PUT A TIE ON THE TRACK.

WAYNE WHITNYER TRIES TO WRECK PREIGHT TRAIN NEAR EPHRATA.

The Accused Given a Hearing By Justice Seltzer and Committed to Prison For Trial at the August Sessions.

Constable Schnader, of Ephrata town-ship, lodged Wayne Whitmyer in the county jail on Wednesday afternoon on a charge of attempting to wreck a freight train on the Reading & Columbia railroad near Ephrata. The complaint against him was made by D. K. Morgan, the railroad agent at Ephrata station, before Justice

The offense was committed shortly before neon. Two freight trains close together passed Whitmyer he placed a railroad tie on the track, but it was removed by two men and the wreck of the second train prevented. These two men were walking on the track towards the creek and when they only a short distance shead of them. They removed the tie and by walking rapidly soon caught up to him. One of them in-duced Whitmyer to go to the creek with him to fish, and the other made an excuse to go back to Ephrata. His real errand him what the boy had done. The ruse worked and Whitmyer went to the creek and was fishing when arrested by the con-

He admitted his guilt when charged with the offense and implicated a son of Abe Buzzard in the crime. Inquiry was made by the constable and he learned that Buzzard had been working all morning at threshing and was not away from the others employed at the same place. Whit-myer was told this and he then said he charged Buzzard with being an accomplice because he wanted a companion to share the penalty with him, and he selected Buzzard as his party.

Justice Seltzer gave the boy a hearing soon after his arrest and in default of bail ecommitted him to the county prison for trial at the August quarter sessions court. Whitmyer has a bad reputation in the neighborhood. He was formerly an inmate of the House of Refuge where he was sent for his bad conduct.

Whitmyer was seen by an Intelligen-cer reporter in his ceil at the county prison orning. He said he was 19 years old and his parents live near the Ephrata Mountain springs; that he was in the House of Refuge at Philadelphia for a year and a-half, but was released five months ago. His parents put him there and they had him discharged. Yesterday morning while walking on the railroad track the idea possessed him to wreck a train of cars and he threw the tie on the track with that intention after the first train passed. When he did it he did not think of the cousequences. In conclusion he said that no one helped him to commit the offense. He did it alone and he used young Bazzard's name without any reason, for he had noth-

An Unhappy Car Driver. The maddest man in town at times is the driver of the Millersville car. As is well known, three large buildings are being erected in the first two squares of North Queen street, and the builders are occupying as much room as it is possible for them to get. Bricks and other material are piled up along the car track. The great source of annovance to the car man is the brick baulers. They dump many of their loads either on or very close to the car tracks. At times the driver is obliged to stop for some time, get out of the car and throw the bricks from the track. Those people inside who are in a hurry curse and swear, while those who don't care give the driver the laugh. Large wagons, with heavy loads for the buildings, also block the tracks, and the lot of the car driver is anything but a happy one.

Having a Fine Time.
The Lancaster Piscatorial and Recreation club, now in camp in Sheibley's woods, along the Conestoga, near Oregon, is having a great time. Yesterday they had a number of visitors from Lancaster, and the callers were handsomely entertained. In the afternoon Rote, the photographer, who is a member of the club, took a photograph of them as they sat upon a tree of tremendous size which is lying on the ground, having been blown over by a storm. In the evening Knight's orchestra went out to the camp in an omnibus and played many selections, after which they were given an elegant lunch. There has been very little fishing, as the river has been high.

A Hint to Major Griest, Charley, Long, John B. Rehm and Squire Pinkerton. Washington Corr. N. Y. Sun.

The Philadelphia clothing house of Wanamaker & Co. is, according to a story told by some of the Texas Republicans, again making hay while the sun of a Republican administration shines upon it. On Saturday last Joseph W. Burke was appointed internal revenue collector for the Third Texas district. The manner in which the appointment was brought about is, to say the least, a little peculiar, he was endorsed for the place by only one man of prominence in Texas Republican politics. Chairman Degrees, of the state committee. He has not been prominent in politics, and the leading Republicans of the state have been in some doubt whether he was a Republican or a Democrat. National Committeeman Cuncy Brewster, defeated candidate for Congress in the Seventh Texas district, which includes the Third internal revenue district, and other prominent Republicans had endorsed for the place Lock McDaniel, forner candidate for Congress in the First district. On account of the disparity in the backing of the two men, McDaniel's appointment was confidently expected by those interested. But Mr. Degress, it seems, knows a trick or two, and two weeks ago he proceeded to play his last card. Burke runs a clothing store in Austin, and is a respectable merchant, who has the reputation of paying his bills.

"Burke," said the astute chairman one recent day, "it is about time to lay in your fall stock of clothing; where do you buy goods?"

"Sometimes in St. Louis and sometimes in Chicago," said the merchant.

"Well, if I were you, "was Degress' rejoinder, "I would try Wanamaker & Co., of Philadelphia. I hear they are a good firm to deal with."

So Mr. Burke took the train to Philadelphia. He bought a nice line of goods for his Austin store, and made arrangements for a continuance of the friendly relations thus begun. On leaving the store he said to Mr. Robert Ogden, the business manager:

"By the way, Mr. Ogden, I am a candidate for the internal revenue collectorship at Austin, and as I am on the way to Washington Pd like to make the acquaintance of Mr. Wanamaker, the postmaster-general."

ington I'd like to make the acquaintance of Mr. Wanamaker, the postmaster-general."

"Certainly," was Mr. Ogden's prompt response and he sat down and wrote a letter to his chief, warmly commending Mr. Burke as a man and merchant. Burke came to Washington with the letter, presented it to Wanamaker, and in a few minutes was on his way to the office of the secretary of the treasury with a letter of introduction from Mr. Wanamaker in his pocket. Though the postmaster general had never seen Burke before, and knew nothing about him, except what his manager, Mr. Ogden had written, he commended Burke to Secretary Windom as a moral and religious gentleman, a high-toned merchant, and worthy Republican. That was on Friday. The next day Burke's appointment was announced at the White House.

To say that the Texas Republicans who relate this interesting story are indignant at the good merchant from Philadelphia would be a mild statement of the case.

SCRANTON'S DOUBLE HORROR.

A Cave-in Followed by a Fatal FireDamp Explosion.

The Central colliery of the Delaware, was the scene of a double disaster on Wednesday, the first being an extensive cave-in, which occurred at five o'clock in the morning, doing great damage to surface property and destroying many dwellings, and the second an explosion of firedamp, which took place in the afternoon, killing two miners outright and severely injuring six others. The killed are Robert Roberts, aged 42, and John Williams, aged

23. The injured are Patrick Bennett,
Thomas James, Benjamin James, John

The owners of the Central mine have re-cently been robbing pillars, which consists in removing the coal supports that were left to sustain the roof when the work of mining was carried on several years ago, and as a result the surface has been caving and as a result the surface has been caving in. The morning's cave-in extended over nearly three blocks in the neighborhood of Luzerne street and adjacent thoroughfares, and was unusually severe. It startled the people from their beds, and many ran in terror from their houses, which were badly shaken by the upheaval. The walls of several houses were ripped then, others were moved from their foundations, and in the lawns and gardens were numerous fissures extending a considerable distance. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a fire-damp explosion occurred in the depth of the mine, some 300 feet below the surface, where a gang of men were at work removing rails and other railroad property out of the subterranean storm. The air current was good when they began work.

out of the subterranean storm. The air current was good when they began work, but as the caving-in process progressed it gradually forced the fire-damp upon them until it came in contact with their mine lamps and produced a terrific crash. The force of the great explosion was distinctly felt on the surface, and blew the whistle in the engineer's room at the head house. He did stay sober for a couple of days, but could stand it no longer and again began drinking. He is the owner of several

TWO PENITENTS.

LANDISVILLE, July 25.—The services yesterday afternoon and evening were well attended. Rev. J. W. Sayres, chaplain of the Pennsylvania division, Grand Army of the Republic, presched the afternoon sermon, using as his text 2d Kings, 7th chapter and 3d verse. He dwelt at length on God's provision for the salvation of a famishing world, and likened mankind to the ten lepers who stood outside of the city, reasoning "why do we stand here and

The children's meeting was conducted by Rev. Charles Roads, who gave an illus-tration of the text "My cup runneth over." An improvised well, with cups of different sizes and colors, in connection with a black board, illustrated with colored crayon, was used to impress the lesson. Each cup represented an individual coming to Christ. The last illustration was that of a growing person coming, and was shown by means of a telescope cup, each draught of the cup representing a different stage of life. The water was drawn from the well by a bucket and rope. The lesson was in-teresting, and listened to with attention by the little folks. Rev. Shoesmith also delivered an address to the little ones. At 6 o'clock Mrs. Henry Wheeler conducted a "holiness" meeting in the prayer meeting tent. The subject was that of entire consecration. The meeting partook of the nature of a testimonial meeting, and many persons alluded to their experiences in a Christian life.

Rev. Shoesmith, of Mount Joy, preached last evening's sermon, using as his text "To him that believeth, Christ is precious." He referred to the importance of Christian sympathy, and delivered an excellent sermon, which was attentively listened to by the large audience. At the conclusion of the sermon the meeting was turned into a revival service, which was conducted by Rev. Crouch, assisted by all the ministers in attendance. Two penitents sought the altar. One was converted before the close of the meeting.

At the close of the evening service reception to the young people was given by the Young People's association. An address was made by Rev. Crouch, and singing was furnished by the entire assembly. The reception was largely at-tended and much appreciated. Refreshments were served. Prof. William Kirkpatrick, of Philadelphia, arrived yesterday morning and has taken charge of the music. Samuel Burns, Dr. Witherow and Aug. Reinoehl, whose families are encamped here but who are themselves detained in the city by business, come out each night, returning to the city in the morning.

The consecration service this morning was conducted by Mr. George Brubaker, of Williamsport.

This morning's sermon was delivered by Rev. J. F. Meredith, presiding elder of the Northwestern district of Philadelphia conference. He used for his text the 8th and 9th verses of the 15th chapter of St. Luke. Prefacing his remarks Rev. Meredith said he felt that he had a particular right to preach here, as he had preached the first sermon ever preached on these grounds.

The Salt Trust The subscriptions to the North American Salt company have closed in London. The shareholders-which means the English Salt shareholders-which means the English Salt Union—subscribed £663,000 and the public £510,000. These figures were secured from one of the promoters, who wondered how the American public was buying. It is considered curious by shrewd business men that the promoters of the company did not give an inkling of the profits of salt making in the states and Canada. The prospectus simply sets forth one point, that of revenue: "It is believed that with improved methods the average net profit improved methods the average net profit of four cents a bushel can be relied on." Such profit on ten million bargels would give £400,000 on £3,000,000 of capital, the prospectus states, but not a word about past profits.

LANCASTER, PA., THURSDAY, JUBY 25, 1889.

From the Pittsburg Telegraph.

A new cigar-making machine will, in a few days, be introduced which is expected to a large extent revolutionize this branch of manufacture and make the inventors immensely wealthy.

The machine, it has already been demonstrated to an exceedingly satisfactory degree by practical tests, will do all the work for which it is intended.

It will out, press, bind and wrap cigars with lightning rapidity, and completes the most fragran: weeds equal to any handmade.

It is a simple an annual of the control of the contro with lightning rapidity, and completes the most fragran: weeds equal to any handmade.

It is a simple arrangement. The tobacco is first laid in a tray or feeder, the bottom of which moves automatically, keeping the tobacco up to the cutter something after the fashion of a haycutter. The tobacco glides on to a cutting block, where a cigar shaped die or cutter cuts out the tobacco to any size required. It then rolls on to a cylinder, upon which the moulds run like an endless chain; the filler dreps into these and as this contrivance revolves the moulds tighten until the body is perfectly formed. The embryo cigar then drops into a V shaped hopper and one at a time they are dropped into a roller which puts on the binder, and from this a hopper, fashioned something like the first, drops the cigar into a roller which puts on the wrapper and drops the finished article into a box, which, when filled, is ready for shipment. The inventor has another machine which completes the cigar as far as the binder, leaving the wrapper to be put on by hand. He has also discovered a method to prevent tobacco from resweating, a discovery in itself worth thousands of dollars to tobacco dealers.

The inventor was offered $3,000 for one machine of the first kind described, and a Pittsburg firm offered $11,000 for the second. He refused both offers, however, and has concluded to erect a cigar factory. The invention will be such a saving over the present method of manufacturing cigars that the preduct of the new machines can be sold at practically the cost to other makers still leaving a handsome profit.

There has already been formed a stock company with a capital $100,000, and it is the intention to commence to make in the neighborhood of 100,000 cigars per day. The enterprise will give employment to 350 hands.

The company had partly decided to locate its factory at Cuyshoga Falls, O, but it is understood that other cities in the street.

AN ELEVEN ROUND CONTEST. Mike Hergert and "Cooney" Hauf Have

In an uptown resort last night a contest with big gloves took place between two young men who for some time past have been doing a great deal of blowing about their abilities as pugflists. The names of the contestants are Mike Hergert, a hotel porter, and "Cooney" Hauf, a barber. They have been in training for some time and last night they considered themselves in good condition. They had invited quite a number of gentlemen to be present an about thirty were on hand when the men appeared in the ring. A well known newspaper man acted as referee, while another was second for Hergert, and a barber looked after Hauf. The young men are lightweights, and while "Cooney" had the advantage by a few pounds, Mike was the taller and had longer arms. The match was not for points, or if it was the spectators failed to observe them. The mon seemed anxious to hit each other, and there was no running away. Each one stood up and gave and took the punish-ment. The fight lasted eleven rounds, and each. "Cooney" was awarded first knock down in the third round, when he sent Mike sprawling on the floor. Mike go even in the seventh by drawing first blood. He hit "Cooney" a clever crack on the nose bringing quite a flow of claret. The fight brought to a close because Mike was called away on business. The referee decided the contest a draw, which made "Cooney" very angry, as he desired to

ANOTHER CASE IN WHICH MONEY WAS TAKEN FOR THE BURLAL OF A SOLDIER.

Thirty-five Dollars Obtained to Bury suel Hess, Who Had $5,000 Insurance on His Life When He Died.

Another case of imposition upon th county commissioners was discovered to-day, in which $35 were drawn from the county treasury towards the futiers! expenses of an alleged indigent soldier. The soldier was Samuel Hess, ex-county treas-urer and deputy sheriff. He died on June 7th, and on the 12th of the same month the above amount was drawn on the application of A. C. Leonard and Dr. J. A. E. Reed, the township committee. C.L. Frey, Isaac Ranck and E. F. Groff certified that he died in indigent circumstances.

At the time of Mr. Hess' death there was insurance on his life of $5,000 and a check for $5,023, the face value of his policy at the time of death, was paid to his widow. The Grand Army committee may not have known that there was a life insurance, but the fact of its payment to Mrs. Hess was made public in the daily papers on the date of its payment. Up to date the $35 drawn from the county to pay Samuel Hess' funeral expenses have not been refunded, nor has

The publication in the INTELLIGENCER on Wednesday evening of the abuse of the provisions of the act of assembly as to the payment by the county of $35 for the burial of indigent soldiers was the topic of discussion everywhere in the city last evening and to-day. On every side could be heard commendations of the stand taken by this paper against the payment of that charity fund to any except those contemplated by the act of the Legislature entitled to re-

The account of the Bowman application in the main was correct. There were s fow trifling misstatements to which the attention of the writer has been called.

A friend of ex-County Solicitor Shence in talking with a representative of the Ix-TELLIGENCER said great injustice was done that gentleman. His story was that Shenck had nothing to do with the condition of the claim, and that John Bowman called upon bim as his attorney and said he wanted the claim prenothing to do with the presentation of the claim, but would draw up the paper for him. This he did. John Bowman theu took it to Messrs. Miller and Stauffer, of the Grand Army relief committee, and procured their signatures. After the claim was allowed by the commissioners the voucher was made payable to the order of Miller and Stauffer. Bowman took this voucher to Stauffer and secured his endorsement, but did not take it to Miller. Lawyer Shenck took it to that member of the comt him to e admits that he presented it to the county treasurer and drew the $35 and claims that be paid it all over to John Bowman. John Bowman corroborates Shenck all these particulars. Bowman said last evening that he got all the money and spent it and that Shenck did not get a penny of it. He did not care who knew he got it and he did not think it was the In-TELLIGENCER's business to publish any thing about the matter.

R. F. Bowman, who was mentioned as having received a part of the money, called at the INTELLIGENCER office last evening in company with his brother John. His statement was that he did not employ Shenck as his attorney and he did not receive any part of the $35. Shenck, he says, called upon him and asked him for his father's army discharge, but nothing was said about the use to which it was to be

Mr. Shenck's friends say the publication of the article was inspired by his political enemies to injure his chances for the pay mastership in the army, for which he is an applicant. They are mistaken. These friends were told that the columns of the INTELLIGENCER were open to him to make any explanation he desired in reference to the matter. They said that Shenck would not make any reply because he did nothing wrong in the transaction. He was, however, kept busy all day explaining the part he took in obtaining $35 from the county treasury for a claim not contemplated by the act of assembly.

lina, the Leading Malcontent.

Washington Dispatch to Ledger.

There have recently appeared in the papers reports of utterances by Congressman Brower, of North Carolina, which indicated dissatisfaction with the administration on his part on account of not having received the desired share of "patronage" for his district. In the bitterness of his disappointment Mr. Brower is alleged to have declared a purpose to be an independent candidate for speaker of the House of Representatives and to have expressed the conviction that the other 16 representatives food Southern states whis support him. Mr. Brower is in a rebellious state of mind. In this he is not singular. Other congressman who have not received from the president all they demanded are in the same state of mind, and occasionally make declarations of intention similar to those ascribed to the North Carolina man. These declarations of intention similar to those ascribed to the North Carolina man. These declarations imply indicate personal discontent, and have no real significance so far as the organization of the House is concerned. Mr. Brower may be a candidate for speaker, in the hope that a sufficient number of Southern members will unite with him to force the Republicans to give that section certain "recognition" in the distribution of offices; but this hope is chimerical. In such a contest Brower would not have a single follower. Ho is not the kind of man to lead a revolt, even admitting that the time for revolution is propitious. The Sonthern Republicans will not lead in a revolt nor join in a conspiracy to throw the organization of the House into the hands of the Democrate because individuals of their number have not received proper recognition from the president in the matter of offices. The angry cbullition, therefore, of Mr. Brower is not worthy of consideration in this connection.

There is, however, significance in such utterances as those attributed to Mr.

fore, of Mr. Brower is not worthy of consideration in this connection.

There is, however, significance in such ntierances as those attributed to Mr. Brower. They indicate that Republican members of independence and courage, whose districts are affected by kindred interest, will insist upon an expression of opinion on the part of the Republican caucus as to the purpose of the party touching certain questions that will come before Congress. Thus the Southern members under the leadership of Houck, of Tennessee; McComas, of Maryland, and Wade, of Missouri, who have had large experience in the House, and who are men of brains and courage, will insist that a Southern man shall be made doorkeeper, the office to which attaches most of the patronage of the House. This point will not be presented in the form of an imperative demand, accompanied by a threat of revolt, but will be resisted upon with a degree of firmness and with a strength of appeal that is likely to prove successful. Brower is in full sympathy with this movement, and it is probable his recent fulminations were made to further it.

recent fulminations were made to further it.

Many of the Southern members, and a number from other sections of the country, will insist at the outset that a positive declaration shall be made by the Republican cancus upon the question of repealing the internal revenue laws. The South is clamorous for repeal, and sent several members to the Fifty-first Congress on that issue. One of these is Mr. Ewart, of the Ninth district of North Carolina, who is now here. Mr. Ewart has nothing to complain of touching his treatment by the administration. Speaking of the questions raised by Mr. Brower in his recently published utterances, Mr. Ewart said: "If Mr. Brower is a 'kicker,' he will have to do his kicking alone. Neither Mr. Cheatham (another North Carolina member) nor myself will render him the slightest assistance in his threatened candidacy for speaker. All I ask the caucus to do is to name a man who is sound on the Blair educational bill and the internal revenue repeal, measures in which the South is peculiarly and earnestly interested, and its nominee shall have my support. I believe Mr. McKinley is such a man, and I will be for him all the time. If we cannot nominominee shall have my support. I believe Mr. McKinley is such a man, and I will be for him all the time. If we cannot nomi-nate him, then I am ready to support Burows or Cannon.

"In the event of the caucus nominating In the event of the caucus nominating a man for speaker who is against the Blair bill and internal revenue repeal, I could not vote for him in the face of the pledges I have made my people. The Blair bill should become law. It has been thrice passed by a Republican Senate, and as often strangled in a Democratic House. So often strangled in a Democratic House. So far as the internal revenue law is concerned, it is a war tax, and, with its system of espionage, spies and informers, is a disgrace to our statute books, and ought long since to have been repealed. It is a law that has to be enforced in the blood and suffering of our records and no It is a law that has to be enforced in the blood and suffering of our people, and no Southern Republican ought to support any man for speaker who is in favor of keeping this damnable law upon our statute books. Increase the tariff, if necessary, but down with the internal revenue law."

The existence of this state of feeling, with only three or four majority on the Republican side, makes the situation one of great delicacy, as well as great interest, because it could be used by a few discontented and disappointed men to their own advantage. Three or four men like Mr. Brower could prevent the Republicans from organizing the House unless their demands should be complied with. Brower believes that his treatment by the administration has been exceptionally bad, and many disinterested persons familiar with the facts agree with him. Four years ago Brower was elected in a district that had for years given several thousand Democratic majority. He made his canvass mainly upon receal of the internal revenue laws. repeal of the internal revenue laws. Aithough opposed to the Mills bill he voted for that measure, because it cut down in-ternal taxes. The people of North Carolina don't care for reduction of customs duties, but are united in the demand for abolition of internal taxes. Mr. Brower was re-elected, notwithstanding his support of the Mills bill. He has the confidence of the people of his district, and his persistence for the repeal of internal taxes will insure their continued support. Brower is the publican who can carry the district, and this fact has added to the bitterness of his disappointment at not receiving recognition from the administration. Not a single re-commendation made by him for office in his district was accepted by the president. On the contrary men were appointed in some instances who were his personal enemies. Brower charges that the offices are being distributed by a ring formed for that pur-pose, and that the ring has been aided here by Messrs. Quay, Dudley and other out-siders who have influence with the president. Persons who were presented by Brower, with the endorsement of nearly all the leading men of the district were ignored and those selected who were presented by the ring. Instead of being recognized by the president as a Republican representa-tive, Brower feels that hel has been stu-diously ignored, the effect, if not the pur-pose of such treatment being to injure him with his records. Forestraining this feeling. with his people. Entertaining this feeling, and with a knowledge that he has the support of the people of his district, Brower can afford to act independent, and is determined to resent what he regards as bad treatment. It is not likely, however, that he will start a movement to defeat a Republican coranization of the House, but publican organization of the House, but upon all questions which affect the execudepartments, the administration is likely to find Mr. Brower with the oppo-sition, unless his recommendations receive consideration from the president before
