eau Laitte, Royal Berton Sec, and some rare Madeira.

The menu was engraved in fine script apon heavy beveled blocks of papiermache, and no French terms were used. Every particle of food was described in plain English. In the upper left-hand sorner were the initials of Mr. Carnegie in two shades of green, while the name of the guest was, by a new and peculiar process, blows in glass at the bottom.

During the dinner a vocal and instrumental concert was given instead of the ordinary orchestral music. Mme. Marie Decca, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, Mr. Herndon Morsell, and the Shubert quartet gave Deca, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, Mr. Hern-don Morsell, and the Shubert quartet gave the vocal numbers, Miss Alice Raymond played a cornet solo, Mr. Ernst Lent a solo on the violoncello, Messrs. Elkstein and Andrews a duet for zithers, and Mr. Alexander presided at the piano. There were no formal speeches,

Watterson and Halstead.

The journalistic career of Mr. Watterson An journalists career of Mr. Watterson has been as unique and picturesque as is the editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal himself. It practically began after the war, when, a hungry and ragged Confederate, he reached Cincinnatt to visit his distinguished relative, the late Justice Stanley Matthews, of the United States supreme court. Being independent and still a little aggressive, Mr. Watterson refused the sid his Northern relative proffered with a liberal hand, and began work at $20 a week on the Timesbegan work at $2) a week on the Times-Star, the leading afternoon paper of Cincin-nati. I think that journal was then owned by a gentleman named Starbuck, who soon by a gentleman named Starbuck, who soon grew fond of his young Confederate editor. It did not take long for Mr. Halstead of the Commercial to get his artillery eye on Mr. Watterson, and the young Southerner became meat for Mr. Halstead's most pungent paragraphs. In the then feverish condition of the Northern mind, Cincinnati was not the most lovely place in the world for a Confederate soldier, and Halstead's frequent references to the Confederate's frequent references to the Confederate. stead's frequent references to the Confederate editor of the Times-Star hurt Watter

Gauging Halstead by his own standard of combat, young Watterson walked to the Commercial office one day and sought the presence of its able editor. To say that Halstead was surprised at his coming faintly describes the situation. For a moment he was not out a very whether his ment he was not quite sure whether his visitor brought a gun or not. Watterson son set his mind at rest by saying as soon as he had introduced himself:

"Halsteroduced himself;"
"Halsteroduced himself;
"Halsterd, it is within your power to brive me out of this town and prevent me rom earning the living I sadly need. I sally intend to stay long enough to put nyself in position financially to go elsewhere. With this statement I leave your future references to me with your own judgment of what is right and fair."

From that day to this not an unkind reference to Henry Watterson has ever appeared in the Commercial, and himself and Mr. Halstead are the very warmest of friends. Watterson did not remain long in Circle. Watterson did not remain long in Cincin-nati, but drifted South, and not long after his first introduction to Halstead he had his own newspaper.

Ladies' $1.50 Shoes!

A late arrival of these to tell of to-day. Ladies' Button Shoes, with GENUINE GOAT DONGOLA LEATHER uppers, trimmed, fitted, lined and finished in a superior manner; soild leather inner and outer soles and heels; sole leather and outer soles and heels; sole leather counters to strengthen and preserve the heel shape. Are cut by the same pattern and made over the same lasts as the finer grades costing $2 and $2.50 per pair. They are splendid fitting and invariably prove very serviceable. Of this make of goods our sales steadily increase; at times we've found it difficult to keep all sizes complete. New arrangements have times we've found it difficult to keep all sizes complete. New arrangements have been made with the manufacturer, which will enable us to supply every inquiry in the future without disappointment. Henceforth the material in them will be better and more pains taken in the making, while the price will remain the same. Once worn, ladies will want nothing better; they never disappoint the wearer.

Two new grades of Ladies' Shoes to introduce this week—stylish, well made, well trimmed, well finished, at $1.25 a pair. Opera Toe style, solid leather pair. Opera 10s style, sond leather throughout, excellent wearer, too. We've a Ladies' Shoe at $100 a pair— neat looking, fitting saugly and wears strongly. The cheapest good shoe sold in Lancaster. See these to see how pretty and how well shoes can be made for so little money. It is surprising. The material in them alone seems to be worth the money asked for the shoes
