A Tale That May Urge the Necessity For An Ambalance-Progress of the Pund-The Envelope System.

"Well, Johnie, what have you to-day?"

If John Maybe as he knocked off for leaser and saw his little daughter st the set of the ladder with his dinner kettle. in was a house carpenter with a family five children, and his wife always sent in his dinner by little Jennie, the eldest aghter. He managed to clothe and feed in well, and to send the three oldest to son well, and to send the three oldest to hool, for he vowed that he would have a benefit of one tax at least. He lived a part of the city where the ster was so poorly served that the diamts were left turned on all the time th buckets under them to catch whatever clusters the department had to spare, and have the streets were as a foreign country s the streets were as a foreign country a the city road makers, and the tramp of rd. John was a thoughtful man knew that though he paid taxes directly he did so through paying his rent to the house owner who paid the tax. He therefore all quite proud of himself for getting even with the authorities, by sending his whole amily to school as fast as they grew old they chose. John talked to his little daughter about the approaching re-opening of the schools, and after a hearty lunch and at chat he returned to his work, and the little girl went home again with the ort, loud shout! A crashing of timor, a hurrying of people. The plasterers in the fourth story room stopped and gazed silence. The old foreman ran to the winw. He could not see the pavement for be cornice, but the tops of the scaffold poles

"It's John fell to the pavement!" The men quickly descended and joine ! gathering crowd around the figure on the aidewalk and were glad to hear him ening, as at first thought any injury is terrible than sudden death. But when they found the man lying with a broken other thigh, a piece of the pole that had broken the fall and perhaps saved his broken the fall and perhaps saved his life, they doubted whether a fatal ending not have been better than so much suffering. Already a pool of blood had gathered and it was evident that the man would bleed to death if something was not done for him at once. A swift examination showed the end of the bone procting from his right leg, but the thick linter in his left thigh added to the agony of his position on the hard pavement and made it impossible to move him without giving fearful pain. The wounded man said nothing and bravely tried to stand the pain, though his chalky face and blue lips told of the struggle. He was too much hurt to think much, but looked forward with a vague orror to the moment when he must be ifed to the floor of a wagon and must undeepe the fearful torture of the long ride to his home. He knew that he could not stand it. He had been present when a brakeman with a crushed leg was loaded on the floor of an express wagon and taken to the hospital. The doctors said the man died from shock, but the carpenter and others believed he died from wagen floor. That brakeman's agonized face as he went joiling through the streets was now before the wretched man on the sidewalk, among the shifting faces of his wife and children and the vivid memories that come to dying men. He seemed to hear the d cries of the man in the wagen grouns and cries of the man in and recalled his bitter thoughts of the neglect that made such inhumanity possible. beard a little bell sharp rung and heard some one say : " Here it is

John had been so busily at work that he en too tired to read the papers for several nights and though he knew that an ambulance was to be bought he was not aware that it had arrived and was in place at a fire engine house, from which it could be called by telephone.

A practical man across the street had seen the scaffold give way, and John had hardly fallen before the practical man was at the telephone ordering the ambulance, and the telephone exchange girl was at the mme time notifying the doctor.

The light but strongly built wagon came rushing down the street while the doctor on the seat beside the driver held his case of instruments and bandages in one hand and rang the warning bell with the other, that all vehicles might get out of the way quickly. "Thank God, here's the ambuance," said the old foreman as he turned with tears in his eyes from a rough stempt to stop the blooding. The crowd fell back to allow the vehicle to come close up to the mangled man and the doctor was soon kneeling by his side hard at work. The door at the back of the vehicle was opened, showing two stretchers swung in an ingenious way at either side and so arranged that a badly injured man could be taken through the streets without delay and with no jolting or jarring. One of these was removed and placed on the ground by the injured man, who was now more quiet under the influence of a drug. The blood was stanched, and bound in many firmly wound bandages, the man was carefully lifted on the stretcher, and then the stretcher was easily and quickly placed in position in the ambulance, the doors were closed, and physician and patient drove off to the latter's home. To the anxious wife the doctor said, "We have your husband here, but he will pull through all right, because I got there in time to save him some blood."

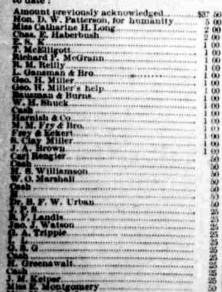

But John only muttered as he was lifted on the stretcher to his bedside, and easily transferred to the bed. " Thank God for

He was over 80 years old, had no one to care for him and for nearly nine months during his last sickness he was nursed by Mrs. Tollinger. Mr. Reynolds suffered from cancer and required the constant attention of the plaintiff. She claimed $100 per month for her services and this amount the administrator of the decedent claimed was exorbitant, refused to pay it and then this sult was brought.

"THE INDIAN MAIL-CARRIER." A Fair Audience Greets An Indian Star in a Border Play.

Last evening the "beautiful, sensational, thrilling picture of frontier life," as the bills described the play, "The Indian Mail-Carrier," was presented in Fulton opera house. There was a large gallery and the crowd down stairs was light. The play was written by Mohawk, an Indian woman, who is Mohawk, an Indian woman, The also the star of the company. The piece is of the regulation border kind, and is filled with much gore. The star ppeared in a male character, that of the mail-carrier. She has a good voice and is active, but she has a great deal to learn before she becomes an actress. The other characters in the play included a villianous Mexican who was always foiled in his designs, a cowardly army officer, an Irishman, a negro and a pretty maiden. Charles as the Irishman was quite funny at times and Miss Buckingham was very attractive as Mollic. She introduced several songs that pleased in the last act. Some of the other members of the company were good, including W. S. Montgomery. as Spanish Joe, and others very bad. Each one of them carried a gun, pistol or knife and these were used upon the slightest provocation. A cannon was also brought into service, and it almost shook some of the kids out of the gallery when it was discharged. of the incidents of the play was the duel between the mail-carrier and Spanish Jor. The gallery was occupied mostly by boys, who sat with their coats off, yelling at the the top of their voices most of the time. The noise made by them has never been equalled in the history of the house. They were pleased if other people were not.

ARREST OF A FUGITIVE.

Henry W. Brubaker Arrested in Reading and Lodged in Jail.

Some months ago Henry W. Brubaker indicted for keeping a bawdy house and violating the liquor law, skipped away from the jurisdiction of this court. He went to St. Louis, but did not remain there long. His bail was forfeited and a bench warrant issued for his arrest. His brother was interested in his capture because he had helped to indemnify the bondsman.

Suit was not brought on the bond because it was arranged to pay the amount of the same out of an inheritance coming to Brubaker and his brother.

His brother learned a few days ago that Henry was in Reading in the same business he had in this city. He put the matter in charge of Deputy Sheriff Armstrong, and that official went to Reading on Wednesday. He found his man without any trouble and brought him to this city on the late train last night.

He was lodged in the county jail and will remain there until the adjourned sessions in October, when he will be tried. The testimony is strong against him and he will probably plead guilty to prevent all the damaging circumstances against him from being brought to the attention of

Charged With False Pretense. Dr. Peter Day, who is an unregistered physician and resides on Dorwart street, has been prosecuted before Alderman Patrick Donnelly for false pretense by William Gerber. The latter is suffering from some pulmonary disease and he called upon Day for some medicine. Day gave him a bottle and charged $2.50 for it. Gerber says that he took some of the stuff and it made him worse. He then had the medicine analyzed and found that it was made of some kind of a root, something that is supposed to be cayenne pepper and water. When he learned this Gerber brought this suit.

Death of William Shallus. William Shallus died this afternoon at his residence, No 422 North Queen street, after an illness of two weeks from typhoid fever. He was 28 years of age, a son of the late William Shallus, and a grandson of the late Christian Kieffer. He was a carpenter by trade, and several years ago was a member of the firm of Keene & Shallus, lock manufacturers. For several years he has been employed at the Penn rolling mill He was the patentee of a patent lock and a car door. He was married to a daughter of Philip Zecher, who with two children survives him. An incendiary Believed to Have Caused Tuesday Afternoon's Blaze. Lancaster had another fire on Tuesday afternoon, just about the time the newspa-pers were going to press. It was in a frame stable in the rear of 761 North Lime street, which property is owned by D. P.
Locher's estate, and is occupied by Abraham Applebach. On the same spot a stable was burned three years ago, when the property was owned by Adam Mishlich.
The alarm for yesterday's fire was struck from box 46,at Duke and Frederick streets.
The firemen were not slow in getting to the grounds, and they extinguished the flames, but not until the building was almost entirelydestroyed or at least burned to such an extent that it will have to be torn down and rebuilt. In the building were $300 worth of old rags which were made up in bales. Applebach formerly bought rags and those on hand belonged to John A. Shober, who had no insurance upon them. Several wagons were taken out of the building, but four sets of harness, a rag press and pair of scales, all of which be-longed to Mr. Shober, were destroyed. Next to the burned stable were two small structures, which were owned by Frederick Eiseman, and they were also pretty well damaged. There was nothing in them of

The belief is that the fire, which broke out in the second story and was first seen coming out of the roof, was the work of an incendiary. After dinner a tramp came to Applebach's house and impudently asked for something to eat, which was not given him. He went away in a very bad humor and he is said to have been seen near the stable shortly before the fire was discovered by Mrs. Applebach.

Mr. Locher's building was valued at about $800, and he has an insurance upon it of $500 in the Girard company, of Philadelphia, of which Jere Rife is the agent. Mr. Shober complains about the manner in which the fire was extinguished. He says that the bales of rags were put together with big double presses, and the rags in them, which were left intact, were burned only on the outside. The firemen for some reason cut the wires around several of the bundles, and threw them out of the building. They were scattered around in the mud, and it will require much labor to wash, dry and repack them. Mr. Shober says it was not necessary to cut

UNFORTUNATE CHRIST KLINE.

He Gets So Drunk That Another Constable Is Obliged To Lock Him Up. Constable Christ Kline, of West Hempfield township, who spends nearly every day in Lancaster, where he does most of his business, is constantly getting into trouble. He usually leaves for home on Harrisburg Accommodation at 5:30 in the evening. Of late very big loads of rum have been accompanying him home, and from their great size the wonder has been to many that the railroad company did not charge him extra fare. It does not matter to him bow full he becomes, or in what part of town he is when the time for the train to leave arrives, as he always tries to make the station. Last evening he appeared at the corner of Walnut and North Queen streets. He was so drunk that he did not know what he was doing, and he acted so badly that police were sent for. When the officers arrived Christ had disappeared, He next turned up at the P. R. R. railroad station, but on account of his condition the rainmen refused to take him on the cars. He then began floundering around the station like a chicken with its head cut off and he soon was as bloody as a fowl in that condition, for he fell from the platform in the station and cut his face very badly. Several of his friends tried to get him to a place where he would not make such a display of himself, but they could do nothing with him. Finally Constable Ehrman made up his mind to take Kline to the tation house. The latter could not walk and he was hauled to the place of confinement on a trunk truck. He was bailed out this morning for a hearing before Alder

A DANGEROUS RUNAWAY.

A Horse With a Broken Bit Running At Full Speed. About noon to-day Dr. M. L. Herr, of North Duke street, had a runaway which might have cost him his life or at least very serious injuries. He was driving his mare, usually a very quiet and gentle animal, up North Queen street, and near Orange the bit broke. The bridle soon came off the animal and this frightened her. She started off on a run with the doctor in the phæton, utterly helpless, as he was unable to do anything with the reins. As she passed up North Queen street quite a number of persons ran out into the street and tried to stop her by throwing up their hands and yelling. This only frightened her the more and at one time when the doctor had her almost stopped by talking to her a man ran out and started her again. At James street the animal turned and ran on as far as Duke. In trying to turn the corner there, she fell very hard to the pavement, and was choked so by the harness that she was unable to get up. The doctor was then enabled to get out of the buggy, escaping without an injury of any kind. The buggy was badly broken and the horse cut and bruised.

Carcless Shooting.

Somebody was doing some very careless shooting on South Queen street last evening and several persons made a narrow escape from being struck by a bullet. W. D. Mosser and his wife, and John G. Schaum and wife, were walking over the crossing of the alley between the Southern market building and Sapp's furniture store when they heard the report of a pistol or gun and a bullet came whistling by them which they distinctly heard strike a tree on the opposite side of the street. Search was made in the alley for the person who fired the shot, but he could not be found nor is it exactly certain from what direction it came. It is believed that some one was shooting at dogs, and if that is the case they were very careless, as at least one of the four parties might easily have been killed.

Oscar Groff, proprietor of the Swan hotel, has brought suits against John Arnold and his son Dan, the two men who behaved so badly at his hotel yesterday, before Alderman Spurrier. The old man is charged with felonious assault and drunken and disorderly conduct and the young man with drunken and disorderly conduct only. There will be a hearing to-morrow eve-

Reuben Hutton Again Arrested. Beuben Hutton is again in trouble. He was arrested last night on a warrant issued by Alderman Halbach. He is charged with feloniously entering the cellar of E. O. Eby's Park house and stealing a lot of pro-visions. He was committed in default of bail for a hearing.

A Lively Chase After the Desperado.

Surrounded in a Canon.

A dispatch from Los Angeles, California, says there is great excitement at San Juan Capistrino over the kidnapping of a young girl mamed Marie Hobona by the noted bandit Sylvester Morales. The girl is seventeen years of age and was taken from her home. Morales was seen carrying her off on horseback, and a vigorous pursuit was organized. The bandit's horse gave out and he entered the stable of Henry Charles, one of the wealthiest men in the county, intending to steal a horse. Charles was in the stable and was shot dead. The father of the girl abducted by Morales said the girl had never seen Morales until last Wednesday night, when he came to the house at San Diequito, thirty miles north of San Diego, and entered the house, where she was in bed. He drew a six-shooter and compelled her to dress, mount the horse and ride away with him. On Thursday afternoon Morales rode to the door of a store in Vista, San Diego county, leaving the girl and the horse while he bought crackers and sardines. Friday they were seen going toward San Juan, and were chased by an officer who captured one horse and the girl's clothing.

No further glue to the bandit's whereabouts was found until Sunday afternoon, when Morales rode through San Fernando, several miles north of the seene of the Saturday tragedy. Morales was riding A Lively Chase After the Desperado.

when Morales rode through San Fernando, several miles north of the scene of the Saturday tragedy. Morales was riding one horse and leading another, and was armed with a Winchester rifle and two Six-shooters. He was recognized by an officer, who pursued him, but soon disappeared, leaving the horse he was leading. The desperado then turned back toward San Diego canon, where he was seen into at night with a girl on horse-back going toward Trabura Canon. Morales is a tall, stender man, with a mustache is a tail, slender man, with a mustache and thin beard. He is marked with smallpox and one eye is bloodshot, but at a gether he is not bad looking. He has sworn he will not be taken alive. He is a dead shot, and sheriffs do not like to come into close quarters with him. The latest into close quarters with him. Yesterday he was in Columbia and with his sen Harry, Charles Franciscus, of Columbia, and William Markel, of Philadelphia, drove to Mt. Joy on a gunning trip. They had two livery horses hitched to a phaeton. On the road while they were returning the king bolt of the carriage broke. This left the front part down upon the ground and the rear part was upset. All of the gentlemen were thrown out. Harry Cline was badly braised and received a very ugly black eye. The others were also cut and bruised and one

Murder Trial.

A dispatch from Chicago says that a desperate attempt was made on Tuesday night to assassinate Gus Klabre, the tinsmith, who last week identified Martin Burke as the man for whom he soldered together a tin box on May 6, which, it is supposed, contained the clothing of Dr. Cronin. He was assaulted by a dozen men. They knocked him down, beat him about the head with some blunt instrument and head with some blunt instrument and threw him over a low fence to the ground below, a distance of 12 feet. He struggled to his feet, calling for help, and ran toward home. His brother and the servant girl heard his screams and they ran toward him.
