...ERDAY, TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

They loved and laughed, they kissed and chaffed,
They threw the happy hours away;
That's the way the world goes round;
That's the story of yesterday.

They talk of fate and calculate,
And keep accounts and measure and weigh;
That's the way the world goes round;
That's the story of to-day.

They'll see on high in yonder sky
The God whose power destroyeth sorrow;
That's the way the world goes round;
That's the story of to-morrow.

SONG OF THE OPTIMIST.

Laughter need never be over,
Summer and winter are one.
What though the fragrance of lilies
Depart with the generous sun?
Has not life, after their fashion,
Been joyous? Then why should we weep?
For, after life's tumult and passion,
What is better and sweeter than sleep?

A TEACHER'S EXPERIENCE.

The City Girl in a Country School Encounters a Normal Certificate.

Ninth paper by George R. Vandalear, in the New York Evening Post.

"Help yerself to some o' them cakes, Dr. Pyk," said Mrs. Zeke. "Don't be backward in coming forward. That's what I say, still, to them that sits around my table, which it's somethin' I never had to say to Martin Luther. He was never backward about anythin', much less about his meals.

"He was backward about his 'rithmetic, wife, when he went to school," corrected Mr. Zeke, with conscientious gravity.

"Rithmetic be blowed! That what I say," remarked Mrs. Zeke, with an air of lofty complaint.

"Gimme 'History of the World' ruther than 'rithmetic," said Martin Luther. "That 'History of the World,' sold on'y by subscription, that I bought off'n that agent—it's the most powerful interestin' book I ever read out'n. That there agent came to this town jess special to see me. He tole me his own self as how he'd heard tell in Lancaster that I was the most literal man in this here township. I was readin' out of it last night. In chapter fifty you kin find out all about them ancient generals over in Europe, like Napoleon, an' Wellington, an' Bonaparte, an' Waterloo, an' all the rest of 'em. 'Rithmetic? What's 'rithmetic! ain't nothin' in it for no literal man—nothin' at all! When I want to read arter this, I'm goin' to read out'n my 'History of the World,' or else the Declaration of Independence, or else the Bible. When I went to college," he continued, with his most consequential air, for he believed that he had an appreciative audience—"when I went to college, I used to like to read Wirgil. Wirgil's interestin,' teacher, an' I'd recommend you to its perusal, but mebbe you don't happen to know Greek! Not much! I'm sorry, Dr. Pyk," said he, suddenly turning to that gentleman, "was you ever to college?"

The fact that he had for a few months frequented the halls of the preparatory department of a small college was to Martin an undying source of glory and boasting. The doctor was completely absorbed in the business before him, and up to the present moment had not paid the slightest attention to Martin.

"No," he replied shortly, looking up from his plate for the first time. "I never was to college, but seen that'n at Lancaster once. College fellers, I find, accordin' to my observation, is ginerally asses. You kin tell 'em by their iggerence an' the size o' their ears."

These crushing remarks failed to stagger Martin. Nothing ever wounded his self-esteem.

"Dr. Pyk," said he, condescendingly, "bein' as you never was to college, but only seen one once, its incompatible with dis-cre-tion to make your opinions a pub-lick-ity. You'd better be more re-ti-cent concernin' of things you don't know nothin' on."

"Well, I jess be swanged!" exclaimed the doctor, dropping his knife and fork with a clatter, "ef here ain't another o' them unbriged, Bible-sized spellin' books! Where in the blue blazes did you learn all them big words?"

"I've been to college, Dr. Pyk."

"An' that's where they stuffed your one-story garret full o' the rubbish that you fire out o' your yard-wide mouth in yard-long words, is it? I'm swanged ef I didn't jess know it."

"Yard-wide mouth?" said Martin, not in the least nettled or abashed by the doctor's rude personalities. "An' it's a mouth to be proud on, too, which the dentist tole me his own self only last week. 'You got a mouth on you, sir,' he says, 'as any gentleman ought to be proud on. It's the most comfortablest mouth to work on ever I seen.' Which it takes a pretty big mouth to do as much public speakin' as I do, and I'll have a heap more to do of I git to the Legislatur' next winter. I've got a speech on the tariff all writ out now."

I smiled at the idea of a tariff speech in the Legislature, although such speeches have been delivered in that august body within the past year, just as arguments pro and con on the currency and national-banking systems have been delivered there, when these questions were national issues.

"What do you know about the tariff?" asked the doctor, with great contempt. "You'd better let the Legislatur' alone an' stick to your store. If you want to exercise that mouth you're so proud on, do it in your Sunday school—make your tariff speeches there." And the doctor chuckled softly at the humor of this suggestion.

"That's so, Martin, that's so," said Mr. Zeke impressively. "The Sunday school's better'n the Legislatur', an' man has but a few days to live, and politics is corrupt. Not," he added, turning to Mr. Pyk—"not that Martin ain't all right as far as he goes, on'y he don't go far enough. If he'd only perfess sanctification, now, as well as religion——"

"I tell Zeke frequent," interrupted that gentleman's better half, "that I'd rather perfess nothin' but pure cussedness than sell buttermilk."

"Oh, Zeke thinks he's goin' to heaven on a fast-line express," exclaimed Dr. Pyk. "But he's on the wrong train. You can't get there on any side track, Zeke. There's on'y one church, which the Apostles founded their own selves. You're a-departin' after strange gods, an' a desertin' of the 'postolic faith, an' so forth, lessen you join my church, Zeke."

"I don't take any stock in that church," declared Martin. "It's a delusion and a snare. That's what I say, an' I'll stick to it. I know all about it, an' the deciples never started it, either. You kin find out all about it in my 'History of the World,' an' I say that Peter, an' James, an' John an' Moody an' Sankey, an' the rest o' the 'postles—which, of course, you know their names without my tellin' 'em over—never didn't have nothin' to do with foundin' that church. I stick by the church that George Washington belonged to; what was good enough for him is good enough for me."

"Ollie," said Mrs. Zeke, "You may fetch in them melons now. Ollie's so plagued foolish," she added as her daughter departed. "She says it ain't proper to put the dessert on the table with the other victuals, but as how it ought to be brung in afterwards; which it's my opinion if they's somethin' else to eat, folks ought to know it. Hope you'ns aint got a sufficiency yet?"

Before the close of the school term for the summer vacation the even tenor of my school life was broken by the arrival of a "Normal Certificate," and the directors seemed to be especially interested in the matter. I did not understand what it all meant, but I was not destined to remain long in ignorance. The importance of the arrival was explained to me in a very unexpected manner by the president of the board himself. He called upon me one evening to notify me that the winter-term election would take place at the end of the session. I gathered from his manner and the impressive tone of his voice that the winter-term election would be a most solemn and awe-inspiring event. He further informed me that I had a rival in the field in the person of the Normal certificate.

"Ve don't like to let dis jance osgape," said the president of the board.

"What chance?" I asked.

"Dot Normal Cerdifigate," he replied solemnly. "Normal cerdifigates is always daken pefore anydings. You haf not efen a Bermanend (permanent) cerdifigate."

"No," I acquiesced meekly, "mine is only a provisional certificate. So I am to understand, then, that the normal certificate will probably be elected in my place as teacher of the district school?"

"Das es so. Most probably he will."

On the following Sunday I was introduced to the Normal certificate, and, lo! it was the confident young man whom I had met at the examination. He had been graduated at a Normal school since then, and had received that awful certificate, the dignity of which is but faintly expressed by capital letters and awe-stricken pronunciation. For, verily, is it not the "open sesame" of an enlightened public-school system?

(To be continued.)

IOWA'S UNTERRIFIED.

Democratic Nominations and Platform. Chicago For the Fair.

The Iowa Democratic state convention was held in Sioux City on Wednesday and the following nominations were made: For governor, Horace Boies, of Waterloo; for lieutenant governor, S. L. Bestow, of Lucas county; for supreme judge, long and short terms, W. H. Brannon, of Muscatine; for superintendent of public instruction, Thomas Irish, of Dubuque; for railroad commissioner, David Morgan, of Poweshiek.

Among the planks in the platform were a declaration against high tariff; one in favor of the Australian system of voting; one in favor of a carefully guarded license law, and the following:

Resolved, That while we demand that all honorably discharged Union soldiers who were injured in the line of duty, or who are unable by reason of age or other infirmities to support their families, shall receive liberal pensions and the special care of the government, we denounce as an insult to every brave soldier, and as making the pension roll a roll of dishonor the decision of the present national administration that "the dishonorable discharge of a soldier from the service of the United States is no bar to a pension."

A resolution was passed favoring Chicago as the place for locating the world's fair, and instructing the state Representative in Congress to vote for Chicago on account of its central location, favorable climate and abundant water and air.

The Grand Prerequisite of Vigor.

The dual operation of digestion and assimilation is the grand prerequisite of vigor. To insure the conversion of food into rich nutritious blood, it is only necessary to use with persistence and systematically Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The foundation head of supply in the animal economy is the stomach. To regulate, to invigorate that organ, and thus facilitate its digestive and assimilative processes, should be the chief aim of those troubled with a deficit of stamina. Nervousness, insomnia, feeble appetite—these are usually traceable to impaired digestion. Overcome this and you of necessity dismiss its multifarious, perplexing and harassing symptoms. The emaciated can never hope to gain flesh so long as assimilation is imperfect. The Bitters surmounts the only obstacle to an increase not only of vigor, but of bodily substance. Conquer also with the Bitters malaria, kidney and liver complaint, constipation and rheumatic trouble. Thoroughness characterizes its effects.

Special Notices.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes because they are all irritating, do not reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm. sep11-2wd&w

HEADACHE TROCHES.

SICK HEADACHE

IN ITS NERVOUS, BILIOUS, OR CONGESTIVE FORMS.

This Remedy is the prescription of one of the leading physicians of Paris, France, and was used by him with unparalleled success for over thirty years, it was first given to the public as a proprietary medicine in 1878. Since which time it has found its way into almost every county on the face of the globe, and become a favorite remedy with thousands of the leading physicians. Medical societies have discussed its marvelous success at their annual conventions, and after their official chemists have analyzed it and found that it contained no opiates, bromides or other harmful ingredients, quietly placed it among their standard remedies.
