GREAT GAME OF POKER

or Pettigrew Draws Four Cards and Wines Rig Pot.

Ington Dispatch to New York Sun.

Iittle circle of poker players in the a made up of the senators from Neward Cameron, Plumb, and one or hers, will flud a congenial addition make in the person of the senator south Dakota, Mr. Pettigrew. If any an succeed in transferring any of the om his pockets to their own, it will through luck, but good play, and it are to be exceptionally good play, too tonly does the fickle goddess took Pettigrew with favor, but he is a player from away back, knows the of a hand, possesse an imperturbable cool head, and a judgment second is in the world. He is a hard man a money from at cards. When the is senators were drawing for terms, ettigrew drew the plun, a prominent Dakotan remarked: "I would have led on it. Pettigrew can draw to the end of a royal flush and fill every" Not very long ago Senator, then Pettigrew was staying at a small town kota, where he knew two or three whose piles were nearly as big as his Pottigrew was staying at a small town Dakota, where he knew two or three in whose piles were nearly as big as his m. Some one suggested a quiet game of aw. There being nothing else to do ttigrew was willing, and they advanced to a private room in the hotel, are a pretty stiff game was soon in ogress. After playing some time a jack to became rather "fat." At last some one oned it for fifty. Pettigrew hesitated at st, but concluded to come in and drew it cards. The man who opened the pot bet), and Pettigrew raised the same amount. In third player dropped out, as the man to opened had not drawn any cards. It ing then the turn of the opener he raised then the turn of the opener he raised her fifty which Pettigraw doubled, sort of thing went on for some little until the fellow who had opened the

"Great Scott!" was the chorus.

"Guess that's my pot," said Pettigrew.

"What in — did you draw to?" saked his companions.

"That typewriter," said Pettigrew, indicating the modest little queen of clubs.

"What did you open it on?"

"Three kings and a pair of aces, though I don't know as that is any of your business."

ness."

That broke up the game. The senatorial players here heard this story of Pettigrew's luck and are fighting shy of him. They are pretty good poker players themselves, but they are so much afraid of the Dakota man's proverbial luck that he has not yet been invited into a game. He is watching his chances, however, and sooner or later will get into the statesmen's game.
