ADDRESS, THE INTELLIGENCER, Lancaster, Pa.

LANCASTER, PA., July 23, 1889. The Bar Criticising the Bench. Fifty members of the Berks county armore than one-half the whole numer, and fully one-half in the weight of mal eminence and worth—have cined in a vigorous public protest scainst the candidacy of President Judge For reasons that will readily suggest themselves, some of the more conspicuous members of the bar, such as George F. Baer, Cyrus G. Derr and Daniel Ermenrout, are not among the signers of this manifesto, although it may be inferred with reasonable certainty that a con-siderable number of attorneys not sign-ing have refrained from no lack of sympathy with the purpose to displace the judge. Such a movement, so frankly and vigorously avowed, cannot fail to have great significance. The discussion which it precipitates upon the political and professional circles of our neighboring county is a great scandal. Judge Hagenmann is a badly libelled man or the judicial office in Berks has been shamefully misused.

The indictment which so large and respectable an element of his bar frames against this venerable personage, comprehends nearly everything except direct corruption and incurable imbecility with which a judge may be blamable. He is accused of evading responsibility, of neglecting duty, of wilfully speeding the cause of one suitor and unworthily delaying that of another, of prostituting his office for political and personal ends, and of displaying gross favoritism in the dispensation of justice. What will be the effect of proving or of failing to prove these charges remains to be seen. Nothing can safely be predicted as the likely outcome of the queer politics of Berks county. Here in Lancaster, however, we have so long been accus-tomed to see fools win and knaves succonful at the primaries that we have no reason to boast of any superior virtue as a community. Judge Hagenmann has long been known-not greatly to his credit-over the state, as an astute politician; and he may now circumvent his enemies and put them to confusion; in which event, if he does not greatly alter his disposition, the half hundred lawyers who have had the temerity to berate him will be made to feel his wrath.

In any event their outspokenness on this occasion is a foreible illustration of the rights of the members of the bar in Pennsylvania to criticise the bench, which were for the first time laid down by the supreme court of Pennsylvania in the case ex parte Steinman and Hensel, 1880, (14 Norris 220). Quoting from Chief Justice Sharswood's exposition of the law in that case the Reading attor-

"Our duty to address you upon this sub-ject has been thus defined by our supreme court: 'It is the right and duty of a lawyer to bring to the notice of the people, who elect the judges, every instance of what he believes to be corruption or partisanship. Na class in the community ought to be No class in the community ought to be allowed freer scope in the expression or publication of opinion as to the capacity, impartiality or integrity of judges than members of the bar. They have the best opportunities of observing and forming a correct judgment. They are in constant attendance at the courts. Hundreds of those who are called on to vote never enter a court room, or if they do, it is only at intervals as invors, witnesses or parties." In tervals as jurors, witnesses or parties, 'In this appeal to you to restore to its proper standard the dignity and efficiency of our standard the dignity and efficiency of our local judiciary, we expressly disclaim any personal, selfish or malevolent motives, but earnestly assure you that we are actuated solely by a sense of that public responsibility in the premises, indicated by the utterance of the tribunal above quoted, and which, though we are reluctant to assume, we have no disposition to evade."

Of course had the views of Judge Patterson, and his action against the editors of the INTELLIGENCER in the case referred to, been affirmed by the higher tribunal, no such criticism as that now directed against Judge Hagenman would have been uttered or tolerated. The authors of it could have been hauled before the court wherein they practiced and stripped of their profession without redress or-before the act of 1879-without even the right of an appeal and rehearing. That act alone made the appeal possible; and the opin-ion of Judge Sharswood, which was unanimously concurred in by his colleagues, was the first judicial declaration by the supreme court of the new rights of lawyers since the judiciary became elective and the liberty of the press was defined by the bill of rights of the constitution of 1874.

It of course seems monstrous, even at this short distance from that memorable case, to have ever had it maintained that attorneys-at-law, best of all qualified to discuss the shortcomings of the judiciary and most interested to expose and cure them, should of all electors be silenced. And yet that is exactly what was contended for by the eminent members of the profession who volunteered as amici curiæ for Judge Patterson. How disastrous to the freedom of their profession, and how destructive of the popular right to make selection of judges an affirmance of their position would have been, can now be clearly seen. As a rule the members of the bar are loath to proclaim in public the opinions of the court which they are so free to express in private; but when the emergency arises for them to "bring to the notice of the people who elect the judges" their demerits, if they have the temerity to do it it is a great blessing that they have the privilege, under the

Resting at Deer Park.

Our president is seeking rest and shade ander the trees at Deer Park, Md. He estching the cooling breeze and resting his weary body at the same beauti-tal resort where his predecessor spent he short happy days of his honeymoon. With one eye on his wily secretary of de and the other on Baby McKee he passing a few days of doubtful quiet. th mind intent alike on his message o the extra session of Congress and the ions of his ancestral hat, he is ratching the fluttering of the leaves of be elm and the beech. We trust that the zephyrs which brought such happiand contentment to the illustrious egroom a few years ago may soothe tired brain and re-invigorate the eded body of our chief executive. Now that Senator Cooper is collector of the port, it is to be hoped the Philadel-phia politicians will not disturb his midsummer retreat. We trust for his sake he may not behold in every gnarled oak the hard and leathery face of the office seeker; that in the fury of the summer storms which sweep over his head he may not discern the rage of the disappointed candidates for consu-lates and collectorships. Professional politicians and office-seekers know no vacation, and our president is fortunate, indeed, if the woods about his cottage are thick enough to be impenetrable to them. Instead of grinding out consulates and postmasters, let our executive for the next month, in company with the governmental grand-son, catch the spreckled trout or, tramp-ing over the bills, learn the craft of the backwoodsman. It never hurts a government, as it never hurts a man, to take a vacation, and in these days we might be entirely without a personal ruler without any serious loss. Mr. Blaine might, with advantage to himself and the country, visit the fishing banks of Newfoundland. The exportation of gold would continue, and government bonds yield the same interest whether Mr. Windom be in Washing-ton or Alaska. Mr. Noble could do no damage if he made a flying visit to his Indian wards on the reservations, for Corporal Tanner is dispensing pensions with criminal lavishness under his very nose. John Wanamaker could go to Sunday school pienies for a month without at all interfering with the carrying of the mails. The war and navy departments could not be more inactive did the one secretary study the mode of warfare along the Nile and the other hunt for whate in the waters of Greenland. In the department of justice there are no courts until September and the law's delays have never been a serious consideration. Even old Uncle Jerry Rusk might with advantage take a lesson in practical farming among the grain fields of the Northwest. He could smoke his cigar on the broad porch of a cattle ranch as placidly as in front of the Riggs house. With all his secretaries thus scattered from the seat of danger, Harrison could peacefully recuperate. He could bring back to Washington not only a sun-burned and vigorous body but he could perhaps put some life into an administration that has as yet done little to commend itself to the Wagner's Apotheosis.

On last Saturday the Wagner festival opened at Bayreuth, with the production of "Parsifal." This opera is given in this Bavarian town every year regularly during one of the summer months. As is usual the attendance was enormous, hundreds being turned away from the doors. Special trains carrying thousands of music-loving people run from Nuremburg and return after the performance is over. During the intermissions the theatre emptics itself, and the people pour over the delightful grounds about the theatre where refreshments are served. The performance extends over about six hours. Many tourists from other countries make this town of Bayreuth an objective point in order to witness this wonderful production. Its increasing popularity stamps it as one of the masterpieces of the greatest musician of the 19th century. It not only is a credit to the German people to thus honor the man that was so long persecuted, but it is a tribute to the final triumph of Wagner's own particular system of musical composition. His method of expression and his persistent denunciation of all other systems, as irremediably false, had aroused the bitter antagonism of not only the Jacoban musicions but of other cour tries as well. The genius and indemitable will of Wagner, however, together with his unbounded faith in himself, finally overcame the prejudices of the German people. And here in this small Bavarian town, in the presence alike of royalty and common folk, natives and foreign born, he even though dead is meeting his just reward in this musical exposition of the oft told story of the Holy Grail.

BROTHER SHUMAKER had to step down and out because he was caught kissing the He should have heeded the classic warning Ne sutor ultra crepidam ; which, being interpreted, is that the shoemaker should not get above his business,

WITH President Harrison congratulating the British queen on the birth of a new royal grandbaby; with John Jarrett apologizing to the English people for any ill he may have spoken of the "free traders" last fall; with Russell Harrison sleeping in Windsor Castle and bragging of it, and with English manufacturers shipping in great cargoes of wool waste at trifling rates, in ruinous competition with the American flock masters, is it not about time Blaine gives the lion's tail a real vigorous twist? Ah! there, J. G. B!

The popularity of our national game of base ball, particularly in the large cities, can hardly be called in question. Yester day the New York and Philadelphia clubs played an eleven inning game in the latter city. During the whole of the game two thousand men and boys stood in front of the World's bulletin in New York. The movement of the whole game was exhibited by means of moveable blocks and figures, and every base hit, stolen base and error was followed with intense interest by the excited crowd. When the New Yorks made a run the cheers could be heard blocks away, and when the Phillies finally won the game the groans of the disappointed were as loud as their early cheers. Several of the New York dailies recognize this wonderful enthusiasm over the game, and issue what they call sporting extras late in the afternoon, which find ready sale among all classes of people.

It is a strange economy in the management of our city affairs which will authorize the laying of a cement pavement on an alley while many squares of wide streets are permitted to be full of mud-holes. Why is it necessary to pave with cement the square of Christian street between East Chestnut and East Orange streets? Is it to benefit a few citizens who have stables on this alley, or is it to give some one a paying job? It is true that there is considerable travel over this one square, but would not an ordinary macadamization answe the purpose instead of the costly cement? Our street committee if they have money to spend ould use it to more advantage and benefit to the taxpayers did they maadamize some of the squares of West James street, or in other parts of the northern and western sections of the city. It looks a little suspicious—at least it is a somewhat lavish expenditure of money.

Our esteemed adversary the Examiner reprints from the New York Tribune a note of warning to the protectionists who raised the corruption fund that elected Harrison, in the name of "Protection to American Labor," that had the people who voted them into power by a slender electoral majority known they would so soon band together to stop competition, raise prices and lower wages, the result would have been different. When even the Tribune gets its eyes open daylight has broken upon the masses.

What shall it profit an Ohio Republican in this full's election to have a wool tariff of 60 per cent, when Republican appraisers let in English manufactured wool "waste" at 10 per cent. duty? Referred to John Normine more ill-timed, impertinen Normino more ill-timed, impertment and inconsiderate has been heard in public for some time than the appeal of seven "colored ministers" from Pittsburg, claiming to represent 25,000 "colored citizens of Allegheny county," to Governor Beaver to not honor the requisition of the governor of South Carolina for a negro charged with murder in that state, who has been approchaged in Western Paraget. been apprehended in Western Pennsylrania. These fellows undertake to question the processes of a sister state and to excuse the crime with which their race brother is charged upon the ground that he committed the murder as a political necessity. Upon such a flimsy pretext they would have the governor of Pennsylvania ignore his obvious duty and set the fearful example, which might so soon return to plague us, of denying to another state the right to reclaim fugitives from its jurisdiction and to try them under its own laws. If the color or politics of fugitive felons is to be inquired into before they are returned for trial; or if, instead of being yielded to the jurisdiction in which they are charged, they are to be judged amid the yelpings of their sympathizers, all comities between the states might as well be wiped out at once, and Pennsylvania make proclamation that she will not respect that provision of the federal constitution which says (Art. 4, Sec. 2) "A person charged in any state with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled be delivered up to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime." That settles it.

St. Paul, Minn., which in 1880 had 40,-000 population, anticipates the new census with a directory count that enumerates 200,000. Conceding as many to Minneapolis that joint municipality, almost entirely grown up with this present generation, now has twofold more people than had old Athens at the height of its glory. And yet even the "twin cities," "Time's nobles offering," do not yet claim to hold temples like the Parthenon, rulers as just as Aristides, soldiers like Miltiades, philosophers as wise as Plato, sages such as Solon, poets so rare as Æschylus, sculptors of the genius of Phidias, or orators of Demos-has a decided taste for studies in natural history, and woe to the bug, beetle or but-terfly which comes within her reach. She does not share in the general aversion of the reptile family, but handles toads, liz-ards and even snakes familiarly and fearlessly. One day last week she was at Peak's Island with friends, and in their rambles about the fields and swamps she bagged a number of specimens. Among then was a green snake about two feet long. The sight of the squirmish creature evoked screams from the other feminine members of the party. signt of the squirmish creature evoked screams from the other feminine members of the party, but the young naturalist caught it up and allowed it to coil about her wrist. This was too much for the feeling of her friends, however, and after a while she slipped the snake into her pocket for want of better accommodations. Presently the snake was fogotten. The party boarded one of the Casco Bay company's boats, and when about half way to the city a great commotion was suddenly caused among the passengers by the appearance of a green snake crawling upon the deck. Ladies screamed and jumped upon the seats or fled incontinently, and some of the sterner sex were somewhat taken by surprise at the sight of a serpent in that unexpected place. The young lady, as soon as she realized the situation, sprang to recover her property, but too late. A boat hand pitched the reptile overboard, and science had met with another loss.
