THEY SHOCKED A PRIEST.

He Denounced the Conduct of St. Louis Folks at a Fashionable Wedding. An indictment was presented against the "best society" of St. Louis on Sunday by a Catholic priest and a host of witnesses. On last Wednesday at Alphonus Catholic church James Hunt Lucas and Prudence M. Hunt were the contracting parties in a fashionable wedding. The wealthiest circles of St. Louis were represented. No no was allowed in the church with-out a card of invitation. The people who attended the wedding showed themselves so devoid of respect that they were threat-ened with expulsion from the sacred edi-fice. They talked, laughed, joked, stood on sonta, passed around candy, and even hung their wraps on images and the confes-sionals. All this, too, was done in the presence of the blessed sacrament. Father Brown demounced them from the altar. A witness says:

Brown denounced them from the altar. A witness says: "In the first place a great number of the ladies were in full dress, which in itself was shocking, for when they were all seated an observer was inclined to think they had come to witness a theatrical show and not the performance of a solemn cere-mony in the bouse of God. They showed no respect whatever for the place they were in. They talked, joked, and laughed, and even passed around candy to while away the time. Twice the Rev. Father Brown came out and endeavored to quiet the audience. 71 98 28 00 113 75

A TERRIBLE DEATH.

Young Lancaster County Man Killed by a Falling Stone at Bridge Six.

William T. Yohn, son of David Yohn, of Mountville, met with a terrible death on Saturday afternoon. He was a man twenty five years of age, and soon after the big flood he went to Johnstown, where for a time he was employed by Hugh Keogh, the well-known railroad contractor of this city, who did a great deal of work in that vicinity. Of late he had been working for T. B. Brown & Bro., who are rebuilding bridge six, between Conemaugh and Min eral Point, about six miles east of Johns town. On Saturday afternoon he was super intending the hoisting of a large stone with a steam derrick. The stone was among a number of others, and as it was elevated another, weighing about a ton and a half, became displaced. It started rolling, and descended upon Yohn, killing him almost instantly. His breast was terribly crushed. The body of the decased was brought to Lancaster on Day Express Sunday afternoon by T. C. Myers, a foreman for Brown Brothers. John Freelich, an undertaker, of Mountville, met the body at the station and took if to Mountville. The deceased was born and raised in Mountville, where he was well known. For a time he was employed on the Pennsylvania railroad. He leaves a wife a Mountville, whose maiden name was Huzzard. They were married last Novem-

STRICKEN SUDDENLY. ALDERNAN M'CONONY DIES OF HEART FAIL-URB ON SUNDAY.

He is Attacked by the Disease While In a Carriage With His Wife-A Man Who Was Highly Esteemed.

Henry R. McConomy, alderman of the First ward of this city, and one of Lancas-ter's best known and highly respected citizens, died very suddenly shortly before five o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The cause of his death was heart failure, which was in all probability superinduced by rheumatism. The deceased had been a sufferer from the latter complaint for a number of years ; at times he would be confined to the house for weeks and when able to be about he was compelled to go to the office upon crutches or in a carriage. Of late he had been com-plaining of pain about his heart and his rest was not so good at night. On Saturday he spent most of the day in his office attending to business. On Sunday morning he attended St. Mary's church, and he seemed no worse than usual. At noon he spoke of taking a walk in the afternoon, but gave it up and concluded to drive. He procured a carriage and with his wife started out about halfpast three o'clock. They drove about town for a time and visited St. Mary's cemetery and other points. They next went visit Mrs. John R. McGovern, a alster of Mrs. McConomy, who lives ust north of the city near the Lititz turnpike. The alderman said that he desired to go out and get a good glass of milk, and as they drove up the ane he spoke to his wife. Upon reaching the house he spoke to some one who was in the yard, and, pulling in the horse, stopped. Mrs. McConomy then noticed that something was wrong, as her husband had dropped the reins after giving a short gasp. She quickly alighted from the carriage and alarmed the members of the household. A physician was sent for, and Dr. Detwiler, of this city, responded. He arrived in a very short time, but Mr. McConomy's heart was beating very faintly when he came, and in a few moments he was dead. James A. Miller, undertaker, was summoned, and he re-moved the body to the late home of the deceased, at 38 North Prince street. The deceased was born in Lancaster on May 19, 1842, and was therefore in the forty-eighth year of his age. He was a son of the ate Peter McConomy, one of Lancaster's best known citizens who died several years ago. His mother, at the advanced age of 85 years, resides on West Vine street. He was a brother of Ambrose and Peter McConomy, the two wellknown bankers, who have been dead for some years, and also of the late Rev. Augustine McConomy, who for years was chancellor at the Catholic cathedral in Philadelphia. Mrs. H. Z. Rhoads is the only sister. In early life the deceased was a shoemaker, having learned the trade with his father. He worked at the trade here for a time, and subsequently went to Philadelphia, where for years he was employed in a wholesale shoe store as clerk. Upon returning to this city he again went into his father's shoe store, which was on West King street. In politics the alderman was a staunch t. In 1875 he was alderman of the First ward and was basso, heard with such telling effect in the "Banner of the Sea," was heard with elected three times. Although the ward was Republican, the alderman always had a walk over, owing to his personal popularity. He was re-elected for the last time just about two years ago. His opponent was the late Charles F. Ebereffectiveness, and happy blending of four man, who however gave up the fight bephenomerally rare voices, is probably the best that has ever been heard here. fore the election, as he found it was impossible for him to win against a strong candidate like Alderman McConomy. The deceased was twice married ; his first a contingent of instrumentalists from wife was Miss Mary A. Carpenter, daughter Reading, and did its work very prettily, and were highly complimented by both of the late William Carpenter, and she died

A NIGHT OF HARMONY. The Concert Complimentary to Rev. H. G. Ganss Enjoyed by a Large Andience. The musical event of the season in Lancaster was that which on Saturday night drew to Fulton opera house an audience occupying nearly every soat. It was the testimonial concert given to Rev. H. G. Ganes. The promi-nence of the New York vocalists and the claims of the Rev. H. G. Ganes and Mr. Walter Bausman guaranteed a feast for the lovers of classical music. Then, too, the fact that Romini's "Stabat Mater" was to fact that Romini's "Stabat Mater" was to be rendered for the first time here also proved a magnet, because of its repute in musical circles everywhere. As a whole the cantata fairly bubbles over with an exuberance of melodies beautiful in them-selves, which in the hands of such consummate artists as the Courtney quartette, were a revelation to even old concert-goers. Expectation was high as to the merita

this organization, but it is needless to say it was fully realized in every particular. The New York quartette-Misses Jessanine Hallenbeck and Julia O'Connell, Mr. Wm. Courtney and Signor Riccardo Ricci -merited the numerous recalls. In consert and in solos their vocalism was burdened with all the qualities required for the keeping of their auditors in rapture. It lacked nothing in volume, and the most racting critic must admit that in dealing with the delicate notes their interpretation was beyond description. At one stage of the oratorio the orchestra was in conflic with harmony, but the instruments for the remainder of the concert responded satisfactorily. Mr. William Courtney, an oratoric singer of international reputation, and standing in the foremost rank of vocal instructors in this country, may feel proud of the quartette's high standard of excellence. His own rendition of the "Cuius Animam," given with such nicety of finish. purity of tone, warmth of feeling and most artistic phrasing, was the one that elicited the most vociferous applause. It was only equaled by his thrilling and impassioned delivery of "Sound an Alarm," Handel's great air, which raised the house to a pitch of enthusiasm seldom witnessed Miss O'Connell, possessing an extremely tich contraito voice, is no stranger. Her part in a concert here several years ago was the prominent one upon that occasion she reaped her share of the laurels, and deservedly. To a noble, mellow, sympathetic contraito voice she adds the dellvery of an artist, conscientious in every artistic detail ; and seldom do we find such versatility as she displayed in singing dramatic music and simple ballads, with equal success and brilliancy. Miss Hallenbeck, soprano, displayed her best in the polka song entitled "The Secret." Miss Hallenbeck, with a singularly seautiful voice,-very musical in quality, evenly developed, flexible and most artis tically trained-gained a ready and imme-diate conquest over the large audience. Her dainty vocalization in Ganns' polka song, 'The Secret,"-when her voice was heard to so much advantage in trills, staccato runs, given with a birdlike chirpiness, and difficult roulades which not only amaze I the audience, but caused a perfect whirlwind of applause, during which she brought the reluctant composer to the footlights .- was in noble contrast to the digni fied, dramatically intense performance of the "Inflammatus." CAUGHT IN BELTING. Democratic Candidates Who Are to Be HORRIBLE ACCIDENT AT THE MANHEIM STOCKING FACTORY.

Young Girl Has Her Scalp and an Ear Completely Torn Off-She Is Drawn Into the Shafting By Her Hair.

A terrible accident occurred in the stock ing factory of Lautenbacher & Co. In Man-heim, this morning, in which a young girl was frightfully and no doubt fatally in-jured. The girl was Katle Deagler, a foureen-year-old daughter of Andrew Deagler. The girl was employed in the factory as a knitter. This morning soon after going to work she crawled under a bench to adust a belting. Her hair, which was hanging lown, was caught in the belting and abe was drawn to the shafting. Her scalp was torn completely from her head which pre-sented a horrible appearance. One arm was broken and one ear was completely torn off, and the girl was also horribly cut and bruised about the head and face and

Dr. J. M. F. Dunlap was summoned and he attended the girl, who was borne to her home on a lounge. Work in the mills was suspended for the day, as the accident was too great a shock upon the nerves of operators to continue work, Mr. Lautenbacher, one of the firm who has charge of this department, has repeatedly cautioned the girls not to let their hair hang down their backs lest an accident might happen to them, and her failurs to comply may cost her life. There are also men employed constantly on hand to attend and to the belting and the machinery, and the girls are not expected to do that part of the abor. DR." BLOOD IN DOVER. A MIN AND WOMAN SEE HIM IN TEAT TOWN

A WEEK AGO.

He Carried Bundles and Disappeared at Night-Probably an Important Development in the Sawtelle Mystery.

Dover, N. H., Feb. 17-What will doubtless prove an important develop-ment in the Sawtelle murder mystery has been furnished by Mrs. Charles Rich who upon taking up a Boston Sunday paper this morning saw the picture of "Dr." Blood, who is strongly supposed to have been implicated in the staking off, of Hiram Sawtelle.

"Why, I know that man," she said. "He called here a week ago to-day. It was in the afternoon. He asked for a room. I told him I had one, but when I looked at his face I refused to give him one. He had two bundles, one done up in wrapping paper ; should say it might have contained clothes. The other was done up in a newspaper, about the size of a man's head. He looked just like the picture of Dr. Blood. I sent him to Mr, Halla."

Later the picture was shown to Mr. Hall, who recognized it as that of the man who engaged rooms of him last Monday, but did not come back. Hall also saw him on the street that night.

the street that night. This morning Detective Shields found a gentleman, Rev. Downs, of East Rochester, who on the Wednesday night that Hiram Sawtelle was killed, not a team ou the road in East Rochester with two men in it, one of whom acted strangely. Downs halled the team and inquired of the one, since identified as Issae Sawtelle, what alled his companion. The man replied alled his companion. The man replied, "Ho is drunk." The other man was prob-ably then dead or dying, and this testi-mony fixes the fact that the deed was committed in New Hampshire.

Mr. Carlisle's Explanation. WASHINGTON, Feb. 17 .- After the res ing of the journal in the House to-day Mr. Carlisle rose and said that since the 29th of January his side of the House had been January his side of the House had been protesting every morning against approval of the journal on the ground that it contained an entry, made by direction of the speaker, showing the names of certain members present and not voting. Last Friday the House hal adopted a code of rules providing for such practice. Against this the Democrate had protested and would protest as an uncon-stitutional practice. But it was a question which could not be decided in this House and whenever proper cases arose it would and whenever proper cases arose it would go to some other forum. It was the pur-pose of his side of the House to see that this pose of his side of institute to see that this occasion should be made in such shape as would permit it to be finally and de-cisively passed upon. Therefore he now saw no reason why the journal, the form of which the House had the right to pre-scribe, should not be approved. This was

He was born in Manbeim, this county, and went West with his father in 1873. He was for years connected with his father and brother in the hardware business. He leaves a wife and son.

The deceased was a consistent member of St. Mary's Catholic church and he was a member of one of the oldest Catholic families in this city. He belonged to St. Bernard's beneficial society and for many years was connected with the Mechanic's Library association.

The alderman did a large business, particularly that of a civil nature. His conclusions in cases heard by him were always reached by a conscientious sifting of the evidence and were generally sustained in the higher courts when appealed from. There was no man in the city who had more friends than Alderman McConomy. He was a genial, warm-hearted gentleman with a kind word for everybody. He will be greatly missed by the newspaper reporters of this city, who visited him several times daily and were always kindly received. An Exciting Fox Chase. There was a fox chase from the Akron hotel on Saturday afternoon, which was well attended. The fox was dropped about 3 o'clock, and in a very short time the hounds were put upon the track. Twenty horsemen joined in the chase, which was very exciting. The fox ran about four miles and suddenly turning came back close to the hotel. The whole run which the fox made was about twelve miles in length, and he was finally run down at a small place called Centre Square, near New Holland. The animal was cap tured alone by Wes. Miller, of Oregon, who was badly bitten in the foot by him. DEMOCRATS examine your tickets closely

A Family Sadly Afflicted.

William McCoombs, who died last week, as has already been published in the IN-TELLIGENCER, was buried on Saturday at the Chestnut Level church. While the folks were at the grave yard, Mrs. McCoombs, the wife of the dead man, who had been quite ill with pneumonia, expired. She was about 75 years of age. John, a son of the couple, is now lying at home with the disease, and Miss Belle, a daughter, is in the same condition. A Driving Accident. Last night Elmer Senft and a party of friends, who had a two horse team, met with an accident while out driving. They were going down the hill leading to Graeff's landing when the tongue of the carriage broke. The horses pulled apart and the carriage was hadly broken.
