ADDRESS, THE INTELLIGENCER.

LAWCASTER, PA., February 7, 1890. Philadelphia's Many Troubles. Philadelphia seems to be always in trouble over its municipal matters; somehow civic things cannot be got to run straight. There is so steady and determined a slant sidewise to the municipal machine as to suggest bad government, and that would naturally eject the ruling party from control, but for the notable fact that the minority party does not show signs of being much wiser than the majority. The Democratic party of Pennsylvania is not proud of the Demo-eratic party of Philadelphia and we do not remember the day when it has been. Its representatives are always en. Its representatives are always raising a row in state conventions and always doing the like at home. They can neither be induced to hang together nor hang themselves. The in-ducement to politics of a number of them seems to be in its turbulence and their reward to lie in their party defeat. Men in both parties are tarred with the same stick and run the town with it. There is one municipal office which has been steadily decent for a considerable term of years and only about one; that is the controllership, whose respectability happens because respectable men happened into it. It shows that an office is what the men who hold it make it. Gov. Pattison and Colonel Dechert have embalaned the controllership as Philadelphia's one sweet official odor. The town just now finds, in addition to its other troubles over its water, its ts, its Reading terminal and its belt lines, that it spent last year more money than it spent last year more money than it received, which agreeable information its controller gives it. Notwithstanding its exceptionally advantageous position in having its water and its gas from which to make money, it levies an enormous real estate tax and still cries for more. Philadelphia should lay no tax at all, but should have ample means to pay its way without taxation. Its water works should yield it a large income and they do do a great deal better in that way than its gas works, which should go far towards discharging the city's ob-ligations out of the enormous profit that ought to accrue from selling gas at a dollar and a half a thousand feet that can be made for a tenth of the money. If to these sources of income a proper sum was added from the car companies that cover its streets, Philadelphia should have everything it wants without direct taxation, and she cannot even get pure water. She drinks the drain-age of the Schuylkill Valley; and is now exciting herself over a proposition of the Reading railroad company to sell it the Schuylkill canal water, which the Reading has no further use for, having gone out of the unprofitable canal business. She would like to dispose of the water ; but the city does not seem to be readily persuaded that the Schuylkill the Schuylkilk Chief Engineer Ludlow, before he was ejected from the place of superintendent of the water supply, by that Philadelphia spirit which refuses to permit capacity to rule its departments, told the people where they should go for pure water and where alone they can get it; and that is in the highlands of the Delaware. So everyone knows; but they say it costs too much to get it from there. The city has no money and is up to its constitutional limit of debt. But wherefore may it not agree to pay a company of public spirited citizens three or four per cent. interest on the cost of the viaduct that will bring it this good water, and pay back the principal when it is able? Surely there are enough people in Philadelphia who for three per cent. and good water would advance the money to build such aqueduct and wait for it until the city was ready to buy the works from them. If the city can enter into a lease of the Schuylkill canal with a privilege of its purchase, it can enter to a lease of a Delaware aqueduct with like privilege; and with the result that

We have an amiable disposition towards the Reading railroad company, but we are not willing to go so far to gratify it as to prefer its dirty water to c'ean water, even if it should be offered to us as a gift; and to be asked to buy it would make us shudder with indignation. Neither does our reregard for the Reading corporation as a long suffering and struggling people, impress upon us the vast importance to the city of getting their terminal to Market street. Arch street seems to our country mind to be as good a terminal and we do not understand the big fuss that our Philadelphia cousins are making over the difference of just one block. They have even had a mass meeting of indignation over the question and they talk of hanging their councilmen in effigy. It is a hot fight between two railroads apparently, with plenty of money in it to make all the noise.

The Rudy Appeal.

We understand that as the board of pardons, which is petitioned to consider the commutation of the death sentence of Rudy, will not meet on the 18th instant, owing to its being the day of the elections, the governor will be asked to grant a stay of the execution which is axed for the 20th, and will undoubtedly do so that the case may be heard by the

We have already expressed our decided opinion that this man was convicted on insufficient evidence. There was nothing at all in it to fasten conclusively the guilt of the deed upon him. The evidence was all circumstantial and in its effect only laid the ground of a suspicion against the son of killing his father. In our judgment such a crime especially needs to be proven and cannot reasonably be suspected. Sons do not kill their fathers in cold blood and without motive. This verdict seems to say that this murder was done in cold blood; for that only is murder in the first degree. The fair assumption, however, in default of evidence to the contrary, we should say would be that when a son clays his father it is done in passion; which would be murder in the second degree. So that whether guilty or inno-cent, Rudy was not guilty of the first degree of murder and his sentence should be commuted.

Fires and Modern Houses. Fire Chief Parris, of Washington, in commenting upon the Tracy calamity, severely criticised the modern artistic and ornamental style of furnishing houses with hard woods soaked with oil and varnished. . His remarks have been widely copied and emphatically en-dorsed, but are not likely to put a stop to that effective and durable style of house finishing. The use of heavy curtains instead of doors is another practice that helps along a confiagration. Still, houses are not built for fire emergencies but for comfort and pleasing effect, and in spite of occasional horror people will continue to take the risk. It is all very well to talk of the safe simplicity of the good old times when hair cloth furniture and venetian blinds made the glory of the darkened parlor, but not even peril of fire will drive many people back to that way of living if they can have the more dangerous but luxurious appointments of modern furn-ishing. The only effective way of meeting the peril is by the encouragement of methods of building that will make escape easy and not allow the lives of all the household to depend upon a single stairway. Sliding doors closed at night would have saved the Tracy family from smothering, and might have checked the very rapid spread of the fire. Devices for escape by the windows might be easily placed in the upper rooms of private houses in a way that would not make them too promi-nent, and yet readily available. The dangers arising from defective heating arrangements, and carelessness of servants should receive close attention, and a fortune awaits the man who will devise a lamp that will put itself out when it feels like exploding. All these perils may be removed when steam heat by indirect radiation is furnished to hundreds of houses from a central station, and when electric lighting has become per-fect, safe and cheap. The cooking may even be done at a central station, and

Top-Heavy States.

Little Rhode Island is going to inaugurate the state campaigns with an election on the first Wednesday of April, the result of which is very uncertain because no one can be sure of the result of the recent extension of the suffrage. The Republicans of course talk as though they felt sure of command-ing everything but "the Irish vote" while Democrats are confident that their nomines, ex-Governor Davis, will carry the state easily, even against wealthy and popular Governor Ladd. There is hope that the state will march right into the Democratic column, but it seems more probable that it will have to be ranked with Connecticut as one of the doubtful states with Democratic leanings in presidential campaigns. The April elections in Rhode Island promise to be a great feature in the political events of years to come, as they will draw a great deal of attention and exercise a certain influence on campaigns. As the state is small there may be desperate efforts by politicians of the Dudley type to secure the prestige of a victory there by the liberal use of cash, and the Rhode Island voters will have lots of temptation and high prices. Little states that are doubtful invite operations like those of Wanamaker and Quay in Delaware. If they could be merged into larger states their politics would be more safe and clean for their loss of dignity. They are simply top heavy with more national influence that their population entitles them to carry.

ADJUTANT GENERAL HASTINGS and General Snowden are confident that the National Guards convention now in session in Washington will be able to secure an increase of the appropriation for militia by the general government. Four hundred thousand dollars was the amount appropriated last year and they now hope for a million. Two years ago the amount was two hundred thousand and General Snowden argues that if it was doubled before they should be able to have it doubled again. If the association should follow this logic successfully for three or four years our military expenses would quite surpass those of European powers and the nation would be subject to many of the dangers of a standing army with the additional perils of conflicts of state authority.

At the French cooks' ball in New York on Thursday there were elaborate pieces of sculpture, apparently of the purest marble, but really of mutton fat. Strange to say the disclosure of this fact seemed to put an instant stop to the admiration readily yielded by every one.

THE French government continues firm in prohibiting the production of a new play by Francois Copee, which is said to be a wonderful work of genius written in graceful but powerful verse. The plot runs as follows: "A priest who is kind and charitable, who has lived from infancy with his sister, a benefactor of the poor, and who could not be tempted by any consideration to quit his threadbare cassock. is seized for giving money to the enemies of the Commune and sho as the soldiers are entering Paris. The latter in turn slaughter the Communards who fall into their hands, and while the platoon firing of the soldiers is heard, the sister of the Abbe Morel, driven to despair by the death of her brother, utters cries of ferocious joy at each shot that brings down an insurgent. She tries to pray; she attempts to repeat the Lord's prayer; but her lips, which curse and utter blasphemies, cannot utter the words 'Forgive us as we forgive them.' At this moment one of the Communards, pursued by the soldiers, enters and asks protection : otherwise death is certain. Then the old Christian, forgetting vengeance, hands him the priest's dress which belonged to her brother, and saves him from the hands of the soldiers who are in search of him.' The government refuses to permit the play because the Commune was the work of persons yet living and it is believed best to keep all remembrance of it in the background. So writers who vividly remember events of which they were a part are discouraged from enriching literature and history with them. It is a pity, but good

Talk about realism in art! Two little men of Philadelphia, aged four and five, played doctor on Thursday with startling realism. Said Johnny Kennedy to Jimmy Cole: "Say, Jim, let's play doctor; you let me cut off your finger and I will doctor it." Jimmy put his hand on the door-step and Johnny secured a heavy thin-edged stone to represent a surgical instrument. He brought this weapon down upon the patient's fingers with all his might, breaking one and severely crushing another. The game was continued in the office of a real doctor. Realism in literary art real doctor. Realism in literary art nounts to about this. The fact that rheumatism is caused by accu-mulation of seid in the blood, and the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has wonderful power in Hood's Sarsaparilla has wonderful power in purifying the blood, explain the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in curing this disease.

"In May, 1885, I was taken with sciatic rheumatism in my logs and arms. It entirely prevented me from working, and I was confined to my bed entirely helpless. I had medical attendance and in August, I was just able to move around. I was reduced to a mere skeleton and my appetite was entirely gone. It was thought by all my friends that I could not possibly live. I took almost everything I could near of, but with no good results, during that winter. One day, reading about taking Hood's Sarsaparilia in March, April and May, I con-cluded to try it. One bottle gave me so much relief that I took four bottles, and since then I have not been troubled with rheumatism, and my general health has never been better. My appetite is increasing and I am gaining in flesh I attribute my whole improvement to taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I carnestly recom-mend it to all who are troubled with like disease. Lingered Between Life and Death.

Mrs. Geo. P. Smoote, a highly cultivated and estimable lady of Prescott. Ark, writes under date of April 23, 1889; "During the summer of 1887 my eyes became inflamed, and my stomach and liver almost hopelessly disordered. Nothing I ate agreed with me. I took chronic diarrhosa, and for some time my life was despaired of by my family. The leading physicians of the country were consuited, and the medicines administered by them never did any permanent good, and I lingered between life and death, the later being preferable to the agonies I was enduring. In May, 1888, I became disgusted with physicians and their medicines. I dropped them all, and depended solely on Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), a few bottles of which made me permanently well—well from then until now."

MADE HIS LIFE A BURDEN.

I have had scrofula until it made my life a burden. I was inexpressibly miscrable, sick, weak, sleepless, and unhappy; desiring that the short time which seemed to have been allotted to me on this earth would hasten to an end. I tried doctors' treatment and medicine, and travel, but none of these did any good, for the scrofula gradually grew worse. One physician, who I traveled far to see, and to whom I paid $150, gave up the case as hopeless. I then gave up all other medicines, and took only Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) Four bottles of that medicine cured me, and for the past four years I have had as excellent health and I am as free from disease as anybody living "

Just why stock-taking should increase or decrease values "no fellow can find out." You've heard it so often that the humor fails to strike you. But it is funny all the same.

Bought them cheap — the Hair Brushes. That's the why of our cheapness in selling. There's nothing mean about them, high class. What is meaner than a mean Hair Brush? This lot has solid backs, honest bristles, white and Russian, secured by solid wire thoroughly drawn, and the prices are 75, 85, and 95 cents, which average one-third off.

Just by these brushes are Celluloid Sets, comb, brush, and beveled-edge oval hand-mirror at $1.50 and $1.75. You wouldn't call it exaggeration to say that the mirror is worth the price of the set. Big buying cuts down the price.

What vile compounds are sold as cheap Toilet Soaps! Can a little miserable perfume, although loud, redeem the stufts of which many are made? As these words run off the pen the thought of mean soap is borne in upon the senses from samples of what you may have been buying during recent days simply because the price is trifling. Wouldn't be tempted to touch the "samples" with unprotected hand. How much diseased and disfigured epidermis is due to bad soap.

But good pure Toilet Soap is not necessarily costly, albeit the finest soaps are a delicate luxury. Here are Glycerine Soaps upon which we are willing to place our carefully guarded trade-mark, "Queen Mary," that you may have at 5 cents for a good sized cake, or 50 cents for a box of a dezen. Good, pure, and largely glycerine. Big buying again. The output doubled, the prices cut in half. You have always paid us twice this price.

Provided said wires shall be maintained at the height of not less than eighteen feet above the grade or surface of the street or streets, and all of the work in locating and erecting said poles and wires shall be subject to the approval of the street committee of city councils.

And provided further, the City of Lancaster shall have the right to the poles to support and convey the city wires as the city of Lancaster may now or hereafter desire to operate, said wires to be crected so as not to interfere with the operation of said railway.

And provided further, that all poles shall be of wood, uniform in height and thickness as near as possible and to be painted of a color approved by the street committee of city councils.

Section 2. That whenever the city of Lancaster shall hereafter pave or macadamize any street or streets along the line of said street railway companies, with asphalt blocks, Belgian blocks, asphalt sheeting, or broken stone, the said street railway companies, their successors or assigns, shall at the same time pave and macadamize the street occupied by the railways; with the same kind of blocks, or material with which the city of Lancaster paves or macadamize the street occupied by the railways; that is to say, between the tracks of said trailways, with the same kind of blocks, or material with which the city of Lancaster shall do the said railway companies, their successors or assigns, shall neglect or refuse to do the said work, then the city of Lancaster shall do the same and recover the cost and expense thereof from the said railway companies in the City of Lancaster, and of the which may be crected and maintained by them within the city imit
