household that might be protected from their inroads, by the simple precaution of keeping in the house that benign family medicine and safeguard of health, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, Particularly where there are children, should it be kept on hand, as a prompt remedy for infantile com-plaints, in their outset easily conquerable, but which, if allowed to engraft themselves on the delicate childish organism, are not easily dislodged, and speedily work grievous mischief. Irregularity of the bowels, indigestion and biliousness, are allments of common occurrence in the household. Children, fiving in malarloos regions, are more liable to be attacked with chills and fever than adults, and the ravages of that fell disease in their system are speedier and more serious. In remote localities, far from professional aid, it is especially desirable.
