A Lively Contest.

The Philadelphia Democracy have a concluded an animated contest over tion as to whether they should scept the Republican nominations of nypacker and Graham for judge and strict attorney ; concluding to take former and not the latter. There es not seem to have been any vital atter at stake in the issue; nor any par-cularly forcible reason why the Repubcan judge should be taken and the spublican district attorney left. The ies, doubtless, was that the judiciary bould not fall into the contests between rties, whereas the district attorneyship, an executive office, may. It is an idea hich has taken root in Philadelphia, a the Democratic side mainly, and are is certainly great merit in it ; with the state which directly throws judiciary into the arena of party conntions, and the contests in them for these places are as animated as for any other. The judge who has served a term of office acceptably, is generally lieved to have earned a renomination. and it is usually conferred upon him without contest ; and in such case it is oming in the opposite party to ac-

But in this Philadelphia case, Judge Pennypacker has been on the bench for a brief season by virtue of the goverarried, by very long service, the right is expect that the Democratic party rould accept him as its candidate. rein District Attorney Graham had he stronger claim, since he had served through several terms of office very ef-ficiently. We can hardly see therefore that the logic which neglected him and ook Pennypacker was very sound. There was no moral obligation upon the Democratic party to take either ; and if political expediency called for the sking of one, it would seem to have been still further satisfied by taking both. The result seems to have been a compromise of the diverse sentiment of the party upon the question. As we have said, it was not an issue of vital importance ; and was exciting only because the party soutiment was so evenly divided upon it. The contest demonstrated great activity and animation in the Democratic ranks ; which is a very good thing to see. The most cu-rious phase of it was the exhibition of Alderman McMullen and Peter Monroe, who are of the rough and tumble Democrats, arrayed upon the side of Graham's nomination, against gentlemen of more orderly and temperate temperaments who contended for a straight-out Demo-cratic ticket.

walk grades should be prompter sought to an end, by the establishment of uniorm grades and the rectification of those that are wrong at the cost of the city. Certainly there is no matter of official conduct which is more open to popular inspection than the administration of streets. It is clear that those of Lancaster are not well kept, notwithstanding the great amount of money spent upon them. That they should not have a uniform official grade is a disgrace. That they should be covered with stones that promptly turn into mud is a scandal, that might be expected from an administration that finds itself utterly unable to tell the citizen how to lay his curb and build his house in conformity

THE pathetic case of Mrs. Butler is attracting due attention. Father Butler, a Catholic priest, broke his vows four years ago and married a young woman of his parish named Brady. He has now written a very humble letter to his bishop, asking forgiveness, and having abandoned his wife and child is taken back into the church to do penance for his breaking of priestly vows. Bishop Wiggar declares that his marriage was not valid because of the priestly vows, and therefore will not be annulled by the The woman has never church. been other than Miss Brady to the church. She will remain Mrs. Butler under the law, but as she is a devoted Catholic that will not be much convolation for her. With a woman's self-sacrifice she makes no complaint against her husband. is her only comment. The apparent conflict between the church and the law is an interesting feature of this case, for in spite of the fact that in this land the state is supreme, it is evident that in this instance the authority of the church effectually overrides the law. Can the rules and decisions of priests cancel the rights and obligations of a marriage duly solemnized according to civil law? It would appear so.

WHEN the late S. S. Cox lay upon his death bed he remarked to the friends around him that he looked back to no work of his busy life with more pleasure than to his successful efforts for the estab lishment of the life saving service. He had hardly been put under the sod when the terrible storm along the coast proved the value of that service. All along from Maine to the Carolinas there were wrecks, and the life saving crews were working night and day. The record of the station at Lewes, Delaware, is a glorious obituary of Sunset Cox. At that station not a single life was lost from a vessel that could be reached by the life lines, and two hundred people were brought ashore from wrecked ships. At the last men wonder of what use they have been in the world, and the man is happy who can find evidence so clear that he has at least done something for the race.

As attache of the German legation at Washington is now in Ottawa gathering information about the Canadian canals, under orders from his government, which contemplates, he says, extensive development of the waterways of Germany. This is in the line of the policy which Consul Mueller, of Frankfort, has lately reported as vigorously undertaken. The German government will leave no plan untried that

This led to suspicious of murder and brought out the following sad story.
Miss Wetzel's home is Herdon, where she lived happily until she was sent to father, who is possessed of considerable means, insisted that she should go to school and as he was a practical man decided that type writing and book-keeping should be part of her education. When they entered the door she lay on the floor, and a dog was licking her cold face. Their screams brought the old hag and some passers-by, and to them the old woman disclaimed any knowledge of the deed, although she has been locked up awaiting an investigation. A Girl Crazed by Religion.

A Girl Crazed by Religion. Intense excitement was created at Gooch-land C. H., Va., Thursday night during a church meeting by the appearance of Amy Boggs, a small colored girl, in the congre-gation, flourishing a razor. Men, women and children ran in all directions. Some women fainted, others tumbled in the mud, and the girl was soon in posses-sion of the church, her eyes glaring and her slight figure trembling with frenzy. When she had driven the last person from the church, she cried out :

She was finally overpowered by two constables, and an examination showed that she was in a religious ecstacy and was looking for the devil, whose throat she had tooking for the devil, whose throat she had taken a vow to cut. It was fortunate that the congregation field before her, as she had been told that the devil was in some people, and she designed cutting them open to get at him.

In which she said she and Winfield had been married and asked her father's forgiveness. The parents of the girl, however, are in-dignant, and will, it is said, send a consta-ble after young Bidgley at one to arrest him on the charge of abduction. The clergyman who married the couple, it is alleged, will also be prosecuted, as the girl was under age. Ridgley is a man about 23 years of age, good-looking, a good worker and a man of exemplary habits, while the bride is a very handsome blonde, 16 years bride is a very handsome blonde, 16 years old and highly cultured. She Tackled the Justice. A sensational scene occurred in Justice W. H. Davis' court in Wheeling, W. Va., on Thursday evening. Mrs. Annie Cos-tello, a woman of Amazonian proportions, was brought into court on a charge of grand law-cuy. The bearing was set for Friday and as the locable turned to pick up a paper the detection arrang at his throat. Davis is 65 years old, and the frenzied woman brought him to the floor with sufficient force to cut a gash in the judicial head. Mrs. Costello held on to his throat despite the efforts of the officers in attendance and there was a severe struggle. there was a severe struggle.

Finally the justice secured a cane and struck his assailant several times over the head, inflicting seven cuts. She was then secured and locked up. Her oftense is punishable with at least a year's imprison-

What a clear light it throws n, the soldier game, that the party has played so vigorously, to see what babes the soldiers' spokesmen are. Here are a private and a corporal of the army who, retiring from it with that rank, immediately obtained promotion to marshalship in the Republican party, because they were babes and blowers. They had not ability enough to get out of the ranks in the army, but had plenty of stuff to send them right up in a political company. It shows how little material it takes to make a big Republican politician. The exhibition of the rise of Tanner to the pension bureau and his fall from it, illustrated by his own account of his doings, makes material for a screaming fence. Gilbert and Sullivan save in it a fine suggestion for a comic pera.

The Street Grades.

It seems that the troubles of this town over the streets are never-ending, and it is time that a street department is esblished and put in charge of a competent engineer, if we may ever hope to secure good roadways. At present the city regulator seems competent only to annoy the property owner. The movement to pave Duke street with asphalt blocks has disclosed the fact that the street has not a uniform grade. Property owners on either side have different curb lines and the roadway cannot man, woman and child inside their bounbe laid to accommodate both. All these grades have been given by the city regalator at different times, and appear to have been perpetuated upon the city plan that was established a few years go, after it had been supposed to have on carefully drawn by the present y regulator and approved by the city court. One would think that after such an establishment of city street lines and grades they would have been con-formable; sufficiently at least to formable; sufficiently at least to enable sidewalks to be laid and streets to be paved. But it appears that the map did but record the various existing grades and no effort was made to make them uniform ; and now the mons. He went to Scotland and let the streets cannot be paved or pavements aid without a wrangle between the property owners, the street committee and the city regulator; the latter being called in to settle the difnce, only to make it wider. A little while ago there was trouble in East often that a preacher tries the game. Orange street, when Mr. Reuben Baer undertook to lay a new pavement; and a remarkable result was educed from the combined efforts of all the authorities to settle the grade ; after vigoran war on a small scale was prosecuted for a week or two, the curb has inally been left to run an independent ace ; as also Mr. Jno. G. Haas, in existence ; as also Mr. Jno. G. Haas, in the square below. And when Dr. Mes-maphalt gutter in front of his Lime trust residence, he had the very inter-ming experience of being required to be a been at first ; his only compensa-ble months, of Connected, openation; between the residuant trust in vain.
