AN ENGINEER DIES.

CONSUMPTION, AFTER A YEAR'S ILLNESS, RILLS JACOB S. WEBSTER.

A Native of Downingtown and Well-Enown Citizen of Columbia For 10 Years-The Postoffice Matter.

COLUMBIA, Jan. 14.—Jacob S. Webster, a reil known resident of lown, died this norming at 3:20 o'clock, at his home on North Second street. His death was caused asamption, after almost one year's. He was born in Downingtown, cickness. He was born in Downingtown, and was in his 49th year. He has been living in town about 20 years. He was an engineer on the P. R. R., but left the service about 8 years ago. Before his death he was engineer at the Columbia Iron company's mill. A wife and three sons survive. The funeral will be held on Thursday ernoon at 3 o'clock.

The Postoffice Matter.

W. C. Moore, special agent from the post-office department, was in town this morn-ing at 10 o'clock, and met a number of prominent business men at A. J. Kauff-man's office. The talk was of a desultory character in which the advantages and the disadvantages of locations were discussed. Communications were presented from Dr. C. F. Markle, Geo. DeHuff and J. K. Flury which were general in character and were filed with Mr. Moore. Geo. W. Haldeman spoke in favor of the location on which the Episcopal church now stands. P. A. Krodel, J. G. Stoner, farmer; B. C. Welsh, were in favor of an uptown location. tion. S. S. Detwiler asked for informa tion as to locations or sites which the Third and Locust street people proposed to offer. He thought that the business people ald decide, and he was of the opinion that three-fourths of the people would say that the Second street location was the best. He could say that if that site was selected cultable building would be erected. Mr. Moore stated that the government would not entertain a proposition for removal un-less a substantial building should be offered. Wm. Morris submitted plans and proposals for a postoffice building above Third street. Mr. North will submit plans in a few days. A number of other speeches were made in fayor of location in some other part of town. Mr. Moore allowed the fullest discussion withont any personal expression. All interested believe that the question will soon be settled.

The regular monthly meeting of council will be held this evening. Marie Hilfords and an excellent com-spectfully invited to attend the funeral, from his mother's residence, No. 237 West Walnut street, on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment at Lancaster cemetery.

NEVIN.—Died at her home, Csernaryon P.ace, near Lancaster, Pa., Monday morning, January 13, Martha Jenkins Nevin, widow of the late Rev. Dr. John W. Nevin, and daughter of Robert Jenkins, esq., of Windsor Forges, in the 55th year of her age.

Funeral from her late residence on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The directors are discussing the advisa-bility of closing the schools on account of sickness. Five teachers were sick yesterday, and the list of sick pupils is still Employment of Dogs in War.

Writing about the use of trained dogs in oreign armies an sentinels, messengers, a., the London Saturday Review recalls foreign armies an sentinels, messengers, etc., the London Saturday Review recalls that the employment of dogs in war was not infrequent from the very earliest times. Corinth is said to have been saved by fifty of these valiant auxiliaries, which, while the rest of the garrison slept, remained on the alert, and performed valuable outpost duty till the drunken revellers were roused. Phillp of Macedon utilized their service in pursuing the mountaineers among their rocky fastnesses during his campaign against Argile. Attila preferred to trust the safety of his camps to their keen perceptions rather than to the ears and eyes of his Huns. The Romans recognized their value for the same purpose, and the geese of the capitol came to the rescue not only of men, but of dogs, too, which for once were caught napping. The Earl of Essex, in suppressing the Irish rebellion in the time of Elizabeth, is stated to have organized a force of 800 bloodhounds to accompany the army. In more modern times we find the celebrated "Moustache" amongst the heroes of the French army at the commencement of the century. He was decorated by Marshal Lannes at Austerlitz, and finally met a soidier's death in the Peninsula, where he was shot snortly after the siege of Badajoz. At the present time the Russians train dogs to act as sentinels, having found the necessity of their aid during the expedition under Skobeleff in Asia Minor, where a stealthy and cunning seemy found means to surprise them on the more than one eccasion. Their German neighbors began to experiment on the value of dogs for outposts as far back as 1886, and are satisfied as to the assistance they would render in the outpost line."

Juvenile Pickpockets.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

An incident in the experience of a Christmas shopper indicates the presence in the city of some one proficient in the training of "Arful Dodgers." A lady was going up Illinois street recently, just as it was growing dark, and was addressed by two little girls, who ran out from a deorway and trotted along by her side. "Lady, lady," said one, in a piping voice, "will you please untie this string? I can't do it myself." The child had on a cape, fastened with strings, tied in a scries of hard knots. "I stooped," said the lady, "to unfasten them, and worked industriously at the task for a minute or two without success. The other girl pressed close to my side, but I thought nothing of it, even when I saw the flash of a hand-kerchief in her hand. At that instant the little one I was trying to assist said, kerchief in her hand. At that instant the little one I was trying to assist said, 'Never mind any longer, lady: I will get somebody else to untie the knots for me;' and with that away they both ran as rapidly as their legs could fly. A moment later I missed my handkerchief, which I had slipped into my cloak poeket when I stooped to reach the knots. The unoccupied girl had taken it, and the tightly fastened cape was merely a ruse to withdraw my attention."

Death of a Young Man. Edward L. Harris died yesterday at his home,217 West Walnut street, of heart diswas 80 years of age and a son of the late James Harris. He worked for a time in the Pullman car shops in Chicago, and re-turned to Lancaster about a year ago.

A Train That Is Late. There is more grumbling among the patrons of the Pennsylvania railroad about the train called Atlantic Express, which should reach here at 11:30 from the west eb day, than all the others on the road put together. It is about an hour late almost five days of a week, and people are obliged to wait in the station until it is imost time for Seashore Express.

The Soboring Machine.

From the Doylestown Democrat.

The "Sobering Machine" is something new to Doylestown and to Doylestowners of the present day, but the time was when it was a familiar piece of machinery on our streets. That was almost forty years ago, and before our town had become the metropolis it has grown to be. Like all great inventions it was the child of necessity. It was used to get rid of drunken men on our streets. The inventor took the him! wheels of a set of low running gears, rigged a box on the axle, with a tongue, or shaft, to pull by. It was manned by a half dozen young men, "Jack" Reynolds in command, and were generally on duty at night. When a drunken man made his appearance on the streets, the machine was brought out, run to where he was, he was helped into it and laid on his back, and then run out of town. It was not a downy bed for the occupant, by any means, and a ride of a mile would have a wonderful sobering effect on him. The old "Dums," who used to come into town from the country, soon got a great dread of the "sobering machine," and, after one or two rides, they failed to visit us. Its influence was likewise, very salutary on the same class in the borough, and, while the machine was in use, they were afraid to appear on the street when tipsy. This plece of machinery has passed into history, and but few remember it. It did some good in its modest way.
