The commander of a war ship is an absolute monarch when at sea with his vessel, and a great deal depends upon his whima. This affair gives prominence to the fact long deplored that the saffors of our navy are largely recruited from other nations. The House naval committee is now con-sidering the McAdoc bill to prevent the enlistment of alfans and the navy depart-ment has furnished a statement showing that of the 7,946 enlisted men in the navy but 3,665 are of American birth. The table out 3,665 are of American birth. The table shows that almost every nationality is represented. Ireland heads the list with 910 men ; Germany furnished 546 ; Swedon, 429; Norway, 421, and Great Britain, 372. There are seamen from India, Tasmania, Iceland, Syria and Turkey, and two men are set down as without mationality, being born at sea.

CHURCH people have taken belligerent fits in many forms and places just at pres-ont. The Evangelical conference furnishes plenty of interesting news, a Pittsburg sisterhood defies the pope, and nows Baptist church of Pittsburg has been sitting up all night in a vain effort to expel its pastor, Rev. C. B. W. Gordon. This alphabetical conference are substiticed because he Rev. C. B. W. Gordon. This alphabetical gentleman says that it was all because he was a Democraf, buil his opponents declare that is also an autocrat-statements that fall to harmonize. The story runs that on Tuesday night the congregation was locked in the church where Mr. Gordon was preaching, although how or why this was done does not appear. The Rev. Gordon must be very terrible as a preacher for on Thursday night a church meeting was held to consider this outrage. Thirty-six mem-bers were found guilty of having the doors closed and of rebelling against the pastor and were summarily expelled, but although the moeting was in session until two o'clock the meeting was in session until two o'clock on Friday morning the all-night labor may be for naught, as the expelled and their friends declare that the meeting was not in accordance with the rules and therefore illegal. They will prefer charges

In the com-mencement the scene is laid in London, where Meore is perfectly contented to be lionized and couried by the gay world of fashion. Here we are introduced to the Lady Adels Cunyngham, her two sisters and their numerous satellites, whom the southor describes in a keen and humorous style. Position overy why as by have

From the heat and din of the London theatre Moore goes to Aivron, Scotland, the sporting-lodge of Sir Huge Cunyng-ham. Here he meets Honnor, the sister of Sir Hugh, who teaches him the mysteries of salmon fishing, and also that a man should have higher aims and amnitions in life than to be merely the popu singer of a Londou public. He goes back to his work thoroughly dissatiafied with his life, imagining himself deeply and truly in love with Honnor Cunyngham. After her return to London, Moore discovers that his love is not reciprocated, and he ers that his love is not reoproceed, and he plunges into the wildest dissipation, drink-ing and gambling. At this time his old friend Antonis Rossi disappears, and Moore discovers that she is the one who has been his help and guide, and that it is she that he really loves, and heat the she that he really loves, and not Honnor. Why it is that so many mod-ern novelists require an illness to bring the heroine and hero together we cannot tell. A SALE OF MOCK ORANGES.

A Novel and Unique Intertainment at Cleveland Church.

A Novel and Unique Intertainment at a Cleveland Church. From the Cleveland Loster. One of the most unique entertainments ever given in Cleveland occurred at the Second Presbyterian durch last evening. It was an orange grovi sale, given under the anapices of the Yoang Ladies' Benevo-lent society of the church. The room occu-pied was brilliantly lighted and it presen-ted a handsome apparance. The decora-tions were striking and beautiful. The houses of a number of wealthy ladies had been placed at the disposal of the society and their drapery was artistically arranged about the room. Orange was the provailing color. It was conspicuous in the costumes of the yoang ladies who attended to tho guests. In the centre of the room was a grove of orange trees, loaded with artif-cial oranges, which were plucked and sold by the yoang ladies. The artificial frait was made of orange colored felt, filled with colton.

made of orange colored felt, filled with cotton. Each orange contained a useful or fancy article. They were all made by the ladies, and if was a painstaking task. Four hun-dred and titly oranges were placed on the trees, and they were all disposed of in an hour. The ladies said they could easily have sold 1,000, but they had no idea that the demand for their handiwork would be so great. The brilliance, of the scene was added to by a large numer of candelabra filled with orange wax can be tree occu-pied two sides of the room, but young ladies with orange caps, orange apply a and orange flowers served ice cream in weat and money flowed in to them roadily.

must be said that her novel is infinitely better written than the "The Dean and His Daughter." From F. C. Philips to George Eliat ia, we scknowledge, a great stay out no better words can be used in escribing the charac-ter of "Vers Forman" in "The Dean's Daughter" Uset to quote from Geo. Eliot's description of his her-ines in Daniel Deronds "Her ideal was to be daring in speech and reckless in braving dangers, bots moral and physical."

True, the Quixotic ideas of this heroine. or "Bohemian" ideas, as Sophie Veitch calls them, do in the end an infinite amount of good to other people. However, there is hardly a doubt that we would greatly prefer the evils to happen than to be brought into contact with a girl like Vera Dorman.

"How fortunate it is that in real life we eldom meet a Vera Dorman, or as equally improbable that we will come across people similar to the ones who figured in her ife"; we can hear the reader of "The Dean's Daughter" exclaim : Yes. But there you are mistaken, for we do constantly, however the authoress has given us a rather extravagant and overdrawn sketch of the weakness of human nature. SOME REMARKABLE PASSAGES IN THE

This little book is really a memorial by its translator of Dr. George de Benneville, of whom he, the translator, Rev. Elhanan Winchester, was a personal friend ; and it must be a particularly valuable souvenir to the descendants of that good old man, Dr. George de Benneville. Dr. de Benneville came to America in 741, and five years afterward married a Miss Bertolette, whose parents had at one time suffered for religious persocution. The interest of the autobiography is not lost under the hand of the translator. One cannot but be impressed with the earnest truth of the writer, and he at least believed so implicitly in his own reading of these passages in his life that we agree with the translator in thinking for him to have deitherately imposed upon mankind was impossible. It may not be known to outsiders that the belief of the Universalists of the eighteenth century differed from that of the present day. While the latter teach that the wicked receive their punishment while on earth, the former taught "universal restoration"; that is, the ultimate salvation of all souls, which forever after death must pass through a temporary punishment which purified them for the state of happiness to follow.
