ADDRESS, THE INTELLIGENCER, Lancaster, Pa.

LANCASTER, PA., October 17, 1889.

The Senator and the President.

Senator Quay has found his way to Washington, where he has been for some time overdue, the cause of his detention at his home in Beaver county being ascribed to his disgru tlement at the purpose of the president to appoint a an of his own selection to a Philadelphis office, and now that he has reached Washington it is said that he is in a warlike frame of mind and disposed to read the riot act to the chief magistrate, notifying him that he must make the Pennsylvania appointments to suit the Pennsylvania senators and not himself. We say senators, because Senator Cameron is said to be traveling along with Senator Quay with apparently an earnest desire to keep the peace with him. This desire was very distinctly shown in the filling of the collectorship in this district, which is Cameron's bailwick and where his choice should have had the plum. The man he would naturally have selected did not get it, and the understanding is that it was because Senator Quay kicked against him. Senator Cameron is appearing as a very negative quantity in the discharge of the office filling duty of the senatorial place, and it may be that the pending question of his re-election may account fully for his "me too" amiability in waiting on Quay and following his lead. Both senators are advertised to appear now before the president to protest against the appointment of Captain Walters, of Cheser county, to a Philadelphia office, because he is not the choice of the Republican party of the state ; or in other vords, their choice. Captain Walters voted for Harrison at the nominating convention, while Quay was working for Sherman ; and the president has a reasonable desire to reward him, nothing being alleged against his fitness. The act which commends him to the president is, however, his sin in Quay's eyes ; and the simple question at issue is whether Quay or the president has the choice of appointments to office in Pennsylvania. The national constitution gives it to the president ; but the Republican party constitution gives it to the Republican senator. It is the cardinal doctrine of that party, in this state at least, that the office of whator carries with it the control of the federal patronage. A congressman is allowed to have something to say, as a matter of courtesy, about the appointments in his district, but he is expected to get the final endorsement of the senator. The fact that the senator passes upon the confirmation of the officer gives him a power over his selection which is effectively used with weak-backed presidents. And the fact is that it takes a president of Jackson fibre to resist this assumption which has become so deeply seated in the constitution of the senator of the Republican party. Upon the face of the situation, the United States senator should be barred from dictating an ap. pointment to the president by reason of account which is overdue and upon which interest is charged would seem to be assessable ; but certainly there can be no intent in the law to compel the return of the merchant's sales against which run his accounts and bills payable. Such taxation would be impracticable as well as oppres-sive, and we do not suppose that the auditor general intends any such instruction. He has given the assessors enough to do in advising them that they can seize on all interest bearing obligations, in the possession of the citizens ; and if they get hold of them in any general way they will need to be wide awake. The law has cleverly offered as a bribe to the counties one-third of the tax collected as a spur to their exertions : and we may expect to see a pretty vigorous effort made to scoop in all the taxable things in sight. The good people who are disposed to pay all that the state asks, and are ready to disclose all the moneys due them, will suffer ; while

ARTIFICIAL ICE AND RUSTLESS IRON Making Thousands of Tons of Ice and Millions of Rustless Kettles. From the Pittsburg Dispatch, A curious order has been received and almost executed by a Lawrenceville firm

A curious order has been received and almost executed by a Law renceville firm from a large San Francisco artificial ice company. It calls for two miles of six inch diameter rustless iron pipes, to be used for maxing cold air through and freezing large quantities of water. Hitherto the ice company has been obliged to replace this enormous mass of pipe every 8 months or 12 months. In the ordinary cast iron pipe the severity of the cold air passing through the pipe begins to rust the iron immedi-ately they are put in use. By this new process, however, the rusting is obviated, and the pipes will last for 20 years without any apparent injury. The pipes are made in a zig-zag fashion, and are fastened to-gether by two tons of malleable iron fittings. They are fixed against the walls of compariments about 500 feet in length and 75 feet in breadth, and the cold air is thus enabled to freeze thousands of tons of thus enabled to freeze thousands of tons of the majority who incline to pay the

The rustless process, which has been until lately an experiment, has now dem-onstrated that great economy can be used, not only in ice pipes, but in every article where iron is used. In the past year over 2,000,000 kettles have been subjected to this process in Pittsburg. The method is very peculiar. After the article is made it is put into a furnace about 3 feet bigh, 15 feet long and 5 feet broad. The furnace is made in an oval shape, air-tight. After the iron has been in the furnace for two hours, and it has attained almost a white heat, the air that comes through the regenerators and the air valves is shut securely off, and the furnace is made air-tight.

tight. After the air has been shut off the superheater, which is located in the combustion chamber at the rear of the furnace, and at right angles from the air valves, is opened and the furnace is filled with steam and kept in this condition for eight hours. At short intervals a small valve is opened, so as to allow an exodus of steam in the fur-nace, allowing fresh steam to be put into the furnace.

the very fact that it is his duty to confirm or reject it. The one appoints with the advice and consent of the other. The advice naturally runs to dictation with senators of the Quay stamp ; and the president who wants to keep himself untrammeled in his appointments needs to set out with the notice to the senators that he does not desire their advice and that they can take their innings when he asks for their consent.

Jail for Sparrow-feeding.

There are some comparatively small evils that become the hobbies of prominent men, and are magnified to absurd importance. One of these is the Engish sparrow, which was recently attacked by the United States government in a costly illustrated volume of over four hundred pages, issued as builetin one by the department of agriculture. This was making a good deal of the sparrow, but the New York Herald lately remarked that in New York it was apparently lawful to send a lineman to instant death, but a man who feeds a sparrow may be fined or imprisoned. To a doubting inquirer the Herald replies that the sparrow law referred to was passed in June, 1887, as amendment to chapter 427 of the laws of 1886. It says :

The English or European house sparrow The English of European house sparrow (Pusser domesticus) is not included among the birds protected by this act, and it shall be considered a misdemeanor to inten-tionally give food or shelter to the same. For the misdemeanor a person may be sent to prison for thirty days, or fined fifty dollars. Like many very foolish laws this one is of course destined to eternal slumber, but it is hard to imagine a more grotesque spectacle than that afforded by the New York Legislature sitting under the dangerous ceiling of the palatial capitol at Albany and gravely trying to make the humane assistance of a freezing or starving sparrow a punishable offense. And yet in the government book on sparrows above referred to we find seriously recommended the enactment of laws making it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment or both to intentionally give food or shelter to the English sparrow except with a view to its ultimate destruction. The sparrow crusaders nobly urge the states to punish all who give oisoned crumbs to that fearful little bird from England. No doubt he is a nuisance, but so is the tramp, and yet no one thinks of punishing those who aid the latter.

The Revenue Law.

Auditor General McCamant's circular of instruction to county commissioners, construing the act of 1889 will be read, with interest, as it proposes a clean sweep of the state tax over everything that anybody owns. The act of 1889 is a radical measure of taxation, and does not let much taxable stuff escape it, but the auditor general seems to improve even upon it. His construc-tion seems to be that a tax shall be assessed by the commissioners upon all mouey due to a person, partner hip or corporation that the state has not laid its grasp upon in some other custody : and under it the moneys due upon the open account of the merchant would mem to be assessable, though the law it-mif limits the taxation to amounts bear-ing interest. Strictly construed, the book it; but the auditor general seems to
