How they go and how they come, Some so restful, yearning some; Others like wild flowers! me like fragrant even-wind ; me like clouds upon the mind ; Which, later, turn to showers.

O happy, useless dreaming!
Rainbow-tinted, many-starred,
Teardrops shed, sweet fancies marred—

DR. SHRADT'S OPINION. His Stedge-Hammer Blows Against the Utility of Sequard's Elixir. From the Medical Record.

It is now a little more than a month since the news of Brown-Sequard's alleged method of rejuvenating the aged reached this country. The subject is one that naturally appeals to public interest, since a long life and a vigorous old age have always been among the chief objects of human desire, and consequently it has received a much greater share of newspaper attention than is usually bestowed on medical topics. This is most unfortunate, for the public discussion of such an absurdity tends only to bring scientific medicine into ridicule. It is now a little more than a month since tends only to bring scientific modicine into ridicule.

The method is on its face preposterous, its vaunted effects are impossible and ridiculous. It is opposed to all known physiological and biological laws, and had it not been tols'ered up by the reputation of a Brown-Sequard, it would scarcely have been heard of outside of the Paris society where it was proposed, and no one would ever have looked upon it in any other light than as the foolish conceit of an old man, in whose mind the dreams of returning youth had assumed the counterfelt of reality.

Supported as it was, however, by the weight of an authority hitherto respected in the world of mcdleine, it was necessary that it should be tested cautiously and in the proper way, and that the theory should not be actually condemned until it had been proven worthless as were his pretensions extravagant. For unreflecting and obstinate scepticism in matters medical is as illogical as unreasoning credulity.

The experiments reported by Dr. Loomis are sufficient, we think, to satisfy the demands of legitimate prudence. In fact, it has already received more attention than it has deserved. The results of these experiments seem to show that the injected material may, in certain cases, act as a mechanical stimulant, but that is all; they fall utterly to support the extravagant claims of physical and mental rejevence scence which have been put forward in behalf of this method.

What these experiments do not so clearly show since they were conducted with a

What these experiments do not so clearly show since they were conducted with a proper regard for surgical cleanliness is the imminent risk of south miniment risk of septic poisoning or of aberculous infection, to which the subjects of such injections are exposed in the hands incautious operators.

White Horse Shot and Killed. White Horse, the chief of the Crow Indian tribe, has been murdered by an unknown essassin and his remains thrown into the Yellowstone river, where they have just been found. The deed was committed sev-erd days ago, as the body was quite de-eayed when found. The tribe are aroused to high indignation, and swear to have revenge. The Indian was shot through the White Horse was an Indian who had a fairly good command of the English language, and was well liked by most of the settlers through the country adjacent to the Crow reserve. Many of the old settlers remember the incident of White Horse entering a church at Buffalo several years ago during communion service and partaking of the holy bread and wine in such quantity that the minister found himself quite short when administering to the wants of the balance of the congregation.

Hale and Hearty in Old Age. What is more beautiful than an ancient tree ciothed with an ample robe of verdure. Apt is the comparison between such a growth and an vigor. The sina qua non, the indispensable con-dition of vigorous youth, robust manhood and a virile old age, is sound digestion. Without this life is shorn of the hearty zest that should attend it. No more beneficient and agreeable contributor to the attainment of a hale old contributor to the attainment of a hale old age, and efficient means of counteracting the infirmities that too often attend life's decline, can be found than Hostetter's stomach Bitters. Dyspeptic symptoms, a tendency to kidney complaint, nervous inquietude and rheumatic trouble are overcome by its use. The effect of exposure and overwork are intilified by it, and it affords efficient protection to all subjected to malarial influences. Give it a thorough trisl.
