Mistaking Our Calling. The Examiner feels impelled, by the knowledge which we display of the proper administration of the streets and by the obvious failure of the street committee of this city to give us good roads...

But our amiable contemporary, in the depths of its annoyance over the mud and ruts that represent our streets, forgets itself. It forgets that the place of an editor is not in public office.

Perhaps these gentlemen are thinking they are doing very well, and that our criticisms are unjust. There is nothing to what depth of their own hubris and their own work that they are contemplating.

Now when our distinguished friend, who knows all about the architecture of Moses and of Solomon's temple and the Ark, has so pronounced an opinion of the abortion that is his building, and takes so severe a view of the criticism which we visit upon it, and has so profound a conviction of our ignorance of art and architecture in making it, we are moved to consider it a very natural supposition that the less elevated and dignified members of our street committee, who are not doctors at all, but, as the Examiner says, barbers, grocers, planers, dentists, tailors and brickmakers, should think that we are wrong and that they are right about the streets...

That Mean Railroad Thief. A Pittsburg judge has decided, we see, that the ten cent levy made by railroad conductors, when the fare is paid in money, is an unlawful addition to the charge, when the full fare permitted by the law is charged. The law allows the railroads to charge three cents a mile.

Married in a Balloon. A young man of this city, who is now in the army, was married in a balloon over the city of Lancaster, Pa., on Wednesday last.

Progressive Savages. Joaquin Miller in The Independent. Maybe it is news to the world that the first paper ever printed west of the Rocky Mountains was printed by the Nez Percé Indians.

Keep the Cums Healthy. If you want a sweet mouth and breath, if the gums become tender, if you lose out with a swelling, hold the tooth. The use of SOZODONT is invaluable because it removes the tartar which separates the teeth and gums.

Wanamaker's. PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 26, 1889. If there were an official inspection, a census of merchandise, the statement about the Autumn Dress Goods now here would be that they surpass in elegance, completeness and number of styles, without doubt in quantity as well, the united total of all other Dress Goods stocks in this city.

There is a feeling of depression as one turns from even a superficial study of this stock to writing of it. The simple truth told in the most prosaic style would make a story that would challenge credulity. Shall we attempt to interest you by detailed description? Our best sense answers "no."

Then "no" it is. Strolling down the Main Aisle, noticing the tables and cases in the centre, the broad counter-ends on either side, and the fixture tops stretching away in the circling aisles to right and left, all filled with forms dressed close as a line of soldiers, each showing a style of Dress Goods different in some respect from every other, you might easily ask, was there ever a show like this?

There are different styles on show, but the pilgrim to the counters will soon find that our unseen world of Dress Goods is greater than the seen, and the styles that remain more numerous than those which appear. Save a few Cashmeres and Henriettas, plain and staple goods remain in ordinary on the shelves, and also the vast quantities of the cheaper sorts of fancy Dress Goods.

A study of Art in Dress Goods is always attractive. Don't laugh, but there is an art feeling in the stuffs. You would be dull, indeed, were you to look over these products of infinite skill and patience without feeling. The dollars they cost, the machines that made them, the boxes that packed them, the ships that carried them, the mechanical processes that cleansed the wool, and spun and dyed the threads, may very properly be mere items of money and commerce.

The art of the Orient and the Occident; the Persian palm and the Scotch tartan; nature in flower, fern and seaweed; figures and forms of the imagination are all in them. They are the children of dreams and fancies. The artists cast them forth as did the old Egyptians the seed upon the waters.

The new thought of the season. Is there any new thought? Has anybody invented a color or created a form? There is not one new fraction of a shade or form. But the poet does not need a new dictionary to make a poem. Raphael did not create colors. But the new thought of the season combines things in fresh relations.

You will find embroidery, no end of it, and hand-knotted fringes, and applique of plush finished about with gold, and an abundance of silver and gold tinsel threads lighting the more sombre tones of the embroidery silks upon the woolen goods. And you will find silk stripes woven in the woolen fabrics and damask silk figures on woolen grounds—and if you want to know all you'll find, hunt for yourself; you'll get a headache before you're through.

Then remember a few vital things. This is not only the biggest but the best selected stock. The prices are very low—the least (quality considered) in the market. The Exhibition will only be made for two days.
