ADDRESS, THE INTELLIGENCER. Lancaster, Pa

LANCASTER, PA., February 8, 1890

The Scum of Citles.

The murder of a New York "street Arab," by a boy whom he had dared, is an alarming example of the fearful mental and moral deformity of individ-uals growing up in the streets of a great city. The small boy who bared his breast for the knife, and the small vilthat royalist Orleans stock has risen lain who coolly plunged it in, were both heroes in their own eyes, and no doubt imagined, from their extensive ac-quaintance with the Police Gazette, and other literature of the gutter, that they were genuine heroes. Of course it is not to be supposed that the victim thought his challenge would be accepted, but he very well knew the effect of "a dare" on the reckless young rascals who are growing up to make the dangerous criminal element of the metropolis. He probably expected to be alightly cut and have a fight over it, and in baring his breast to the attack felt that he was heroically responding to a test of his courage. He showed the stuff of which strong men are made, and it is a miscrable pity that he should be so thrown away by association with a gang of young desperadoes. As for the fourteen-year-old murderer there is something startling about the calm assurance with which he explained to the magistrate that he only accepted a challenge to do the stabbing which had been ex-tended by the victim. He shows not the slightest remorse or fear, and probably his chief interest is in the accounts of his exploit which are sure to appear with portraits and illustrations in publications specially devoted to crimes and horrors. The police report that the so-called "candy store," where this tragedy was enacted, is one of a large number of dens patronized by depraved children. If this terrible state of affairs is not very soon remedied New York will have a class of citizens more dangerous and savage than that which made the mobs of Paris infamous for atrocities and vandalism.

While the arm of the law is "strong, the land at peace and the city quiet, there is nothing to fear from a city's lawless classes, but there must come days of wild political excitement, and perils of government at home or abroad, and in ese emergencies look out for the scum of New York. There is a large foreign element. Italian and Hungarian ready to follow the desperate leadership of the American bred toughs and in a couple of hours they could sack Wall street, fire the city and wipe out of existence many millions of property. New York-ers are fully aware of this but seem to place too much reliance upon the regiments of state troops in the city. These small bodies of militia might do good work but the numbers against them would be overwhelming and a mob with a good leader could have plenty of time to finish their work of destruction by simply cutting all telegraph lines leading from the city and taking posses sion of the railroads. This may seem a very lurid presentation of the re-mote possibilities; and it is so. For it is right to look the worst squarely in the face in consider-ing the tendencies of the dark undercurrent of city life in these bright modern days of Christianity and civilization. There have been movements to colonize city children on Western farms, but so great a social evil needs more radical measures of relief. Some way must be found of changing the condi tions of city life. A Pacific Poland. Harper's Weekly is very much alarmed at the leaning towards entangling foreign alliances shown by the general approval of the Samoan treaty. The alarm hardly appears to be warranted, as the alliance for maintaining peace and security in Samoa is only accepted as the least of two evils, and should not in any way affect the cau tious, independent foreign policy of this country. We had to choose between a state of affairs that must have ended in a serious quarrel with the other powers, if not in war, and an arrangement which, with all its defects, has the great advantage of keeping foreign influence pretty well balanced, and saving three great nations from the absurdity of quarreling over a scrap of land so insignificant. Under the grant of a harbor and coaling station we might have taken a more aggressive interest in Samoa and saved her from the treaty, but we allowed that opportunity to pass, and now, as Harper's has it, the treaty effects an alliance by which the three powers practically take possession of Samoa as Russia, Ger-many and Austria took possession of Poland. We allowed Germany to go ahead until her interests there so far overbalanced all others that she could not be expected to abandon them to the perils of native misrule, and now we are forced to make the best of a bad situation and assume a role that will enable us to save at least the semblance of Samoan independence. The comparison with the division of Poland is humiliating for the republic that is a party to the seizure of Samoa from the Samoans but we can console ourselves with the reflection that there will be no division of this Pacific Poland, no seizure of it by any one power, and no oppression of the Samoans as long as there is an American flag flying on the islands. As a distinct assurance of this firm American policy we should make haste to establish and strongly fortify that evaling station and harbor, the right to which it is tacitly understood we have not in any way imperiled by the treaty.

snow that the incident was cooly de vised as a good way of advertising the young scion of the house of Orleans. The spectacle of a young man who had been banished from France because of his royal blood returning at great perils on his twenty-first birthday, and in disguise, to enlist as a private in the army of his country, is certainly calcu-lated to fire the French heart. It must have been guessed that he would be re-cognized, and his letter to the minister cognized, and his letter to the minister of war was evidently carefully prepared for this emergency. His father will soon be received in this country with distinguished honors as an officer of our army in the civil war, and a careful, though tiresome, historian of that conflict. Whatever the French government may do with the son the honors to the father in America and the dash and boldness of the young prince are sure to gain him popularity. The Duc de Luynes, who helped him in the enterprise, is only a year older and it will be the safest and asiest course for the government to treat the whole matter as a boyish escapade, but it will probably be found

THE purchase of twenty thousand kegs of nails by one Pittsburg firm, T. G. Boyle & Co., is evidence of an upward move, because it is asserted that the order speculative, but is to meet orders from a number of widely separated points, chiefly in the South and West.

It is charged that ex-Governor Henry C. Warmoth, of Louisians, secured the appointment as collector of the port of New Orleans in reward for his efforts to secure the adoption of a lottery scheme by the Senate of North Dakota. The Louisians state lottery is at the back of the Dakota enterprise and the story runs that it furnished money for the Republican national committee in 1888 on the condition that it should receive a new charter in a Northern state. This is a wonderful tale if true, but needs to be thoroughly substantiated.

Edward Wall, a boy of 18 years, and Wil-liam Colman, a 14-year-old boy, met on Fri-day. They were part of a gang of young toughs ranging in age from ten to seventeen. Wall had a crooked silver handle of a lady's um-brells and was flourishing it about as if it were a pistoi. He pointed it at Colman, saying, "Til shoot you." "Yea wouldn't dare to shoot if it was a pistol," said Colman. "I would if you 'dared' me to," was the threatening reply. Colman swaggered over to another lad, who handed him a sharp-pointed pencil. "I don't want to be jabbed by that pencil," said Wall. "I would dare you to jab me if it was a knife," Colman borrowed from a boy a small two bladed knife, the big blade of which had been ground down to a point. Colman walked up to Wall, who in the meantime had unbuttoned his coat and beared his breast. Colman aked him if he was ready and PHILADELPHIA, Baturday, Feb. 8, 1990. Browsing over the advertising in yesterday's newspapers, one was forcibly reminded of the humorous philosopher's re-mark that, "it is better not to know so much than to know so much that is not true."

Between the ethics and the facts we were solely tempted to a homily concerning the immi-nent danger to which much advertising exposes Truth. We forbear.

Yesterday we printed some words about Black Dress Stuffs which we hope you will keep securely in mind. You can never know the possibilities of Black as a dress color unless you are acquainted with our Black Stuffs for Spring. There is a calm and elegant repose about the rich things in Black Black may be rusty, but cannot be tawdry; Black may be a part of the shabby genteel, but can never be degraded.

Revelations yesterday. Cotton, even in the breezy, bright Ginghams; mohairs, even at their shimmering best; silk, even in the filmy Orientals. must all hide diminished heads.

The French know Frenchmen, and Lupin's place was fixed by a di-vine right recognized by Frenchmen. You will come to the Dress Novelty counter eager to meet these French beauties. Our people favored with the bright-er stocks grow interested, en-thusiastic over the new things, and are only too glad to show them. Descriptions don't describe these goods -- cannot. THE COMING EUROPEAN WAR. Belgium to be the Battle Ground of France and Germany.

France and Germany. The Brussels correspondent of the Paris Matin has just had an interesting interview with Major H. Girard, the officer of the engineer corps in the Belgian army who recently resigned his commission in order to be free to write his somewhat startling commission in a data and the following of the following starts and the source of the following starts and the following starts pamphlet, La Belgique et la Guerre Prochaine. "The collision between France and Germany," said he, " may be retarded, but it is none the less inevitable. The possi-bility of a peweful retrocession of Alsaco-Lorraine by Germany is too absurd for dis-cussion."

After stating that the interest of Belgium in the present situation was to become the ally of whichever one of the belligerents would offer the best terms, he declared that in the present situation was to become the ally of whichever one of the beliigerents would offer the best terms, he declared that the Belgian fortresses were worthless, and that the intrenched camp at Antwerp could not hold out for forty-eight hours. "The first cannon shot will be sufficient to dis-pel all the illusions of the Belgian people. It is well known that our army, de-prived as it is of the indispensable elements for a rapid mobilization, could not be ready to fight until long after the country could be invaded, occupied, and traversed. Our resisting force consists, at the maximum, of 120,000 men, including the militia. To hold Antwerp with the development given to the fortifications of that place, we will need at least 80,000 men, without counting the garrisons necessary at Llege, Nemur, and other places. What then would remain for us to offer battle with at any given point? And will we even be able to dispose of that 120,000 men? That is very doubtful; for at the moment of the declaration of war, which will be sprung upon us in short order, how will our malitiamen have time or possibility to rejoin their corps before being captured by the invaders?" "But," remarked the correspondent, "could net France and Germany c ome to

"Bat," remarked the correspondent, "could not France and Germany come to blows without the necessity of fixing on

Belgium for their battle ground ?" "It is impossible," replied Major Girard, "that the military chiefs of both countries "that the military chiefs of both countries have not fully studied that matter; and from a strategic point of view, either of the belligerents that should neglect to take possession of the whole or a part of Belgian territory must compromise by that omis-sion the result of ulterior operations. My profound conviction is that the concentra-tion of the French and Gorman arnies will be effected on Belgian territory. For that concentration the Germans have five lines of railway, capable of throwine in while effected on Beigian territory. For that concentration the Germans have five lines of railway, capable of throwing in ten days 500,000 men between Aerschot and Huy, at the rate of 10,000 a day for each line. Twenty-four hours after a declara-tion of war, which will probadly be in the evening, the German cavalry will be able to occupy Hassell, Saint-Trond, Tirlemont, Maestrecht, &c. The French concentra-tion can be effected in the same lapse of time on the line between Alost and Man-beage, and also twenty-four hours after the declaration of war the French cavairy can occupy Alost, Termonde, Ath. &c. You see, then, that except the militia of Maines and Brussels all the rost in the whole region between the Meuse and the Escaut will be unable to move. In a word, after a careful study Thave become con-vinced that Belgium is completely at the mercy of coming events."

On Tuesday evening the pastor announced to his congregation that the moetings would come to a close and on the following day there would be a baptismal service in the Ohio river. There was a harge number of the flock present at the water's edge on Wednesday afternoon to witness the baptism of those who had taken membership in the church. Among those in attendance were Miss Mary Hooper, aged nimeteon years, and Miss Rachel Ferguson, who is only one year her senior, said to be the handsomest girls During Baptismal Services.
