Railroad Lawlessness.

A Philadelphia gentleman who had the courage and industry to sue the Reading railroad company for putting him off a train, upon which he was a habitual passenger, because he would not surrender his ticket to the conor until he had been given a scat, been awarded $25 damages, the judge aring the law to be all in his favor. The railroad company had originally caused him to be arrested under the law which a subservient Legislature lately pursed, making it a crime, summarily punished, to ride upon a ratiroad withat intent to pay the fare. This law was ecured under the railroad's representatives that they were subject to great loss and damage by the invasion of their trains by tramps; and it was invoked in this case by the Reading railroad to punish a passenger who insisted upon being given the seat he had paid for. The charge was withdrawn, however, when it came under the cognizance of more intelligent officials; but no redress therefore sought it in the courts. A Pittsburg man has lately been recorded as having resisted another common railroad abuse, which requires a nger who has not bought a ticket to pay ten cents more than the ticket would have cost. But as the comanies always charge the full extent of what the law allows them to charge for their tickets, the ten cents demanded in addition is an unlawful charge; as the court decided when the Pittsburg pas-

was offered the abused passenger, who senger appealed to it. But in such cases as these, it does not materially help the passenger that the law is all in his favor; for the railroad companies are big enough to defy the law, when only the passenger's and ghter's interest opposes them. A bg railroad is run with mighty little regard to the law indeed. The men whom it oppresses, who are courageous enough and stiff-necked enough to haul it before the courts for its offenses, are very few, and possibly the reason is that it does not pay them to do it. Men, generally, in these de. based times of money making, are not wont to do things for the sake of abstract justice which do not pay ; and when a great corporation is over on the other side, and it is plain that it will be a costly business to fight it, the injured individual generally sees the wisdom of pocketing his affront and saving his money. The man who refuses to be abused, however costly the effort to defend himself, is the nobler man; but he is not the common man.

And the railroad officers know it; and they go in their defiance of the law, treating their passengers and customers as they please; giving one a seat, or a ar, or a pass, or low rates, while they charge another an extra price and make sure to their discrimination. The railroad officer is born to depravity, as the sparks fly upward; and no decency will be taught him until the law sends him to jail for his wrong doings.

Compose the Dispute.

We regret to see that there is a dispute between employer and employed in the cigarmaking business of this city. It is an important industry here and we trust it is not to be damaged by the unreasonableness of those engaged in it. Such a result would doubtless be welcome to rival factories in other places, which have en with alarm the growth of the cigarmaking business in Lancaster; and would be delighted to prevent it.

So far as we can see, the proposition made by the employing firm here, which is objected to by their workmen, ne reasonable; and it at least deserves the trial which the employers ask for it. The workmen will remember that it will profit them nothing to refuse any method that will tend to cheapen their manufacture; and that the only suit in making their product costly, will be to stop the production.

They are entitled to such wages as their labor will command; and if they can get more elsewhere there is no reason why they should not go and get it. The employer knows what he can pay and is not likely to offer good workmen less. He ought to know, too, how to conduct his business; and in this he should not be interfered with by his

There is never any need of difference between a reasonable employer and reaable workmen. When it is conceded that the latter should have the best wages the same market affords, they can fairly ask nothing more. When the employer is left free to manage his business as he pleases, paying the wages his neighbors pay, his business will prosper according to his management, when the field of his labor is well chosen.

It is not open to question that this is a good field for eigarmaking. It has to meet, however, the powerful competition of large capital already invested in less favorable locations, and it will have to aght to secure the proper reward of its superior location. It is to the cigar-maker's interest to help the manufactuper, by yielding a ready aid to every reasture; and we hope that workmen will be able to see it.

Talk About the Weather. The New York Herald weather predicas have attracted attention through elr general accuracy, but it must not forgotten that the Herald prophet as the advantage of the more detailed ather reports, and the daily maps owing the movements of storms, hich are issued by the national ather bureau. He takes substantially e same data and makes his own wild es at the results which seem to prove m an exceptionally shrewd guesser.

also offers occasional essays on siber matters, which the national mean never does, as for example, the rement of to-day's cyclone in Engd. This weather man notes that the that left the American coast and over Newfoundland on Thursday put, must have changed its course or wald not be in the Irish channel, t was reported by cable this in the position of the winds and the course of cyclones that means for us a cold winter. How this conclusion is reached is not made clear, but a learned discussion, however unintelligible, is always impressive if it terminates in a definite announcement. The Herald man talks profoundly, guesses shrewdly and wins great glory. To thoughtful men the most striking thing about the whole meteorological science is the frequent demonstration of how very little is really known of the ways and the reasons of storms and weather changes. Information is gathered by telegraph all over the country, and all the weight of physical science is applied regardless of expense and with the result that every now and then a tremendous storm comes rushing down upon us without warning, or any apparent suspicion of the wise men that such a thing was in the air. It is becoming plain that until the whole world can be dotted with signal stations and covered with a net of telegraph wires there will be no thoroughly reliable weather service.

It May Be. General Boulanger is advertised by cable correspondents of New York journals as about to set out upon an invaaion of France against the advice of all his advisers. This may or may not a true report. So much that is sensational is printed with-out foundation, that we put little confidence in the reliability of this statement. But there is no telling what a Frenchman will not do; and it is possible that Boulanger proposes to go alone, in a raid on France, just as it is possible that it will be a successful one. however strongly the conditions seem to indicate otherwise. The fact that his advisers advise against it is rather in its favor; since a man of destiny does not go according to advice of his counsellors. It is by breaking away from prudent counsel, and succeeding, that Napoleons declare themselves; and it is a Napoleon that Boulanger would be.

The French have just decided by a large majority in their elections that they are satisfied with the republic. But Boulanger may show quite the reverse. The Frenchman at an election booth. and the Frenchman within sound of a bugle call, are different creatures. They may flock to Boulanger's standard just as they flocked to the government ballot boxes.

NEAR Long Branch, New Jersey, on Monday, a party of cranks under the lead of Esek Wolcott, awaited the end of the world which that strange character has a habit of prophesying. He finally post-poned the event for a few days. In 1873 Wolcott was so convinced that it was time for him to ascend that he jumped from the roof of his tarm house and sustained serious injuries by the fall. A single freak of the kind would not be so strange, but this man has quite a crowd of followers.

THE Jersey politicians all have their eves on Newark, where Democratic Mayor Haynes has been nominated for the fourth term, and the vote is expected to show the Republican position on the temperance LETTERS just received at San Francisco rom Honolulu declare that there is widespread discontent and a general wish for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States. What a feather that would be in the cap of Premier Blaine!

An article signed "Outidanos" has been going the rounds of European journals and reviews and attracting general comment because it is said to have been written by Gladstone and has not been denied by that statesman. After commenting on the huge military establishments that have grown up in Europe in the past eighteen years of almost unbroken peace, the writer pro-cee is to inquire whether the triple alliance answers to its name of "a league of peace." He asks, "Is its strength adequate to its purpose? Is that purpose rational and just? and can the league itself be expected to endure? The combined power of Germany, Austria and Italy is doubtless very great. But from this combination France and Russia (to say nothing of England) are excluded. And this, not on grounds merely arbitrary but for serious cause." He notes the rivalry between Austria and Russia in the Balkan peninsula, and that neither seems disposed to what some simple persons might take to be a probable method of escape from the difficultynamely, leaving that peninsula to the free use and disposal of its own inhabitants. The irritation between Russians and Germans and French and Italians is noted, and then the irrepressible quarrel over Alsace-Lorraine, where Germany has a strong moral title and will defend it, and where France, aware of the identity of feeling between the inhabitants of the conquered provinces and the rest of her population before 1870,can not be expected to do otherwise than believe in its persistency.

The writer then turns to the reasons that bind Italy in the alliance : "It is best to be plain on these occasions. We will therefore not scruple to say that the appearance of Italy in the triple alliance is no better than a gigantic piece of political tomfoolery, which is so strange as to be grotesque and which would even be comic if it were not ruinous." He attempts to measure the relative strength of the triple alliance and of the other three great powers by taking the strength of the standing army and navy, the population and the revenue of each group.

Germany with

Austria and France

[taly, and Russia.

Army and navy 118,000,000 125,000,000

Revenue 279,000,000 1257,000,000

There is nothing in these figures demonstrative of gross disparity or of an incapacity on either side to wage a deliberate and determined struggle. The proportion of population under arms in Italy is enormous and sne contributes more than a half to this total of forces, while the wealth of France is equal to that of any two of the others. He cannot find the shadow of an argument which would induce the British nation "to enter into any engagement beforehand, however guarded by conditions, to take part at the outset of the apprehended European war, lest the balance of power should suffer harm." It would seem that the grand old man wants Italy to step out of the alliance when it expires in 1890 and would have England also stand aside while the big four, Russia, France, Germany and Austria, fight it out. Wise old man.

P. T. BARNUM's advertising agents have made a great stroke in London. They issued a programme of a circus procession "Programme of the Lord Mayor's Show." In this there were mentioned allegorical floats representing England and America, drawn by twelve cream-colored horses, thirty American thoroughbreds and twenty-two camels, a steam organ drawn by a dozen llamas, and a dozen ostriches drawing cars. A dispatch to the New York Herald says that Sir Henry Isaacs, the lord mayor, was so astonished that he observed: "This can't be the programme, for it will not be decided upon until to-morrow by twelve gentlemen, who will meet at the Guildhall and arrange the programme. I can say there will be no floats, no llamas, no ostriches and no Barnum in the lord mayor's show. There is no intention to offend a man like Barnum, but he can't be permitted to interfere with the lord mayor's show. We may borrow a few horses from him, but do not need the entire circus." Of course Barnum did not entire circus." Of course Barnum did not expect to make his procession a part of the stately progress of the lord mayor, but that very dull worthy has given him as fine an advertisement as could be imagined. That the lord mayor should have taken the programme seriously seems almost incredible, but Englishmen are often as slow as Sections to the lord mayor should have taken the programme seriously seems almost incredible, but Englishmen are often as slow as Scotchmen in taking jokes.

Columbia College's President.

Hon. Seth Low has been chosen president of Columbia college. Mr. Low was born in Brooklyn January 18, 1850, and graduated from Columbia college in 1870. He entered the mercantile house of his father, A. A. Low, and in 1875 became a partner. He was founder of the Brooklyn board of charities and its first president. In 1881 he was nominated for mayor of Brooklyn by the Republicans and was elected. In 1883 he was re-elected.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

SCROFULA HUMOR

"My Daughter's Life Was Saved." "In regard to my little daughter, whose life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsapa parilia, I would say that before she was six months old scrofula sores began to appear on different parts of her body, and in a short time she had 7 running sores. Two physicians were called but they gave us no hope. One of them advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. Our attention was called to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we began giving it to her. A marked improvement wa noticed after she had taken only one bottle and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy. The other members of my family have been greatly benefitted by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I recommend it as an excellent blood purifier." B. C. Jones, Alna Lincoln Co., Me.

SCROFULA IN THE EYES. "My daughter suffered terribly with sore eyes, caused by scrofula humor. We were obliged to keep her out of school for two years We had medical attendance, but she failed to gain relief. At last, knowing that Hood's Sarsaparilla had cured my mother of rheumatism and believing it must be good for the blood, I concluded to have my daughter try it, and it has entirely cured her." Wanamaker's, PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1889. The cooler weather touches you. You draw the curtains earlier, the fire blazes in the grate or upon the hearth, you overhaul last Winter's wardrobe and think of needed things for comfort. If warm Underwear or Hosiery is deficient, you make note of it, and then need to add another note concerning Wanamaker's. This is underwear day.

We want you to realize our Underwear power. You may see under the plate-glass of the cases as you enter at Chestnut street many of the finer sorts, at the counters at either end of the Main Aisle large quantities for current sales, at various points about the store great stacks and pyramids that are meant to suggest the hundreds of cases latery in from both sides of the sea that are breaking out daily to fill the places made vacant by sales at the counters.

All this means buying power. The power to buy right includes the power to sell right, and that means
