Lancaster, Pa LANCASTER, PA., Pebruary 5, 1890.

The Ticket. The Democracy of the city made ex-cellent nominations last evening for the school board, councils and ward offices, and displayed a spirit which shows that a full party vote will be polled at the lection. There is no sign of apathy in the party in this city and it is in the best condition for a spirited canvass and an earnest effort to elect its ticket. The city is so strongly Republican that it is a matter of surprise; no less than con-gratulation to find the minority party in so good a case. There is, however, enough in the evil results of the present Republican administration to invite its overthrow; and if the good Republican people of the town can forego their party prejudice sufficiently to vote for a good Democrat in place of a bad Repub-dican there is plenty of opportunity af-forded them to exhibit such virtue and

Mr. Robert Clark, who has been unanimously named for mayor against his protest, has been paid so high a compliment by the manner of the nomination that we understand that he has consented to accept it.

He is entirely capable of filling the place, if he is chosen to it, with credit to himself and the party; and his personal popularity bids fair to secure his election. In view of his association with the In-TELLIGENCER it will be becoming in us to let the voters judge him without further words from us.

"The Birds of Pennsylvania" is the title of a costly and handsomely illustrated book published by the state for free distribution, and so eagerly scrambled for that a second and revised edition was promptly authorized by the Legislature, for the satisfaction of disappointed applicants for the first. There ned to be no better argument for the free publication and distribution of this book than that a large number of people wanted it and did not want to pay for it. It afforded a graceful and easy way of complimenting influential supporters of assemblymen, and therefore met with favor, while it seemed to be in the line of encouragement of knowledge, and so found little opposition. When the secsome signs of impatience by city representatives who failed to appreciate birds, and by a few who thought a good book worth paying for, and did not like to see the state going into the free distribution of anything that might really have a high market value. The first edition of six thousand copies and the second of nineteen thousand, will cost the state together about seventy thousand dollars. and then no doubt a third edition, still further revised, will be called for and cheerfully granted, because the statesis desperately tired of giving tons of uninteresting reports to his influential friends and appreciates this picture book with its one hundred colored lithographs, for which the plates cost four hundred and fifty dollars each. It is a very pleasant arrangement all around, excepting for the book dealer with books on birds for sale, and as he is an insignificant minority he can of course expect no mercy, and a rapid extension of the principle may be looked for. Books on cattle, horses, sheep and dogs, may rapidly follow the birds; then books on flowers, trees and all nature, on a scale similar to that adopted by the state geological survey, with its endless proceson of volumes. Then after Pennsylvania's free encyclopedia has become famous, there may be a suggestion that Pennsylvania books on men and women, only called novels, should be printed free. Although issued by the state for nothing, many of these books are sure to find their way rapidly to book dealers, and people who really value them pay dearly.

The seventy thousand dollars might have been more profitably employed in cautiously introducing new and valuable species of birds, in lessening the nuisance of the English sparrow, if it is a nuisance, and in establishing state aviaries just as we have state fish farms. Hawks might be destroyed and insectiv-orous birds increased. In fact if our statesmen were bent on booming birds they could have used the money well but they were only anxious to meet the pressure for free and light literature. At a recent meeting of the State Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, Governor Beaver was consured for not hurrying up the publication of the second edition, and it is now carefully explained that the state printer was too busy, but has at last commenced work on it. It is a pity that a small nominal price, say a dollar a volume, can not be put on the book just to see how many of the applicants would stop clamoring.

Why Does Not Science Tell.

Surely such a winter as this should be susceptible of scientific explanation, and that it has not received it reminds us again that there are many more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy. We have been used to think that the science of astronomy had reached to a full understanding of the movements of the spheres; but when winter turns itself into summer it seems that there is something going on about the sun or the earth that we have not yet comprehended. The Washington weather bureau undertakes a feeble explanation in attributing the weather to the changed direction of the storms from the Rocky Mountain plateaus, and tells us that the irriga. tion which has been extensively introed in the hitherto dry plains of the Southwest has had a vast influence upon the movements of the air. We night accept this explanation with patience if the alteration in the weather had been less sudden and radical out nothing so small will account for this June day in February. It does seem hat with the weather observations which have been recorded for so many years and with the industry with which the suns and stars have been studied. the scientists ought to be able to at least rival the goose bone and tell us on we are going to have summer in

The Country Against Rim.

It seems that Speaker Reed is not able to get through the job he has set himself and is forced to submit to the House rules for its government before completing the Republican roll of membership by the decision of the contested seats. One seat only has been gained by his action, and it is a poor recompense for the exhibition that he has made. If all of his party were as unscrupulous as himself, he would have gone through with his task ; but it is not easy to find in a body of men such total disregard for law and order as animates men of Reed's stamp in pursuit of their aims. Some of his fellowmembers in the House have declined longer to follow his lead in refusing to the House the usual and necessary rules for its government, and the speaker has been constrained to agree to their introduction. It is well that Reed has arisen to the seat of power in a time when the country is free from special agitation. He would be dangerous in troublous times; whereas now he is simply contemptible. Whether he has been animated in his course by vanity and an aim to exhibit himself as a man of power, as some say, or whether he has had a deeper purpose, he has evidently overreached himself and done irreparable damage to his party. There is no longer a doubt that he has been offensive to the sense of the country and that its verdict is altogether against him.

The Quality of the Bench.
The centennial of the supreme court, which has been celebrated in New York happens at a rather unfortunate time for that body, which is not at present believed to be illuminating the nation with the brilliance of many extraordinary lights. The fame of the old chief justices clings around it still, but there is little in its present constitution to reinforce the odor of the roses. And this by the way seems to be the condition of things with supreme courts generally; and the suggestion is that there is some thing in the temper of the times which keeps off the bench the brightest legal luminaries. What it is may not be very hard to guess. In former days the practice of the law was not pursued for wealth's sake, or that at least was not its greatest guerdon. It was considered a highly honorable profession, and the men who loved fame knelt at its shrine. Now the need of the family is such that the man of capacity struggles for the wealth that will enable him to abide in the front rank. And to meet the expenditures which fall upon him, the law is not the best adapted business; and the judiciary is not the most profitable walk in the law. And so it has come to pass that the law has ceased to be the most honorable occupation, and the bench the most honored place in the law; to which the natural consequence is that we have suffered a depreciation in the quality of bench and bar.

AMERICAN traders have stirred up an interesting little rumpus on the coast of Colombia, where they have been trading with the San Blas Indians, much to the dis gust of the Spanish speaking Colombians. who want to keep that trade in their own hands. The Colombian government took vigorous measures to stop the trading with Americans and sent troops to the trading stations that had been established. The story runs that the natives hoisted American flags left with them for the purpose by the Yankee traders. that they announced that they were Americans and warned the Colombian commander to leave at once. The natives were only armed with spears, bows and knives, but they have a terrible reputation as fighters and the Colombians thought best to retire to their ship. Mr. Larkin, new York lawyer, who has just returned from the isthmus, says that he met the captain of this force, who laughed at the story, but admitted that it was true. Mr Larkin went down to try to save two American traders seized by them, but was unsuccess ful and bitterly commented upon the attitude of the Colombians. "The Colombians think we are a set of 'Old Betties' who don't amount to much. If the United States would make a good impression on them just once it would last for some time. but our government doesn't seem inclined to assert itself even when the property of American citizens is in peril."

The stories of these traders sound suspiciously like filibustering, for although the natives of San Blas seem to be practically independent, their country is generally recognized as part of Colombia, and yet the traders say " at each of the seventeen trading places we gave the natives a flagstaff and an American flag, which they were to fly when they saw us coming, and a cannon with which they could salute us properly." They argue that the "Indians have never been conquered, and have never paid tribute to the Colombian government. The Colombians gave them poor whisky and robbed them. Our visits have a refining influence. We are civilizing Suppose foreigners had under taken to give flags and cannon to a tribe of our Indians who had never been conquered but had received bad whisky and been robbed. There seems to be a difference beween tweedledum and tweedledee.

THE failure of Joseph Murphy and B. Hamill & Co., manufacturers of cotton and woolen goods and yarn, is attributed to the open winter, which did not encourage the expected demand for goods. If more heavy failures traceable to the same cause do not occur it will be a sign of cautious and able business management, for nature can't change old established ways without disturbing the balance of things in trade. A mild winter may be said to be good for the poor in several senses. It adds to their numbers by business failures and saves them trouble and suffering, but in the latter sense this winter has failed by reason of the grip, which has more than made up for the woes of cold weather. The temperature, by the way, seems to have nothing to do with the severity of this disease, as they have it in the far Northwest, where the thermometer has been wandering from twenty to forty-five legrees below zero. Whatever the cause, the grip and the weather have pretty well upset any doctrine of probabilities that may have been the basis of business speculation. The druggists and doctors have reaped a fine harvest, but as Paris disoatches report greatly increased inebriety due to the prescription of stimulants for the grip, we may expect to add that to the list of camages from the remarkable combination of circumstances.

PROFESSOR ANDERSON, lately minister to Denmark, is remembered by not a few citizens of Milwaukee as a poor boy who made a living years ago peddling apples about the banks and railway offices.

EMPEROR WILLIAM and Prince Bismarck resolved that there should be no repetition after the death of Empress Augusta of the squabblings and misunderstandings which scandalized Europe after the death of Emperor Frederick. Charge of the papers of the empress was given to a state officer, and they were placed under seal in order that the journals and memoirs she was known to have written might be quietly buried in the Hohenzoliern family archives instead of causing trouble and disturbance like the famous diary of Emperor Frederick.

THE DUKE OF MONTPENSIER, Antoine Marie Phillippe Louis d'Orleans, died suddenly on Tuesday at San Lucas, Spain. He was the fifth son of Louis Phillippe, and was 66 years old. He was the father-in-law of the Count of Paris, his oldest daughter having married that prince in 1804. His third daughter was Mara de las Morcedes, the first wife of the late king of Spain. In his youth he was an officer of artillery and saw real service in Africa. He has been a conspicuous figure in Europe since 1804, the date of the "famous Spanish marriage" by which he was united to Marie Louise Ferdinande de Bourbon, the sister of Queen Isabell. The marriage planned by Lodis Phillippe and Guisseppe was intended to put a French prince on the throne of Spain. Montpensier was one of the candidates for the throne when Amadeo, of Savoy, was chosen. Amadeo, of Savoy, was chosen

The report of Adjutant General Skelton upon the militia force of the United States shows the strength of the militia of the states to consist of 7,697 commissioned officers, 91,373 enlisted men and 7,208,498 men not organized, but available for military duty; of the territories, 214 officers, 2,365 men and 101,673 availables; of the District of Columbia 141 officers, 1,643 men and 42,000 availables, making a grand total for the United States of 8,062 officers, 103,-292 men and 7,352,171 availables. New York is the banner militia state, with 743 commissioned officers, 13,478 men and 650,000 availables, Pennsylvania following with 628 officers, 7,865 men and 659,905 availables. Ohio ranks third, the Buckey state having 375 officers, 5,544 enlisted men and 600,000 availables. The United States Militia.

A Young Lady Killed A Young Lady Killed.

Etta L. Phillips, of Pittsburg, a student of Bethany college, at Wellsburg, W. V., died Sunday morning from the effects of a pistol shot. On last Friday Miss Phillips, accompanied by another young lady and two gentlemen, were at target practice with revolvers just back of the college, when, by some accident, a ball struck her in the bowels, lodging in the fleshy part of her hip. Her suffering until the time of her death was intense. She was one of the brightest of her class and respected by all.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Scrofula

In One of Its Worst Forms-A Remark able Cure.

A " white swelling " is one of the very pain ful forms of scrofula and most difficult to cure The remarkable effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the case described below, illustrates the power of this medicine over all diseases of the blood. "In 1887 my son, 7 years old, had a white swel-ling come on his right leg below the knee, which became very much swollen and painful, and contracted the muscles so that his leg was drawn up at right angles. Physicians lanced the swelling, which discharged freely, but failed to help him materially, and I considered

A Confirmed Cripple. I was about to take him to Cincinnati for an operation, expecting his leg would have to be taken off, and began giving him Hood's Sarsa-parilla in order to get up his strength. The medicine woke up his appetite and soon pieces of bone were discharged from the sore. We con-tinued with Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it seemed to be doing him so much good, and the discharge from the sore decreased, the swelling went down, the leg straightened out, and in A few months he had perfect use of his leg. He now runs everywhere, as lively as any boy, and apparently is as well as ever." JOHN L. MCMURRAY, Notary

MERCURIAL RHEUMATISM.

Mr. J. C. Jones, city marshal of Fulton, Arkansas, writes: "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. The leading physicians of the city were called in, and they prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without affording me any relief. I also tried mercurial and poisah remedies, with the same unsuccessful result, but which brought on an attack of mercurial rheumanssm that made my life one of untold agony. After suffering four months, I gave up all former remedies and commenced taking Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) After taking several bottles, I was entirely cured and able to resume work. I consider Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) the greatest medicine for blood poisoning to-day on the market."
