A CHEAP MULE.

But He Has Enough Sand to Make It Lively For Ills Owner. Fred Wilhelm is a well-known suc-tioner, whose stand on market mornings Fred Wilhelm is a well-known auctioneer, whose stand on market mornings is in Centre Square, in front of the INTELLICENCER office. Fred sells many curious things, from an empty tomate can to valuable antique furniture. Sometimes he disposes of five stock, and it is often difficult to tell whether it is dead or alive. At this morning's meeting he offered a mule which, although he looked worn out, had a very bad eye. The animal was put up, and after he had been given several trials of speed around the monument the bidding began. The suctioneer was willing to take any sum at a bid and finally the mule, which belonged to George Stroble, was sold to a rag peddler, named Roadman, for $1.50. The purchaser had a pretty good "jag" on and after getting possession of the animal he concluded to ride him home. He mounted upon his back, but scarcely had he taken his seat before the mule threw down his head and pitched him forward upon the belgian blocks. Roadman was determined to ride the beast and he mounted him again with the same result. A second time he came up smilling and straddled the animal, which by this time had become tired of the nonsense. He threw his owner with much greater force than before, and when he struck upon the hard stones he was believed to be very badly injured. He managed to get to his feet, however, but he would not tackle the mule again, so he led him from the Square and in the direction of his home. The bystanders had a great deal of fun, which was worth more than the price of the mule.

SAM MATT FRIDY'S TORMENTORS. He Goes to His Home This Afternoon to Escape From them.

The Republicans of York county do not get much show with county offices, so the when positions are to be given out under the Republican national administration they become very hungry. The big crowd that came here on Monday were sat upon by the man who is to be collector and his friends, and they went home disgusted. This does not deter others from coming. This does not deter others from coming, and they continue to arrive on nearly every train. A well-known politician made a suggostion that the railroad company issue special excursion tickets for the use of office seekers between York and Lancaster. He thought it would be a good idea to have this line upon the tickets: "Good for one round trip from York to Sam Matt Fridy." They would then be good to Lancaster, Mountville, or any other place where Mr. Fridy may be in hiding.

Mr. Fridy became disgusted at noon today and left for his home at 2:10 to escape from his tormentors. The evening trains will no doubt carry persistent office-seekers to Mountville. As soon as his appointment is announced he contemplates going on a trip and will remain until he has arranged the slate.

Hall at Mount Joy and Salunga. It is little wonder that the air is very ool in Lancaster to-day, as there were heavy falls of hail at different places. The big storm was in Philadelphia, but there big storm was in Philadelphia, but there was quite a severe storm in Mt. Joy. About 4 o'clock a very heavy rain storm took place, and it was followed by a shower of hail, which lasted from ten to fifteen minutes. The stones were as large as shellbarks, and in many places they could be shoveled up. At Salunga the storm was almost as severe. Abram Shenk, the miller, had a team standing at his mill, and the hail stones fell upon them with such force that they became frightened and two of them jumped out of their harness. As there are no growing crops that could be injured now, the damage was not great.
