The Leocoy Trial.
The most remarkable murder trial that has ever taken place, we believe, is that of Leocoy in New Jersey. His niece was found with her throat cut in the early morning after he had gone to the field to pursue his daily farm labor, accompanied by a negro servant, who had breakfasted in the house with his employer and the murdered girl. Uncle and niece had long lived together affectionately, and she was his household help. No motive for her murder by him is alleged, but it is suggested that it may have been the result of a sudden quarrel. No such quarrel is testified to by the negro servant; he heard no noise of it; his employer came quietly from the house, took his seat with him in the wagon and drove to the field, whence in two or three hours was recalled by news of the deed.

The only important evidence implicating him is that of this negro, who testifies that his employer, when in the wagon, told him that he had seen the niece in the doorway of the kitchen as they drove away; and the further testimony of a workman of doubtful repute, who lived in a neighboring cabin in the woods, and who says that Leocoy came to his house early that morning and told him that he had a quarrel with his niece and warned him to say nothing about it. No intimacy is shown to have existed between these men, and no reason is given wherefore so strange a confidence should have been reposed in this miserable wood-dweller.

The negro is of challenged character for truthfulness; and a cloud of witness testify that he told them, when the surrounding country gathered to the scene of the murder, that he had seen his victim alive and well as they left the house, and he gave no intimation against his employer until he fell into the hands of the prosecuting officers; who have shown all the way through to the end of the trial the most marked disposition to twist every little circumstance unfairly against the prisoner, and who released his hold upon another negro against whom there are serious circumstances of suspicion and have done their utmost to show his innocence. He was a man who had promised to help Leocoy in the field, and who had told the negro servant of Leocoy the day before, that he would be at Leocoy's house to breakfast next morning. He was not there when the farmer left, but his plate awaited him on the table. He turned up at a neighboring farm, where he was not expected to work, at an unusually late hour for farm laborers to report for work.

One fact which completely discredits the negro witness is that he swore that Leocoy wore slippers on that morning and that he saw them on him as he came out to the pump to wash his hands; whereas it was clearly shown that no one walking from the house to the pump, could be seen below the knees from where the negro says he stood beside his horses. And a fact which positively shows that the girl was slain after Leocoy had gone out to the field is that a half-drowned chicken was found in the stove oven, where someone had placed it after the breakfast had been prepared and the men had gone out; and who could it be but the girl in whose care the chickens were?

All of the relatives of the murdered girl and all his neighbors, who gave him the highest reputation, believe him innocent and stand warmly by him; and it is further shown that he was physically weak and unable to cope with violence who was unusually strong, and it also appears that he was robbed at the time of the murder.

How any respectable prosecuting officer could venture to hold Leocoy for this crime under these circumstances we fail to understand; nor how so great effort could be made by any honorable man to hang his fellow upon evidence that fails even to arouse a reasonable suspicion. And herein is the remarkable feature in this crime which will ever make it celebrated.

There is a possible reason for the ferocity of the prosecuting officers, in the fact that the case has attracted wide attention and has brought those engaged in it into great prominence. The desire to win even in a bad cause prompts many men to injustice; and this ferocity of the prosecution in this very weak case, revives the remembrance of another murder case in which the senior prosecutor was engaged some years ago, and in which he became very conspicuous because of the prominence of the accused and his success in hanging him. It is the case of Hunter, a Philadelphia man of standing, who was convicted on circumstantial evidence that did not amount to conclusive proof. A murder in Camden. The strong disposition shown by the prosecution in this case to secure a verdict of guilty against a man who is held by the community and by the friends to be innocent, and whose friends are against whom there is but the flimsy evidence of discredited witnesses, suggests that a like energy in the Hunter case had an unwarranted success, and that Hunter may have been the victim of a savage prosecution, just as Leocoy is sought to be made.

We have watched this case with interest and care and regret to be obliged to say that we have received the most positive impression that its prosecution has been unjustifiable in its outset and its conduct and does not reflect credit upon its authors.

Lately Bishops.
It is not many days since Evangelical Bishop Dubs was tried for improper conduct and his case gracefully renounced to the general conference to be held next fall, although the most serious charge in the published evidence only represented that he had placed his hands on the back of a sister's chair, and had inquired how she enjoyed her dinner. It is evident that this misdemeanor was rightly regarded as the beginning of an epidemic of wickedness among bishops, as it is quickly followed by news of charges against Bishop Eaker of Chicago, formally presented by lay elders at the conference at Shonkin, where the bishop himself presided.

At the same time a Chicago dispatch announces the formal expulsion from the church of the son of Bishop Eaker, who had brought suit for libel against the publishers of a church paper without first resorting to more brotherly means. It appears that the libel related to a controversy between Eaker and Dubs, and, like the latter, Mr. Eaker denies the jurisdiction of the church tribunal. The charges against Bishop Eaker are slender, evil speaking and disturbing the peace, and so he had been tried and acquitted at home he refused to vacate the chair, or to take any notice of the accusation. A reverend brother then sadly declared that the disension bordered on anarchy and threatened dissolution. As these bishops have furnished all this excitement at eighteen hundred dollars a year, paying their own house rent, it is easy to sympathize with the interest of the one in dinner, and the alleged tendency of the other to disturb the peace.

A bishop who has to travel on his dignity and on a small salary is apt to find that effort to maintain the former exhausts the latter, and, being human, he grows hungry and quarrelsome. If the distressed brethren want a peaceful and eminently respectable article in the bishop lines they must pay for it; but, perhaps, it is better for them to be stirred up, as at present, in order that they may be made to realize in their full enormity the awfulness of the crimes charged against the bishops. What can be expected of a church whose very bishops display an interest in dinner and are suspected of "evil-speaking"? What would become of the congregations of Lancaster if evil-speaking should become common among them, when even now the frank avowal of notorious facts is claimed to be uncharitable?

CLEVELAND LUCK is again the cry at the end of the sales. View at a profit of a hundred thousand dollars. With all his economy of salary and devotion to chicken raising Mr. Hayes can not prosper or emerge from obscurity, while the Democratic ex-president can't help being famous and fortunate.

THE PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS continues to excite interest abroad, and a New York Herald dispatch says that on Thursday it formed a topic for interesting debate in the Spanish Cortez. A Cuban deputy expressed alarm lest the United States should adopt a South American policy injurious to Spain, and another member declared that our policy excited alarm in Europe and was dangerous to the whole Latin race. According to this Spaniard we have always shown a profound dislike for Spain and Spanish America, and our Monroe doctrine really means America for the United States.

The minister of foreign affairs closed the debate by stating that the policy of the present liberal government fostered friendly relations with the South American states for the purpose of forming a Pan-American union. He believed the conference at Washington was in its main object a fiasco. The relations between Spain and the United States were most friendly, despite the late proposition of a Florida senator relative to the purchase of Cuba.

PERSONAL.
Miss Miller, daughter of William H. Miller, of Indiana, attorney general of the United States, is staying with Mrs. Harlow Wilcox in Lancaster.
Hon. James Russell Lowell is quite ill at his home in Cambridge. He contracted a cold a few days ago which has now assumed a serious phase. His daughter, Mrs. Barrett, is attending him.
Edward Langewin, a Minnesota pioneer and one of the wealthiest citizens of St. Paul, has been adjudged by the probate court to be incompetent to manage his estate, and his wife and two sons-in-law were appointed guardians. Mr. Langewin's wealth is estimated at $3,000,000.
COMMODORE GEORGE B. WHITE, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, navy department, who died on Thursday, was appointed to the naval academy from Pennsylvania in 1854. He was attached to the frigate, and was with that vessel in the action at Vera Cruz which resulted in the capture of the steamer Miramon and the blockade of the harbor, and participated in the capture of Fort Fisher.
