Go, Cupid; any to her I love
That rope fall and time is fleeting,
I watch the dial's shadow move,
And watt—and wait—to give her greeting,
For youth is sunshine on the dial,
And love is but an old, old story;
The years may dance with lute and viol—
The shadow moves—so ends their glory!

Go, Cupid, beekon with your wing,
That sweetest chance may waft her hither;
For we must woo, remembering
How fast the roses fall and wither.
And oft the dial long ago,
The pavement sunk with mossy edges,
Saw Youth and Love meet all aglow,
And whisper by the old yew-hedges

Go, Cupid, tell the maid I prise
How many in the courtyard wandered,
What laughing lips and witching eyes,
In love's delight their beauty squandered?
The ruffs, brocade and buckled shoes,
How softly down the paths they pattered
With galiants gay in old-world hues,
When crowns and kingdoms little matter Go, Cupid, sleep ; your cheek is pale;

And we can woo among the sages; smance is but a weary tale

Monotonous from all the ages.

My heart! SLe comes from youder door;
And time and shadows fit for ever;
Why, there was never youth before,
And love like ours, oh, never—never!

Herculean Strongth ontinually on the strain, or overtaxed at in-rvals, is far less desirable than ordinary vigor repetuated by rational diet and exercise, and perpetuated by rational diet and exercise, and abstention from excess. Professional puglists and athletes rarely attain extreme old age. As ordinary vigor may be retained by a wise regard for sanitary living, and for the protection against disease which timely and judicious medication affords, so also it may be lost through prolonged sedentary labor, uninterrupted mental strain and foolish eating and trinking, the chief and most immediate sequence of all four being dyspepsis. For this condition thus, or in any way induced, and for its offspring, a failure of muscular and nerve power, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the primest and most genial of remedies. Not only indigestion, but loss of fiesh, appetite and sleep are remedied by it. Incipient maisria and rheumatism are banished, and kidney, bowel and liver complaint removed by it. oct21-38
