Among the cronies of Statesman Quay were J. Blake Walters, the cashier of the State Treasury, and A. Wilson Norris, the reporter of the Supreme Court. They were observed to be unusually distrustful.

One day John K. Simon was lying on a sofa in his office. He said that he was nervous in that he could not rest nights. I asked what might be the trouble. He replied: "You know you would not get on with me if I were not nervous."

On a memorable afternoon these disembarked from a train at the Pennsylvania railroad station in Lancaster. The party consisted of Statesman Quay, his wife, and a number of friends.

On reaching the apartment of the distinguished Statesman he knocked. Probably the door had been unlocked by a servant who entered without aid or preliminary formality.

THE DUKE GOES TO JAIL.

Two Years Imprisonment for the Son of Count de Paris.

Observe for the Duke of Orleans With Those For the Republic When the Young Man Appears Before Court.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The Duke of Orleans, son of the Count and Countess of Paris, who came to Paris last week with the avowed intention of assisting in the French army, and who was then arrested on the charge of violating the law...

He was adjudged guilty of violating the law and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The court room was crowded with spectators who had gathered to watch the proceedings against the young duke.

Before judgment was pronounced the duke addressed the court in his own behalf. He said: "I came to France to serve as a common soldier. I have nothing to do with politics, which concerns my father, whose obedient son and faithful servant I am."

EXECUTION BY ELECTRICITY.

A Swift and Certain Method, According to the Report of the Committee.

The commission to test the electrical execution apparatus in New York's prison will make its report to Prison Commissioner James C. Sullivan on Friday.

The report is very voluminous. The question to be solved were, in the main, what the apparatus would cost, what number of volts was necessary, and what kind of wire should be used.

The commission expresses the opinion that each one of the apparatus can be used successfully, and that death by electricity would be accomplished with more certainty than in any other way.
