The Pension Extravagance. re is every indication that the party in power is determined to pass ille that will so greatly increase the exaditures as to keep the surplus away fown out of sight for some years to been. The only question is as to how the money shall be spent, and even that is not a very difficult problem. Penns will of course claim the most of it. livers and harbors, public buildings, ces and the navy might absorb a ood deal of money and give the nation omething of value, but, pressing though our need of these things may be, the ruling party is more in need of the pres tige that it is believed will be gained by s liberal pension policy.

If this money raised by taxation must be spent so lavishly, it would be better to spend it in almost any other way; and even a great system of subsidies would not be more perilous or ill advised than the distribution by pensions, because such increase must be by a widening of the scope of the pension laws and as they stand they are increasing in annual cost at an alarming rate. In 1878 pensions cost twenty-six millions,in 1888 seventyeight millions. The expenditure for pensions was trebled in ten years. It is a constantly growing source of expense, for new names must be daily added to the lists. By widening the scope of the pension laws the expense of the government will be increased for many years in the future; for the New York World calls tention to the fact that we are now paying pensions to more than ten thouad survivors of the war of 1812. There is a healthy and steadily growing sentiment among thoughtful men of all par-ties that it is high time to call a halt in pension extravagance, and the Republican leaders are apt to find out to their cost that there must be a limit to this reckless administration. The govern-ment has dealt liberally with the soldier and proved full appreciation of their services, but their perils and hardships were not endured with the hope of reward by pensions, but from a spirit of patriotism. By extravagant, broadchespening patriotism and placing a grading value upon the gallantry of the battlefield.

The fact that pension bills will lead to great expense, steadily and rapidly increasing in the future, may be a strong commendation for those "statesmen who are eager to put off as far as possible the evil day of tariff reduction. It will tax all the ability of more far-seeing esmen to avert the perils of this

Misplaced Men.

Gen. Ditmar, when he left his fortune to his executors to be used in teaching for, devoted it to a great object; and it is a thousand pities that our court knocked his will on the head because of the indefiniteness of the object. Doubtless there was good reason for this judgment, but the pity is that there was; for surely no greater benefaction to mankind could be done than teaching its youth how they may make the best use of the capacities with which they are endowed.

Somehow it seems to be a monstrously hard thing to learn, though we would think that it should be easy, and that men would instinctively drop, after more or less vacillation, into the holes best suited to them. But certainly they do not. The world is full of square human pegs in its round holes, and shows all degrees of variation in the Atting of the man to his place. If the distress was that alone of the misplaced man, the community would not be so much concerned as it is, but the trouble touches it all over and makes life miserable often for those who are properly

And somehow it happens very frequently that the community does not know any better than the immediate sufferer does that he is a misfit. This we judge from the great number of men elected to offices for which they are conspicuously ill adapted. When the pub-lic do not know that the men they vote for are fitted for their places, it is evidently going to be a big job to teach them what they are themselves fitted for. Gen. Ditmar's intention was good but, as good intentions often are, was damned by the crookedness of human nature. Dr. Compton had a great task assigned him and probably was glad to be re-lieved from it by the ediet of the court that the general had not been sufficiently explicit in his instructions; which meant that the court believed that teaching boys what they were best fitted for was not a purpose for which it thought itself competent to direct the application of the general's fortune. If his scheme had been in successful operation in the land, it would have resulted in giving us judges who were competent to fill this and all other requirements of the judicial foot; and then it will not be needed. The world is in no lack of daily illustrations of the beauty and peace that would fall upon it if its people knew what they were fitted for and acted upon the knowledge. ## The Fair.

Mr. Thomas C. Platt, who bosses the New York Republicans and who has been turned by the force of circumstances into a late advocate for a New York world's fair, proposes to make up in favoncy for his late recalcitrancy, and tells the reporters that he has been to Washington to help it, that New York is sure to have the fair and that its date is to be postpoued to 1893 for its accom-

All of which may be, and it at leas looks clear that an 1892 fair is done for in New York. Chicago, which will take it on any terms and at the shortest no-tice, will have the fair if it is ordered on for '92. Meanwhile it is beginning to lock as though there may be an indefinite postponement of it. Some congressmen want no fair at all ; and the rivalry between the cities claiming it and the shortness of the time may put it away on the shelf for this Congress; for which we will sorry, as world's fairs are interesting and profitable occasions.

THE German elections turn out worse for the kaiser than at first reported, and by the loss of twenty-seven seats in the Reichstag the Cartel combination in support of the government is overpowered. What the final result of this will be cannot now be guessed, as various combinations of the dozen parties represented in the House may neutralize the opposition.

WASHINGTON'S birthday comes up smil ing and sunny as usual; just the sort of day that may have tempted George to sally out with his little hatchet and do some heroic chopping.

A TEXAs dispatch says that private letters from the City of Mexico describe an alarming state of affairs there due to the extreme fatality of the grip. It is hinted that Mexicans have been suppressing this news for fear of its effect on business, but that it now comes from American residents. Acute pneumonia is the rule rather than the exception among the poorer classes who live in houses that afford little protection. The death rate has been so high that the coffin supply is exhausted, and bodies are buried without them. This story has a sensational tone, but may be true, as Mexico is almost the only city that has not reported the grip.

THE story of Johnstown, published by James M. Place, of Harrisburg, and writ-ten by J. J. McLaurin, of the Harrisburg Telegram, is an elaborately illustrated and well printed volume just received and de-manding prompt notice. It is the history that has been endorsed by the relief committee and the governor, and the net proceeds of the sale are to be applied to the relief of the sufferers. The illustrations offoctually cover the subject, and several so graphically and truthfully present its terrors as to renew the feeling of horror produced by the story of the calamity. A valuable feature of the book is the collection of portraits of noted victims, among them Rev. and Mrs. A. R. Diller, of Lancaster, Mrs. Ogle, the telegraph operator, who, with her daughter, heroically remained at her post to give warning to the towns below and perished in the flood. As the book is written from personal observation and warmly endorsed by high authority it is no doubt thoroughly reliable as to the facts. John Barr, of this city, a conductor of the Pullman train wrecked by the flood, is canvassing for subscribers to the book in this vicinity.

The publisher of the Harrisburg Telegram deserves some credit for forestalling by this charitable enterprise the efforts of unscrupulous dealers in sensational liter

Queer Story or Queer Delusion. Boston Letter to the Chicago Tribune.

A brilliant young lawyer of this city, who was a light of social as well as of legal circles, has recently been ordered away for his beaith under rather peculiar circum-stances. He has been suffering from overwork, and his disease took the form of a singular hallucination. Everybody, no matter under what circumstances seen, apmatter under what circumstance. The peo-peared to him to be back to him. The per-peared to him to be back to him. ple with whom he talked, the persons he met on the street, the partner with whom he danced, and his physician to whom he went in his affliction, all persistently turned themselves away from him, until he seemed doomed to the terrible curse of living among his fellows and yet of cover shell in his fellows and yet of never beholding a human face again. "When the thing first took hold of me," he said in talking of the trouble, "I of course did not understand what had happened, and I made some awkward blunders. I do not know how soon I should have realized that the trouble was with me if I had not gone to the theatre and found that the actors all turned their backs to the audience. I knew that couldn't be, and, as I had begun to under-stand that the dickens was to pay with me, I passed a pleasant evening wondering if my brain had turned wrong side out or upside down, and if I should ever know anything right end foremost again. I had a lady with me, and she observed that I was gloomy, so I told her a yarn about the play's having affecting associations with a favorite cousin who had died suddenly. Then I reflected that if my brain had gone wrong I could still invent a lie at need, and #### wrong I could still invent a lie at need, and that was some comfort." Mid-Winter Snake Story.

Workmen engaged in building a sewer in West Goshen township, Chester county, Pa., recently had occasion to dig away a portion of a tank on Chester creek, and, in doing so, made entrance into a hole about six inches in diameter. After examining the hole they were startled by seeing emerge therefrom a large snake. This they killed, whereupon another reptile and then another came crawling out. The men came to the conclusion that they were at the asset of the conclusion that they were at the asset of the conclusion that they were at the case. to the conclusion that they were at the ca-trance of a snake den, and prepared them-selves for snake killing. One of the men dug white the other watched, and in a few minutes the end of the den was reached, and with a club and spade the men killed forty more snakes, ranging in length from eight inches to nearly three feet.

Mistakes Made Unconsciously. From the Syracuse Christian Advocate.

A famous college president, a clergyman, was addressing the students in the chapel at the beginning of the college year. "It is," he said in conclusion, "a matter of congratulation to all the friends of the congratulation to all the friends of the college that this year.opens with the largest freshman class in its history." And then, without any pause, he turned to the Scripture lesson for the day, the Third Psal'u, and began reading in a voice of thunder: "Lord, how are they increased that trouble me." This, however, was hardly more unfortunate than the choice of the hymn, "Return, Ye Ransomed Sinners Home," as the closing selection of a certain American board meeting. American board meeting.

THE CARNEGIZ LIBRARY.

The President and the Millionaire Pormisliy Open the Building.

The dedication of the Carnegie free library of Aliegheny took place on Thursday evening, and the institution was declared open by President Harrison. In his speech Mr. Carnegie said:

"My wife, for her spirit and her influence are here to-night; my wife and I realize to-night how infinitely more blessed it is to give than to receive.

" I wish that the masses of workingmen and women would remember and act upon the fact that this is their library, their gallery, and their hall. The poorest citizen, the poorest man, the poorest woman that tolls from morn till night for a livelihood, as, thank heaven, I had that toll to do in my early days, as he walks this hall, as he reads the books from these shelves, as he listens to the organ and admires the works of art in this gallery, equally with the millionaire and the foremost citizen; I want him to exclaim in his own heart, 'behold, all this is mine! I support it and I am proud to support it. I am joint proprietor here.'"

In the course of his address President Harrison said: "The hand is not carely and the proposition of the course of his address President."

In the course of his address President Harrison said: "The hand is not cunning in itself. It is from the brain that it gets the impulse and teaching that enables it to perform the difficult tooks which are alone to distinguish the man. I hope that this institution may carry with it always and with every book that rests upon its shelves the suggestion to those who will participate in its blessings, "Read and think," Because, unless thinking accompanies reading there is not much profit in the book.

The doors of the library building were then thrown open for the balance of the evening and the public inspected the various departments of the handsome structure. The building cost $300,000 and was given to the city on condition that it should be supported by taxation. It includes a library, art gallery and music hall.

It is said semi-officially that Mr. Carneris and semi-onicially that Mr. Carne-gie has decided to increase his donation for a library in Pittsburg to $2,000,000. The original donation was $500,000.

Altogether the count appeared to be a man of fine breeding and charming parts. It now turns out that he had trouble in Dublin over money matters, was arrested, and that he evidently came to America to get a rich wife and impose on the people generally. He failed to secure the wife, but several people in Boston have lost of sums from $50 to $500 by him. The Russiau consul at New York, Gen-

The Russiau consul at New York, General Baron Resen, said on Friday, that he knew nothing of the Count Jubof officially, who might, or might not, be what he represented himself. The Jubofs were an old and distinguished family, and if the gentleman in Boston was a member of it he was entitled to social recognition.

The vice consul said that if any member of the Jubof family came to this country he would probably make himself known to the Russian minister and the consul general at New York. Considering the rank of the Jubofs this would be almost inevitable.

ILLEGAL RATES. The Inter-state Commerce sion's Decision.

A decision by the inter-state commission in the case of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railway company against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company, was announced on Friday. The was written by Commissioner

The complaint in this case alleges that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company has adopted and has in operation "party rates," so called, whereby parties of ten or more persons, such as theatrical parties, traveling together on one ticket, are transported at two cents per mile, which is less than the regular rate for a single person, said rate being about three cents per mile; and that said company also sells round trip excursion tickets without publicly posting the rates at which said tickets are sold. In the rates at which said tickets are s this case counsel appeared not only for the respondent, but also in behalf of the man-

"The prisoner, a gentlemanly-looking man, apparently about thirty-five years of age, acknowledged that he had obtained money from Johnson and from Daniel Keys and William Newton, who had sworn out unserved warrants against him. Remarkable Displacement of Organs.

A most remarkable case of displacement of the vital organs of the body was revealed in the autopsy held in New York on Friday on Albert L. Johnson, the old inventor, who dropped dead in the Equitable building. Deputy Coroner Jenkins made the sutopsy, and found that the heart, which was abnormally fat, had moved over to the right side of the chest; the stomach, spleen, panereas and a greater portion of the large and small intestines had passed up into the left pleural cavity and considerably compressed the left lung.

The heart, besides being displaced, was compressed, and the diaphragm had fallen into the abdomen. Some twenty years ago Johnson contracted hernia by a tree falling on him, and it is believed that the general displacement of those organs occurred at that time and existed ever since.

Dr. Jenkins said that the immediate cause of death was heart failure, though the displacement of the organs was tending to accelerate death. Remarkable Displacement of Organ
