A Different Color.

The reckless neglect of facts which so often marks the metropolitan news reporter's work has been strikingly exemplified in the trial of Mrs. Hamilton, in New Jersey, for the assault upon her Irish servant girl, wherein it appears that the assault was made by the drunken girl upon Mrs. Hamilton, who seems to have been justified by the violence of the attack in all that she did to the woman upon whose complaint she has been locked up for months in a Jersey jail.

The facts of the case were easily accessible to the reporters, but it made a better story to represent the mistress as a would-be murderer, since she had a life story which would be fitly rounded out by such a tragedy. It was not much of an assault but the enterprise of the reporter caused it to become celebrated all over the land; and the crimes and plots laid to Mrs. Hamilton were enough to stock a score of novels. Possibly there is no different color to be put upon all of the tale as upon the encounter with the drunken Irish Biddy, and we need not be surprised if the result of all the legal investigations brings out Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton as a marvel of sweet amiability and goodness and a lovely victim of reportorial malice.

Another case, which affords a similar illustration, is that of young Ives, of New York, who branched out as a banker in New York shortly after reaching his majority, and soon managed to secure control of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad and cut a great swell as a Napoleon of finance. The newspapers of his town have been for some time engaged in writing him up as a villain of the deepest dye, and he is now on trial for his alleged fraudulent practices in taking possession of the railroad. The only evidence, however, that seems to charge crime upon him is that of an alleged accomplice, who admits having sworn, in a trial in Ohio, that everything was white that he now swears to be black. As such evidence will have little weight with the jury, Mr. Ives is likely to be acquitted, and to stand revealed as an exponent of the premature development of the New York young man in the ways that lead to wealth along the borderland of crime; which are Wall Street's chosen paths.

Our Mud and Water.

Perhaps the members of our councils are enjoying the mud that they tap from their hydrants; it is so usual an experience that perchance they really feel as if they had lost something good when they get their water occasionally without any mud in it. Probably they are interested in the color of the liquid and are interested in its changes of hue. It may even be that they think that mud is wholesome, and that the city is giving a benefit to its people in delivering them mud instead of the water they buy.

But it is only the connoisseurs who like the mud. The rest of the people greatly prefer water. And they think they ought to get it. They contract with the city calls for the delivery of water. The tax they pay is called a water rent; and there is nothing in the receipt they get which hints that a fourth of mud is to go with the water. There is a clear case against the city should any of its customers claim damages from it for violation of contract.

It is not likely that it would be held that the delivery of such stuff, as they are now getting, would satisfy a reasonable jury that they are receiving the water they bargained for. And it is a shame that the city authorities take such advantage of the patience of the people as to have so long delivered this mud in their water. It is a useless expense to pump up the mud, which is heavier than water; and it is plain that there can be no successful denial that a wise administration of the water works would free the creek water from mud before pumping it through the reservoir supply pipes.

Chicago's Chic.

We have received from the editors of Chicago, in association bound, a circular letter thanking us for recommending Chicago as a site for the 1892 fair, and expressing the strongest expectation that it will be the site. We are glad that we have pleased our editorial brethren of the bounding city of Abaddon; and we are glad to see that it does not take much to please them. We have shown, we think, a great deal of impartiality in dealing with the claims of the bicker cities to the centennial; but we have not been able to conceal our delight that the youngest of them all had the pluck to stand up to big New York, telling her swelling millionaires to stand out of the way of the rushing town of the Northwest. There is nothing evidently that Chicago is not ready to claim and hardly anything to which she is not able to make her title clear. She says she has plenty of room for the exposition, and is most content to all the population of the county. Christopher Columbus would vote for Chicago if alive, as she can prove; and so she thinks will Congress.

The Democratic Society.

The reception at the rooms of the Young Men's Democratic Society was a thorough and cheering success. The members of the organization had a delightful home-warming, and their visitors must realize that the young men and their older leaders have developed with truly marvelous rapidity a new and healthy social force in this community. Men, and particularly young men, have a craving for association, that can be satisfied by their good and the good of society. In a well managed club; and as the discussion of public affairs forms a large part of the conversation of men at leisure it seems eminently proper that there should be associations on a basis of political conviction. These associations cannot fail to be of benefit by teaching men to think and argue on the grave questions that must be met by the ballot of every voter. They should not fail to exert a purifying influence upon the conduct of political affairs. They seem destined to expand to fields of usefulness now undreamed of, and the spirit of the Lancaster Democratic Society is being communicated to their fellow-citizens throughout the state. It may be predicted that this new feature of political activity is a sign of the return of the nation to the safe principles of the statesmen of the early days of the republic; a return of Pennsylvania to the Democratic line. Our principles are right and anything that encourages their fair discussion and tends to eliminate partisan prejudice and stubbornness must serve to make plainer the strength and beauty of the Democratic faith.

SEVERAL days ago two men were arrested in Wrightsville for supplying liquor to boys of that village. They were taken to the York jail, and it was at that time that a young man named Wright, a young man being indicted for giving liquor to a minor. The Brooks bill fixes a penalty for giving liquor to a minor "with or without license." The court held the party to be liable to indictment, as the title of the law was "to regulate and restrain the sale of liquors, etc.;" and that it only applies to persons who are in the business of selling liquors, who give to minors. The case was taken from the jury by the judge and the defendant acquitted. The Wrightsville men, it is alleged, provided whiskey for a late night on the night of a recent fire there. The lads became drunk and a nuisance to the village. If the Brooks law is not punishment for the authors of disorder the authorities should institute the charge of breach of the peace against these despicable corruptors of youth. They ought not to escape punishment, and Wrightsville must not wait for a recurrence of the offense. The parents of the boys would be justified in driving the villains from the town and forever deny them the privilege of entering, if legal chastisement is not given them.

EARLY in October a scientific expedition will start from this country in one of our war ships. Its object will be the observation of the total eclipse of the sun from some point near St. Paul de Loanda, on the west coast of South Africa, but besides the astronomers a strong corps of scientific men, representing almost every branch of research, will accompany the expedition, which is in charge of Professor David P. Todd, of Amherst college. The navy department will provide a number of able men, and the National museum will be represented by Professor Loomis and other naturalists, while Professor Agassiz with several assistants will conduct researches in marine biology. The sea depths of this coast are almost unknown and great things are hoped for from this expedition if the fever of that much dreaded coast does not take too strong a grip on the enthusiastic and daring scientists. So deadly are the fevers of this region that foreign vessels sometimes die within twenty-four hours after landing, and it is said that every one has at last a touch of the fever on first landing, and the effects of a severe attack are sometimes felt for years. St. Paul de Loanda, where the party will land, is a very old Portuguese city of some thirty centuries, and has been frequently used by Portugal as a penal settlement. The American wise men will probably get away from the city as quickly as possible, as the epidemic is not quite total there, and they may have to travel far into the interior.

Poor Canada is getting into a kind of hysterics over the Behring Sea and other troubles with this country, and some of her more sensational journals breathe war and disaster. There is no cause for alarm. The militia force of Canada has a strength on paper of 37,474 men, very poorly armed and drilled. The Irishmen of Montreal have often asked permission to form a brigade, but have been curtly refused, and of the five battalions forming the military force of that city, only one battalion is French, though two-thirds of the inhabitants of Montreal are French.

It is calculated that 80,000 Americans visited Europe this summer. If they each spent $100 and they will have left $8,000,000 in Europe.—Philadelphia Record.

It is probable that Russell Harrison spent more than $500. Chauncey M. Depew Senator Cameron and other visitors of their kind surely used more than $500. If they returned with this country, the number of trunks Blaine brought with him last year, they must have extensively patronized the foreign merchants and aided in elevating a niche or two the European pauper workman, Joe Howard, the New York journalist, thinks the shopkeepers of this country will sell less than they propose to dispose of this winter. The Parisian dealers are reaping a rich harvest of American dollars. The Record evidently makes the average expenditure too small. If it investigates, the loud-mouthed protection orators and writers will be found to disembark from the steamships heavily laden with the products they detested during the last campaign. The farmer, merchant and mechanic in this country can look at the droves arriving from abroad and learn a lesson. They must be permitted by Congress to produce, without being hindered by extortionate taxation and taxation that the wealthy tourists are usually very careful to see is not applied to their own baggage, preferring to bribe the custom officers rather than to risk the trouble and delay, if not the greater expense of declaring their dutiable goods.

Death of an Artistic Penman. Jesse W. Payson died at Boston on Tuesday, aged 74 years. As the chief author of the Burton & Scribner's copy-books his name was familiar over the entire country; and he was known as one of the great penmen of the world. He originated the "Chicago copy" for examination school writing books, the use of which is general.

Do You

Have that extreme tired feeling, languor, with out appetite or strength, impaired digestion, and a general feeling of misery it is impossible to describe? Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, promoting digestion, and toning up the whole system, giving strength and activity in place of weakness and debility. Be sure to get Hood's.

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla every year as a tonic, with most satisfactory results. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have that miserable tired feeling." C. FAIRBANKS, 39 Bridge Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA "My health was not very good for some months. I did not have much appetite, nor sleep well. I also had frequent sick headaches, and I had no ambition to do anything. I was recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and though I have not taken all of one bottle as yet I feel like a new person. I highly recommend it to all." Mrs. W. A. TERNER, W. Wanamaker's.

Philadelphia, Thursday, Sept. 19, 1890. Baby and Baby's Sister, Baby's Mother and Baby's Grandmother, all have an interest in the special goings on here to-day.

The Autumn season opens to-day with an Exhibition which begins with the "bright bud of divinity," and continues through the long lines of Girls', Misses' and Women's Costumes and Dresses. At the hour of writing the clouds are breaking, and a hope is born of a strong northwest wind that the elements will favor your coming. The interest will centre on the second floor, Chestnut street. Already thousands visit daily the show of articles from the Paris Exposition.

To the east and west of this dazzling display are the new things of the day. To the east the Ladies' Costumes, to the west the Misses' and Babies'.

Among the costumes from Paris you will quickly notice a Street Dress in Directoire style, of bright plum-colored cloth with stone-drab silk front to waist and skirt, with jacket facings and skirt turn-backs of same. The ample silk portions are richly embroidered in gold relieved by plum-colored plush. The fashion of this dress can be greatly modified by the facings of both jacket-waist and skirt, which can be closed in front or turned back, concealing or displaying at pleasure the brilliant applique work. You cannot miss it.

Near by another—a French Evening Costume of silver-draw satin, with black brocade figures and trimmed with black jet.

Just here let us tell you that the Department for Ladies' Tailoring and Costumes to order has been placed under the direction of a distinguished French Modiste of great experience in Paris and London. We are confident that the larger knowledge, improved methods and artistic originality thus at your disposal will be appreciated.

Tea Gowns of many sorts are here. Notice this one of steel silk with white and black brocade stripes, cut with demitrain and pointed flowing sleeves, trimmed with black lace front caught with ribbons, and black lace inside the sleeves.

It's worth more than a passing glance, this Green Broadcloth Street Costume, trimmed with silk applique on a sage ground.

Among the Wraps. A good deal of a story if we had space to tell it. The long and short of it is this: A tight fitting Ulster of dark myrtle green broadcloth, with accordion sleeves that almost sweep the floor; trimming and belt of black gimp.

A Black Plush Wrap; embroidered with silk in handsome patterns; fringed with silk, and with deep Faillie Collar.

In the Dressmaking Parlors is an exhibit of Dress Novelties, the latest from Paris, the rarest of the season. They are brought here from the counters that you may better see some of the effects. Don't suppose for an instant that this little show represents the stock. It is only a hint, a suggestion, a fraction of our Dress-thought of the Autumn.

past in things for Misses' and Children's wear, Dresses, Coats or Long Garments, novel in design and material. There are French Coats, bright, cheery, wide-awake garments; Russian Coats, rich with new and odd furs, and a multitude of other shapes to delight mamma as well as daughters.

Exceptionally fine goods in the little price lots; a surprising variety at medium cost, and so on step by step to the very fine. Whatever the grade, tasteful styles always.

The most striking newness in the Wraps is the prevalence of fur at necks, cape edges, wrists. Deep, flowing fur—cinnamon bear, llama, angora, and a new name, "Moufflon," like eider-downy wool.

The stuffs are Beaver, Sicilian Beaver, Plaids, and a multitude of shaggy weaves. Little shags and big shags, some with fancy figures.

Accordion plaiting clings to some of the dresses. Bright plaid trimmings, side plaited double sleeves and zouave jacket effects are features.

Individuality, originality, and strikingly handsome effects. You'll think it if you don't say it.

For the Little Boys, Coats, Kilts and all the trappings.

As choice and pretty for Baby or for anybody. Under things and over-things. In Wraps the drift of materials is to the shaggy, just as it is for big and little girls. Silk trimming, fur trimming. Some with hoods, some with capes—single, double, even triple. All this roughness makes some of the garments for the wee-bit people look heavy as storm coats. They aren't. Fluffy, light as thistle-down almost. Gretchen shapes still hang on.

For 2 to 6 year youngsters the new Puritani Caps are likely to be quite the rage. Dashing, lovable shapes. In Plush and Plush and Surah; trimmed with bows and rosettes.

Infants' Caps are mostly round, with various degrees of puffiness atop. Silk and Cashmere embroidery.

All the new things are easy to see and full of happy hints.

Rebellion in the camp. The Men's Clothing that has been coming in splendid styles and ample quantity almost cries for recognition. The Boys' Clothing that emulates the girls' claims for sons and brothers equal notice with that for daughters and sisters. We look over the stock, glance from Chestnut street, second floor, to Market street, first floor, and simply say "wait." Your story will come soon. What if we do give days of advertising to Women's goods. The English-speaking world knows that this is a Men's and Boys' Clothing Store.

LADIES' SHOES!

New goods for the Fall trade are constantly coming in. Hence there's something for us to tell of shoes almost daily. Among the latest arrivals are two different makes for Ladies' wear, handsome in shape and economic in cost. The first is a Square Toe Button Shoe in soft, bright Dongola Leather, a stout plump grade for Fall requirements; a solid leather sole, counters and heels; have strong drill linings and deep silk foot facings; admirably finished, well made and strongly recommended for their excellent wearing qualities. In them the foot presents a neat, trim and graceful look. Ladies who have tried them pronounce them exceedingly comfortable the first time worn. The price—$2.00 a pair—is a low one for shoes so high in grade. The second make is of soft bright Dongola Leather, lighter in weight than those described above—the uppers yielding and possibly conforming to the shape of the foot more readily. Solid leather throughout, nothing slighted in the making, trimming or the finish. A handsome looking shoe, admired greatly by Ladies who see them. Not recommended for severe and rough usage—they're too fine for that. In with but a little care they will be found to give excellent service. Fit the foot close and comfortably, and make it pretty and very attractive in appearance. The same low price for the pair as for the heavier grade—$2.00 a pair. You miss seeing admirably shaped shoes, economic in cost, if you fail to see these.
