A NOTABLE BIOGRAPHY. REV. DR. THEO. APPEL'S LIFE AND WORK OF BRV. DR. J. W. NEVIN.

An Affectionate Tribute to the Memory of the Great Theologian and Contro-versialist—The Offering of the Alumni of Two Colleges and of the Reformed Theological Seminary-The Excellent Style of Publication

A most handsomely printed and excellently bound octavo volume of 776 pages is the last contribution to local biography, in the form of "The Life and Work of John Williamson Nevin, D. D., LL. D., by Dr. Theo. Appel, of this city. The book has just been issued from the press, and will soon be ready for delivery to its subscribers. The alumni of the college and other friends of the author who guaranteed its publication by subscriptions, paid in advance, were furnished with it at $2.50 per volume, and although its regular selling price will be $3, the biography will be make immediate subscriptions to it at the

This work has been prepared by the direction of the Alumni association of Franklin and Marshall college, as a tribute to the memory of the great and good man who for many years filled the position of ecasion of the centennial and semi-centennial celebration of the college, held in 1887, a committee was appointed to superintend the preparation and publication of the work, and the committee appointed Dr. Appel to prepare the biography. It has required several years of careful and arduous labor by the editor to prepare the work, and it is now offered to the public. It was printed in this city, and its appearance indicates the best style of the printer's art. It compares favorably with the best publications of larger cities. The work is special interest to the citizens of Lancaster, therefore, because it portrays the life of one of our most distingushed men and because it has been written and published

Lancaster has been famous for her soldiers and her statesmen, and it is no less to her honor and renown that here also lived and died one of the greatest theologians and

Dr. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton theological seminary, since deceased, said at Dr. Nevin's funeral that he regarded him as one of the greatest of three or four great men in Pennsylvania. As a philosopher and theologian his fame extended beyond his native country to the Old World, particularly to England and Germany.

The life of every great man is full of interest, but the story of the life of the "sage of Cærnarvon," as depicted by Dr. Appel, reads like a romance. The interest is tained from the first page to the last. To of it. As the reader turns from the ch ing picture of the great man's life at home on the farm in the Cumberland valley, where he studied Latin, like Judge Black, in the fields and along the hedges; of his student life at college; his trials in making choice of a profession; his military career as orderly sergeant of a crack military company at Shippensburg; his marriage; his mastery of the Hebrew at Princeton; his anti-slavery and temperance battles at Pittsburg; his struggles in placing the literary institutions at Mercersburg on a solid foundation; his presidency of the college at Lancaster; his retirement and the glory that shone 'round him in old age in the sunset of life-to his utterances upon the deep and vital themes of philosophy or theology the interest only increases.

The biographical part of the work is well performed by the author, who was one of the early students of Dr. Nevin, and was intimately acquainted with him to the close of his life; but its chief merit consists in the admirable setting given to the writings of Dr. Nevin themselves. author allows his subject to speak largely for himself, and quotes freely from his best productions; at the same time he becomes his interpreter, so that the reader has no difficulty in understanding the bearing and meaning of these productions. This was no easy task, and it required great skill to make selections from these voluminous writings, oftentimes upon the most abstruse subjects, in such a way as to make them intelligible, and, it may be said, captivating to the lay mind.

Dr. Nevin was broader than the church with which he was connected. He stood for Protestantism; he spake for Christianity at large, nay more, for truth itself. No man did more to establish the true position for the church and its theology in this new country than he. The trend of Christian thought in the world to-day is in the line of the impulse which he gave it. He was shead of his age, and one is struck with the similarity of the positions taken to-day by leaders of Christian thought, even to the extent of the very language used, with his utterances of thirty or forty years ago.

In the "Anxious Bench" controversy he exhibited the courage of Luther at the Diet of Worms, and, at the very outset, determined the attitude of Protestant Christianity towards the error which threatened the church in that movement.

It is safe to say that no religious discussions in this country ever elicited as much interest in the theological world as Dr. Nevin's controversy with Dr. Berg, and Dr. Hodge, of Princeton. These disenssions had to do not only with questions concerning church polity, but with the deepest truths of religion itself. The history and admirable sketch of these controversies constitute one of the most fascinating chapters of the book. The reader is sorry when the chapter closes and is tempted to turn back and read it again. These controversies stirred up the theological world of the Fatherland, and called forth contributions from the foremost theologians of Germany. These debates will be read with delight by every scholar, whether interested in the particular topics discussed or not, by reason of the force of scholastic lore are used with most telling effect. No crouching error escaped their scarching thrust. Dr. Novin was a formidable antagonist,

Dr. Nevin was a formidable antagonist, and a merciless foe of error and wrong wherever he met them. The vice of intemperance and social wrongs of every sort winced beneath his crushing blows. The book tells how he antagonised evil in its many forms throughout the entire period of his life, and how he became the great champion of truth that he was. No student or thoughtful person in any walk of life can fail to be edified and benefitted by the work. It will be useful as a fitted by the work. It will be useful as a fitted by the work. It will be useful as a book of reference in every department of learning. It contains a valuable index by which ready reference can be made to any topic treated of. Any one interested in the philosophy of history, in ethics, eathetics, ethnology, sociology, theology or philosophy in general, will here find foundations laid broad and deep, and a safe guide leading the way.

I ancaster city may well be proud of the great names that adorn her history, and that will live in all future time. In placing the name of Dr. J. W. Nevin among these we do only justice to his memory, and commend his biography to the intelligence of this community.

The subject of the biography was a citien of Lancaster, the writer of it is a citizen of this city, the publication of the volume is the work of the alumni of the college over which Dr. Nevin presided; it is foremost among the educational institutions that are justly the honor and pride of Lancaster. If it is not to be said that we lack appreciation of our own best treasures, let the book have a wide cir-culation in the community in which Dr. Nevin lived, labored and died.

LANCASTER'S SHOE FACTORY.

It Will Begin the Manufacture of Footwear Next Week.

Lancaster is to have another important industry and it will add to the prosperity of the southeastern section of the city, in which it is located.

The industry referred to is the Kraie shoe factory, which will begin operations next week. It is located on the corner of South Duke and Chester streets, and has a frontage of 60 feet on Duke street and a depth of 30 feet. The building is a high one-story, with basement, and both these rooms are well lighted, there being windows on three sides of the structure.

In the basement is the engine and boiler, and in it will also be kept the greater portion of the stock used in the manufacture of shoes. The engine is of eight horse power and the boiler ten of horse.

The machinery for the manufacture of shoes is mainly on the main floor, and is of the latest improved used in the manufacture of shoes. —

The capacity of the factory is 180 pairs of shoes per day, but it will not be started at its full capacity at present, but in the near future it is expected that the demands for the product of this factory will enable the owners to keep it running with a full force of hands. When running full twenty hands will be employed.

The title of the corporation is the Kraie Shoe company, and is made up of John and Andrew Kraie. John is a young man with considerable experience in the business. He was for some time employed at the Hiemenz shoe factory, and afterwards at the factory of Alvin & Marvin, Philadelphia. He will have the practical management of the business Engl drew Kraie, the other member. Suppany, was the other member of years at the Freie Presse office. 140 will have cha of the engine, boiler and superintend that part of the work done in he basement.

Both members of the firm are steady, industrious and intelligent young men, and will doubtless make the new enterprise a success. One of them is now on a tour to neighboring cities, soliciting orders, and when he returns the factory will be started.

The amount of capital thus far invested in the business is about $8,000. The father of the Messrs. Kraie, a large property owner living in the Seventh ward, is the financial backer of the company, and he is abundantly able to give it all the assistance needed, until it gets on a firm footing, which from present indications will be in the near future.

The friends of General Hastings in Delaware county who are anxious to help his candidacy for governor are arranging to hold a reception and fox-hunt in h honor at the Black Horse hotel, in Middle town township, on January 30. The event is intended as an offset to the reception given Senator Delamater in West Chester on December 31, at which General Hastings was also present. None but the known advocates of General Hastings will be invited, and the assembly will also include many of the leading Republican politicians of Philadelphia. It is expected that 200 to 400 riders will take part in the sport. Three foxes will be turned loose at intervals of half an hour apart. LANCASTER PRINTERS HOLD THEIR THIRD ANNUAL RANGUET PRIDAY NIGHT.

A Fine Menu Discussed at Hotel Lancas ter, Where Several Hours are Spent. A Letter From Geo. W. Childs.

The printers of Lancaster celebrated the birthday of Benjamin Franklin in royal style on Friday evening, when Laucaster Typographical Union, No. 70, held their third annual banquet at William H. Snyder's Hotel Lancaster. It was a decidedly successful affair, and was highly creditable to the typos. The members of the union met at the hall over the Inquirer office at 9 o'clock, and headed by the Leville of the union met at the hall over the Inquirer office at 9 o'clock, and headed by the Inquirer the union met at the hall over the Inquirer office at 9 o'clock, and, headed by the Iroquois band, marched to Hotel Lancaster. Covers had been laid for fifty people by Mr. Snyder. The room presented a handsome appearance. On the west wall were these large letters in green "L. T. U. No. 70." About the room tropical plants were scattered and beautiful pyramids of fruits adorned the table which was set in the shape of a hollow square.

A SWINDLING SCOTCHMAN.

After Being Cared For By Rev. McCullagh He Imposes Upon Him.

A Scotchman called on Rev. Dr McCullagh at St. Mary's parsonage on Thursday and represented that he was in destitute circumstances. The doctor arranged for his board and the fellow departed. Friday he again returned and told the doctor that he had secured work at the Penn iron works, but there were certain tools required, which he did not possess and unless he had the tools he could not go to work. He did not want money to buy them, but if given an order he would be under many obligations. The doctor gave him an order for $1.50 on Reilly Bros. k Raub and the Scotchman with profuse thanks departed.

After the doctor considered over the natter he thought the fellow might be an impostor. He sent to the Penn iron works and learned that no such man had been there seeking employment. Inquiry made at Reilly Bros, & Raub's developed that the Scotchman had been there and secured

Chief Smeltz was notified to be on the lookout for the swindler, and the following description of him was given by Docor McCullagh: Five feet ten inches in height, prominent nose, two lower front teeth out, has blue overalls, tweed coat, cap, collar and necktie. THE RESULT OF LA GRIPPE.

Mrs. W. K. Beard Dies From Pneumonia Mrs. Hannah Beard, wife of William K. Beard, master carpenter of the Pennsylvania railroad, died this morning at o'clock at their rooms in Brimmer's building, on North Queen street. Mrs. Beard was taken with la grippe one week ago. She had grown much better, but on last Monday was taken with a chill which brought on pneumonia. About 8 o'clock last evening she grew much worse, and her death re sulted. The maiden name of Mrs. Beard was Emons and she was born in Wilmington, Delaware. Her brothers and sisters are: Charles T. Emons, a carpenter foreman, for the Pennsylvania railroad, living at Columbia, Mrs. Susan Smalley, of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Maggie Fish, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Harrison Emons, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Beard was a member of the Duke street M. E. church, and a most estimable lady, having a large circle of friends. Besides a husband, for whom the greatest sympathy is felt, Mrs. Beard had one daughter, Mrs. B. L. Hess, who resides at Los Angeles, California. Last October Mrs. Beard and Mrs. Emons, her sister-inlaw, went to California, on a visit to Mrs. Heas, and they returned December 15th, after a splendid trip.

Kitch & Smith Robbed and the Property

Sold at Faegley's. Complaint was made late on Friday st Charles Yackley, Lewis Brown and John Hammond for felonious entry and larceny by Kitch & Smith, contractors. The prosecutors had their tools stored in a building in the rear of the residence of Mr. Smith, on Chester street. Yackley and Brown were arrested for stealing lead pipe from Hardwicke, and it was known to the officers that they were engaged in others thefts. They were closely questioned by the police officers who arrested them and finally admitted that they had stolen a large lot of tools from Kitch & Smith. gentlemen were notified and after making an examination of their tools ascertained that the following were missing: 10 crowbars, an anvil, 24 trip hammers and 10 stone sledges, valued at $75.

The boys entered the shed in which the tools were kept by breaking off a board. The tools were carried to Hiemenz' field and secreted, and taken to John Faegley's place, where they were sold for old iron. Yackley says he was asked by Brown to go to Smith's stable, and when he met him there he told him about the tools secreted in the field, and both went to the spot designated, got the tools, took them Faegley's and sold them.

Brown says that Yackley stole the anvil and took it to Faegley's, sold it and received the money for it. There are a number of other boys implicated in these thefts, but the officers have as yet been unable to secure their arrest.

The following officers of Harrison Cas-tle, No. 148, Knights of Mystic Chain, on Thursday evening were installed by Dis-trict Deputy D. S. Rettew, assisted by Past Commander P. G. Reinhold, acting select marshal, and S. K. Henry Wolf, as chap-Chaplain, Jacob Lutz; S. K. commander,

A lot of ground in the city of Lancaster. At the last term of the court the presi dent judge cautioned the constables of the city as to the returns they were about to make, as it was well known that the liquor law was being violated. The constables of the city, while the court was talking to them, looked as if they did not under stand what the court was saying. Men who enjoy the license of the court have petitioned the court to make the appointment of James E. Crawford as a mat er of protection to them against violators

Mr. Hensel said the remonstrances were handed to him. As to Mr. Crawford he is an unknown man to the speaker. The court gave Mr. Hensel until next Saturday to show that Mr. Crawford was not a proper person to appoint as a detective and if t is not shown that he is unfit the court will appoint him.

Judge Livingston said he had not reelved any request to appoint Mr. Crawford other than the papers filed in the case. When the original petition of Mr. Crawford was presented it was stated that he was to e an officer of the Law and Order society. Under the law the court could not appoint him as an officer for a special organization. That petition was withdrawn and another presented asking for the appointment of Mr. Crawford as a detective in conformity with the requirements of the act of as-

On the argument of the case counsel for Mr. Crawford admitted that he would be employed by the Law and Order society. Mr. Crawford, he would not object to the appointment.

As the matter now stands, Mr. Crawford will be appointed a detective next Saturday, unless it is shown that he is unworthy to receive the appointment.
