Repeating His History. The New York World has compiled a The New York World has compiled a history of Senator Quay for the benefit of those who are still ignorant of the mode of his rise and progress to the control of the Republican party of the nation. The tale is rather a stale one in Pennsylvania, but it cannot be too often told or too widely circulated, for there is no narrative that can be more typical of the state of our society and the conof the state of our society and the conditions of our politics than one that tells of the rise of this poor, unlearned and untalented man to the high distinction, power and wealth that he has attained. It is a tale of the results of the working of a forceful nature and an unscrupulous spirit amid the elements that control one of the great political parties of the country. The World tells it as the story of the life of a man who entered into politics in a country village of Pennsylvania, poor; and who has by office rolled into the wealth of a millionaire without any visible means even of existence outside of political office brokerage. It thinks perchance that the tale will be a warning to the people, that may destroy the kind that it has for its hero; but what-ever may be the ultimate effect of the publication of such careers, the present influence may rather be to stimulate See be shown that virtue is not concerned in these times to promote advancement to fame and fortune; and there are plenty of people who are ready to profit by the lesson and who need but the promise of success as their stimulant to any course of life. If Quay is a senator and a thief, it is no worse they think for Quay but it is an interesting development of the fact that stolen goods and political honors may fall into the same basket. This is not, it is true, a fresh lesson taught by Quay's general acknowledgment of his complete rescality. It has been known of all men in Pennsylvania for many years. It was known when Quay was elected to the office of state treasurer. So well was it known that even he is said to have been fearful that it ended his political career before the people and his consequent political power; so that he sought in imple desperation to test the question by submitting his name to the people for election to the state office that was about to be filled. Defeat could put him no lower down, while election would be his salvation. With all these dark stories told of him, his elec tion by the people would wash him clean of all offense from them and set him up as a fire-proof political figure.

career, for we have had that of John

Sherman and other great Republican political lights to teach it to us; but no one perhaps has grown rich and great so rapidly as Quay and with so little concealment of the methods and with so

This effect followed the success which he won. Whether his election showed that the Republican voters did not believe that he was the vile man he was painted or that they did not care how vile he was, the effect was to establish him as their leader and make of him their autocrat. He naturally passed into the Senate, and into the control of the national party. He became the right arm of the pious candidate for president and Bethany John Wanamaker carried the bgg for him. There is no sign anywhere that he is offensive to his Republican associates; and whether the story of his ignominy is destined by repetition to cause the people hereafter to vomit forth his kind, it is quite beyoud dispute that there has as yet been no evidence that it disturbs the digestion of the national stomach. On general principles we would say that a succomful Republican government cannot be run by such instrumentalities for any length of time, and that before long there will be a call for quick lime to destroy the stench of their putrid political corpses. Let us wait and see.

A Plain Concection. The very improbable tale of the colored boy that has been told in the Leconey murder trial in New Jersey, of itself without anything further affords clear testimony that it is a concoction. The peculiarity of this case is that a reputable farmer is charged with the murder of his niece, whom he is known to have regarded with affection and treated with kindess, without any motive being assigned for the deed. The father, mother and all the relatives of the dead girl believe him innocent; and only the prosecuting officers consider him guilty. They have concected a story of his crime which they seek to sustain by the tale of a disreputable negro, who was the only other inmate of the household. This negro seems to be testifying to save the neck of another negro against whom there is strong evidence of guilt, but his tale bears its falsehood upon its face. He says that he left the uncle and niece at the breakfast table and when, soon afterward, he had the team ready to go to the distant field, he heard a sound as though some one was choking in the house; that Leconey came out and washed himself at the pump; and that after changing his dress he got into the wagon with him and went to the field with him, showing no sign of emotion; but telling him to remember to say that the girl was at the door as they left; and afterwards threatening to kill him if he said anything to any-

This stor proceeds on two different themes; one that the negro knew noth ing about the murder, and the other that he knew enough about it to cause Leconey to demand his silence. There no explanation offered as to why ney should demand the silence of a man who does not say that he witnessed anything of the tragedy or heard anything but the noise of choking; nor had he told Leconey that he had heard that.

The evidence of the negro against Leconey consists only of alleged confes-cions; and of the same character is the testimony of another worthless fellow in the neighborhood, whom Lecoley is alleged to have awakened for the purpose fessing his crime to him of confessing his crime to him.

Nothing could be more impossible than the story that a cheerful, highly esteemed, sensible man, living happily with his niece who was his housekeeper, one morning after breakfast cut her throat, and then went to the field in calm pursuit of his business, showing no emotion whatever and only bothering himself about the deed to tell it to two worthless characters. two worthless characters.

The Library Question.

On Thursday a free library will be opened in Allegheny, and Pittsburg is already considering the acceptance of an offer of Mr. Carnegie to give that city a library on similar terms. The Allegheny library cost twenty-six thousand dollars and is given to the city on condition that it be properly maintained for the benefit of the public, but there are sterns that there may be difficulties about signs that there may be difficulties about this plan. There is a controversy between city councils and the school board and some political jealousy in the matter. Although the taxation for maintenance will be very light, and the library will hardly be allowed to suffer for it, it is a pity that political struggles should be allowed to have any effect whatever upon a library. The Carnegie plan is a very good one so far as it goes, but it would be much better to have an insti-tution of that kind so firmly supported by endowment that it need not depend upon the whims of city fathers.

The need of a public library in Lancaster has often been strongly urged, but every agitation of the subject only serves to impress the fact that a free un-denominational and vigorous institution can only be secured by the gift of a large sum, and there does not seem to be a narrow limit to the amount of cash that a library could healthfully absorb. The Allegheny building includes a music hall, which will seat thirteen hundred persons, art galleries and lecture rooms. Music, art and literature seem to go well together, and when Lancaster's benefactor, whoever he may be, gets ready to establish a library, it is suggested that the plan might be drawn so as to give plenty of room for all three under one roof. Then as the city constantly grows and the stock of books gets larger music, and art may be crowded out into homes of their own, or the old home may be enlarged.

If an enterprise like this should be given a good start with a large donation it can hardly be doubted that there would be many eager contributors in this wealthy town and county who would boom it along finely. Although Lancaster is often referred to as the richest of agricultural counties in the United States it is not at all to our credit that it is rarely mentioned as a leader in the intellectual progress of the nation. It is a college town, a wealthy town and a healthy town and it should be a centre of intellectual activity, but whether because of the more even distribution of its wealth or the conservative traditions of our people, we don't make balf as much stir in the world as other cities not half as strong.

THE Emperor of Germany has sent a present of twenty-four drums to the Sultan of Turkey, there being no drums in the Turkish army. This is another evidence of interest in Turkey's military organization which Germany has been liberally displaying. There are many German officers in the Turkish army, and hundreds of Krupp guns frown upon the Bosphorous, while leading German papers take pains to remind the Turks that Germany, at the Berlin conference, helped to save military sovereign a present of drums would be a startling omen of war, but from young William of Germany it is quite the natural thing.

WESTERN CANADIANS are getting very uneasy over the proposed establishment of a colony of Mormons of some five hundred families at Alberta, west of Manitoba They have secured a large tract of land and the Canadians complain that the purchasers first gave assurance that they were non-polygamous Mormons, but now have thrown off that mask. They have a bold advocate in a Mr. Stenhouse, formerly a member of the Columbian Legislature, who argues that they do not break the law against bigamy because they marry the second wife with the consent of the first, and the law is against a breach of contract It is certain that the Canadians will make laws to reach the Mormons very promptly, if more are needed. Englishmen have so often sneered at our weakness in permit ting Mormonism to flourish this long that it will now be pleasant to watch how they struggle with them in Canada. When Russel, the famous war correspondent of the London Times, revisited America several years ago, he was vigorous in his comments on this disgrace to a civilized nation, and lo, the disgrace is going ove the line to settle on British soil!

In a Montreal lecture hall on Saturday night before the National club-French Canadians-a sensation was created by the enthusiastic passage of resolutions severely condeming the address to the queen recently adopted by the Chamber of Depu-ties. The address had declared it the de sire of the Canadian people to perpetuate the political bond with the mother country. The resolutions of the meeting pronounced this declaration inopportune and tending to alieniate American sympathies. The concluded : "We, the members of the club, desire, with all our hearts, the establishment of an independent nationality in the vast domains of British North America, free from all European attachments." The French Canadians are certainly showing traces of Gaelic impetuosity in politics.

Long since the school board of Lancaster adopted a rule preventing the levying and collecting of funds from pupils. The objections to securing money in this manner were manifold, the most important one being the frequency of occasions, deserving or not, for tribute from public school children. The authorities of Erie, Pa., are learning of the perniciousness of this custom of demanding subscriptions. The circular sent out asking for pennies for the erection of the Higbee memorial received prompt and generous response in that city. But before the amount could be forwarded the board directed the teachers to return the money to the children from whom it was collected. This action was taken in deference to growing public sentiment. It would be well for every school board in the state to discourage this practice; and to do it they ought follow the example of Erie's directors.

THE marriage laws of New Jersey will probably be amended, several bills having been prepared for presentation to the Legislature this week. That scandals have been aided by the lax laws of Jersey there is no doubt, especially since Pennsylvania has reformed its statutes. The license law of this state, so far as the Eastern part is concerned, does not operate with the cele-rity anticipated by its framer. It is because of the accessibility of the adjacent state to minors and elopers. A large number of Pennsylvania's couples have crossed the Delaware river to be joined in wedlock, and it is not too broad a statement to accuse them all of having been unable to Bishor Hunst, of Washington, is at the head of a movement to found a Methodist university in that city and says that he has several liberal subcriptions, some from Protestants of other denominations. If the scheme succeeds extremes will meet in the capital city, and if Catholic and Methodist don't quarrel too fiercely they will each make a good watcher of the other, and the cause of education profit by their rivalry.

THE DUKE of MONTEZUMA is dead. He was descended from the famous Azice emperor of Mexico, who was dethroned by Cortes in the early part of the sixteenth century. Montezuma left two children—a son, who was assassinated, and a daughter, who after becoming wife and widow in turn of two titular Mexican emperors, was baptized under the name of Isabella, and then became wife and widow in turn of two Spanish officers. By these latter marriages she had two daughters and four sons. The latter were afterward created by the Spanish court counts of Montezuma and were the progenitors of the present noble Spanish family of that name, the head of which has just died.

of which has just died.

MR. AND MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND attended the morning service on Sunday at the Central Presbyterian church. New York. The statement had been published that Mrs. Cleveland was to formally unite with the church at the morning service. The error was probably due to the fact that she had decided to join the church by letter on the first Sunday in the month, which proved to be a rainy, unpleasant day, and it was supposed that the bad weather would have kept her away. It did not, nor did it keep the ex-president away. Her name, with that of twenty other new members, was read by the pastor The ex-president looked tranquil and paid heed to the sermon. Mrs. Cleveland joined in the congregational singing and paid devout attention to the services.

The seeds of death are scattered there, And long before life's noon

Why do they think and talk like this? Simply because some of her family have died from scrothlous poisoning of the blood, and they see indications of the same taint in her. Scrothlous for the same taint in her. Scrothlous for the same taint in her. Scrothlous of the Lungs, commonly called Consumption, is a terrible disease, and it is not to be wondered at that they dread it. But it can be conquered. The polson can be driven out of the blood. The taint can be eliminated from the system. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured thousands of persons who were expected to find early graves because "there was scrothla in the family." "Golden Medical Discovery" is warranted to remove all blood-taints from whatever cause arising. It cures all scrothlous, skin and scalp diseases, or money paid for it will be returned.

Too much for us. Our policy for this month is te bring forward with all possi-ble rapidity the new things for Spring. We hoped that we might tell you something each day of all the novelties for dress, or of the new things for personal or for domestic uses as they came along. But the task is too great. The hundreds of cases from beyond the sea and from American manufacturers contain too many things of too many sorts to be told of in full detail. On Saturday we gave some details of Lupin's new Dress Goods, but the half was not told, nor the quarter. You will have to seek the Black Goods counters for Blacks, the Cream Goods counter for the Creams, and the Novelty counter for all other colorings.

In the aisle opposite the Novelty Dress counter you will find many new things in fine wool and worsted diagonals. Their special feature is the extremely beautiful and delicate ground coloring, in elegant contrast with large stripes and plaids and stylish borders. Some of the latter in Knickerbocker effects are very stylish. Description is absolutely useless.

But our broad and deep statement, often made, and as often faintly echoed in almost our own words, that without Hager & Brother. exception the unequaled Dress Goods Stock of the World is here, is applied to the variety of Dress Goods, here and coming, for this Spring.
The great varieties already at your service prove this.
