ARRESTED WITHOUT CAUSE. Constable Shaub Locks Up a Man and then Releases Him.

Last evening it was noticed that Herman Elliott, a German Hebrew, had been arrested for peddling without license. An investigation shows that the whole affair was an outrage, perpetrated by an officer who at the time was not in a fit condition to discharge his duties. The man who was arrested came from Philadelphia on Tuesday evening and had stopped over night with a friend on Middle street. Yesterday morning he started to walk out the Philadelphia turnpike, having a bundle filled with tinware on his back. Just beyond the street car station he was approached by Constable Jacob C. Shaub, of the Third ward, who asked him if he bad any tincups. Elliott replied that he had, and placed his basket on the fence. Shaub then told him he was a constable and that he would have to go along with Elliott was brought to this city and lodged in the station house about 11 o'clock. Here Shaub recorded the arrest as having been made on a warrant issued by Alder man A. F. Donnelly. A reporter called upon that alderman yesterday afternoon. The alderman said he had no knowledge whatever of the affair, further than he had heard from outside sources.

Shaub was then sought, but could not be ing, and Shaub, being seen, said that prisoner had been heard discharged by the alderman. Another call was made upon the alderman, and he declared the statement made by Shaub was wholly false. Returning to the station house the reporter was informed that Shaub ordered the prisoner's release. In this the constable acknowledges he had " found him to be arrested without cause. There is, therefore, nothing to hold him."

The prisoner, who is a one-eyed man, knowledges that he had no license, but at the same time said he had not offered anything for sale. Pierced by a Fork Prong.

Sitting Bull's Importance Exaggerated,
Hints That the Indians Were Bribed.

Major General George Crook arrived in Oakland, Md., on Wednesday, and Joined Mrs. Crook at the Glades holel. When a correspondent called on the general in the afternoon he seemed to be in fine spirits and much relieved that the knotty problem with the Sioux Indians had been at least temporarily settled.

"And so Sitting Bull would not sign the trenty?" said the correspondent, after being pleasantly greeted by the genial general.

"No," said General Crook, scating himself comfortably in a rocker, "he is too wrapped up with his own importance. It is a wonder to me how so great a fraud as Sitting Bull could be made such a hero of.
Why," said the general, laughing, "a white woman from the East actually went out to the reservation and proposed marriage to him, which he discreetly declined, as he already had serveral squaws, who would probably have made it uncomfortable for her. She is not the only one, however, who has given the fellow cause for his conceit, for many orders come for his photograph."

"Was he not really very brave in the From the Abany Times.

That duel of two Atlanta railroad men on Saturday evening was truly a noble affair of the kind. It is to be hoped that a full and particular report of it will be read all through France, so as to encourage editors and public men there to a better understanding of the true code. One of these combatants fired five shots in rapid succession at his opponent only twelve paces away, and did not touch him. The other fired one shot, which cut a twig near his opponent's head. Then reserving his four remaining shots, he made a simple explanation of the remarks out of which grew the difficulty, the other combatant withdrew the statements which he had made under a misapprehension, and the remaining four shots were fired in the air. All was forgiven, both received the highest praise for their courage, and all concerned including the families of both and the people of the city which owes a great deal to the enterprise and public spirit of both were rendered supremely happy. That was a superb duel, one of a kind to commend the institution to all right-minded men, if it should be arranged in all similar affairs that the bullets be drawn from each weapon beforehand in order to avoid any possible casualties.

This duel, indeed, exceeds in interest the

"Why, no," said General Crook. "He showed the white feather and ran away, and afterward got all the glory among white men East, probably through some prejudiced parties. With the Indians Sitting Bull has no reputation as a brave. By them he is considered only a medicine man." casualties.

This duel, indeed, exceeds in interest the famous duel in which De Witt Clinton and John Swartwout figured, back of Weehawken, in 1802, when it was every gentleman's duty to stand up and be shot by any one who chose to demand the opportunity. The quarrel between the two was political, and, consequently, in those days was very bitter. It was not a case of our higher civ-ilization, where the two antagonists de-nounce each other as liars and poltroons,

General Crook said he had done a great deal of traveling since the 7th of May, when he started for the Sioux reservation. He says the reservation is as large as the state of Indiana, and is occupied by not more than 23,000 Indians. The tract is entirely too large for any practical purpose. They cannot cultivate it. Much of it lies in the land of the Dakotas—a particularly rich cannot cultivate it. Much of it lies in the land of the Dakotas—a particularly rich section. There are seven agencies which own the reservation in common.

What the government wanted was that each should take a reduced reservation and own it independently, and then sell the land lying between the several reduced reservations to the government at a moderate price. The Indians objected on the ground that if they sold part, with the little left them, the whites would after awhile want even the small remnant left the Indians. They said when they had plenty of land they sold it to the pale faces cheap, and now they want to keep what they have, of land they sold it to the pale faces cheap, and now they want to keep what they have, which is not much. They complain that the white man did not keep his old treaties with them, and hence they are slow to General Crook said the Indians had evidently been bribed not to seil—by whom he had no possible means of knowing, but thought it a probable case that the cattle men or railroad officials might have a hand in it. The general said that the seven agencies were situated near the extreme boundaries of the reservation, and to go from one to the other they had to travel back to the railroad each time and start ver again, thus covering a large tract of over again, thus covering a large tract of country. General Cook said it was as good as a circus when they made their business known at each agency, but on several occasions it threatened to be rather more serious than funny.

I went there to examine a mine said to exist in the bottom of the canyon. I have been all through the Rockies, from Montana to Central America, and know what a chasm is, but the sight of that abyss took my breath away. From the top to the bottom it is full 6,000 feet. Over a mile below you can see the river tearing through the gorge, but not a sound can be heard, it is so far away. From one bank to the other it is apparently not over a quarter of a mile, but as a matter of fact it is fully nineteen but as a matter of fact it is fully nineteen miles. My guide told me I would never be able to reach the bottom, but I was determined to go and I went. It was a terrible limb, and it took us eight hours to reach the bottom. It is certainly the most desorate place in the world. There is not a living thus down there is not a living thing down there—no insects, reptiles, or animals of any kind. Everything is absolutely dead. The mining prospect was worthless. Before the sun was up the next morning we were on our way out, and took us until 10 o'clock that night to climb the wall of the canyon.
