...Henderson, one of the ... and respected citizens ... township, made a dea... that chosen a mysterio... years standing, the murder ... Dr. Levering. Henderson conducted a country store near the doctor's residence, and they were warm friends. During the war Dr. Levering was drafted, and, not desiring to go upon the field, secured Henderson as his substitute. Levering looked after his business affairs in his absence, and was a frequent visitor at the store. Soon the names of Dr. Levering and Mrs. Henderson were coupled in a compromising manner. The stories increased with the lapse of time, and soon letters were sent to Henderson telling him that Dr. Levering had visited his home. He returned at the expiration of his term of enlistment, and settled down to his former business, applying himself closely, and never giving any indication that he would perpetrate a terrible revenge.

Late on Tuesday afternoon of February 13, 1866, Dr. Levering was called away from home by a decoy message to treat a patient some miles distant. He returned to his home some time after 7 o'clock in the evening, and drove directly to the barn. There was a stone wall about ten feet from the stable door. Back of this wall Henderson secreted himself and waited until Levering had unhitched his horse and was leading it in the stable. As the doctor got opposite to him he fired a charge of buckshot and bullets into his breast. He dropped to the ground dead, and a few minutes later his family found his lifeless body.

The assassin escaped in the darkness, and so completely covered his tracks that no clue to the murder has ever been found until Henderson revealed it himself.

The country was immediately aroused, and searching parties were set afoot. Henderson was among the number, and evinced the keenest interest to unravel the mystery. His name appeared along with that of a number of other prominent citizens of Lower Merion, offering a reward of $1,000. Immediately after the murder John Henderson took sick, and for five years afterward was an invalid—through the pangs of remorse it is said now—and was compelled to retire from business. He moved to Philadelphia, where he remained for several years; but like Eugene Aaram, returned to the scene of his crime, which seemed to have a strange infatuation for him.

A COOL AND COURTLY VILLAIN.

The Bogus Lord Undismayed by Strong Evidence of Murder.

A dispatch to the Record from Niagara Falls says it is now settled beyond all disputethat the body found in the lonely woods of Princeton, on February 21st, is that of Frederick C. Benwell, of Cheltenham, Eng., son of W. F. Benwell, a retired colonel of the English army, and connected with some of the best families in Great Britain. Douglass Raymond Pelly, is the son of Rev. R. P. Pelly, Vicar of Saffron Waldon, Essex, and a cousin of the beautiful Lady Pelly, who followed in the suit of Lord Lanedowne when he was governor general of Canada.

And Reginald Birchell, esq., now a prisoner with his fair-haired wife, who is he? At any rate, he is as clever a blackleg and as heartless a buccaneer as ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat, and as handsome and engaging a fellow as one would meet from rise of sun to the setting of it. And the pretty starry-eyed woman whom he married in England, and has been a sharer in his adventures both by land and sea, is the daughter of David Stevenson, London. The baggage of the dead man fills nearly a whole room, and represents an expenditure of at least $1,000. There are thirteen pieces; chests, hat-boxes, a Gladstone bag and a gun-case. This last alone is a beautiful piece. It is the equipment of a wealthy gentleman.

One possession of poor Benwell had a bit of pathos about it. It was a heavy, gilt-bound album filled with the faces of the friends and family of the dead man. They ranged all the way from the countenance of a handsome lady with silver hair to a bonny little bit of laughing humanity in short dresses. Sandwiched in between were innumerable pretty girls, school-fellows and college chums and several officers of her majesty's army.

The prisoner sat in the court room all day listening to Pelly's story, and those of Detective Murray and Chief of Police Young. No clearer thread of circumstantial evidence was ever spun about a man.

He laughed when any one else laughed, and keenly enjoyed the rehearsal of a bright anecdote which he had once told Polly, ridiculing a local town. Otherwise he was as calm as a stone.

A dispatch from London says that the old and highly respected father of Mrs. Birchell is very much distressed at the news and says that he strongly opposed his daughter's marriage.

JACOBS' SANITY.

Two More Experts Examine Him In His Cell.

Dr. Robert H. Chase, of the Norristown insane asylum, and Dr. H. A. Hutchinson, of the State Hospital for Insane at Dixmont, were in this city to-day. Their mission was to examine James H. Jacobs and report as to his sanity.

These physicians are experts on the question of insanity and were sent to examine Jacobs by the board of pardons. They declined to state what conclusion they had reached when seen this afternoon by an INTELLIGENCER reporter. They said they had been with Jacobs in his cell at the county prison from 10 o'clock this morning until 2 o'clock this afternoon and that they would make a full report of their investigation to the board of pardons on March 18.

Mr. Eshleman escorted the physicians from the prison to his house and entertained them at dinner. Dr. Chase is a cousin of Mr. Eshleman.

A Hose Test.

Some time ago the fire committee of councils purchased 1,000 feet of Eureka hose and same quantity of New York Fabric hose. When the test was made the Fabric hose failed to stand it and the Eureka did. The Fabric was sent back and 1,000 additional feet of Eureka hose was ordered. This afternoon a test of the hose was made in No. 1 engine house. Those present were the members of the fire committee, Chief Engineer Vondersmith, Samuel B. Shenck, of Harrisburg, agent of the Eureka company, and a number of firemen. The hose was tested with a hydraulic pump and several sections were submitted to 400 pounds, which it stood bravely. That is what the hose is guaranteed to stand, and a number of sections were tried at 250 pounds, which is the service test. The hose was perfectly satisfactory to every one.

A Brother Survives.

It will be remembered that the INTELLIGENCER recently noted the decease in the Lower End of Esquire John C. Lewis, a well known and eccentric bachelor who had for many years led a solitary life. He was not known at the time to have any relatives living, and his neighbor and friend, I. N. Keen, esq., administered upon his estate. The inventory filed in the register's office shows an estate estimated in value at $1,100. This morning, however, it develops that Lewis had relatives living in Montgomery county, and one of them, a brother, D. R. Lewis has presented himself at the register's office with his counsel, A. C. Reinoehl, esq., and has also taken out letters of administration. Mr. Keen has been notified, and the letters granted to him will likely be vacated.

THIS evening at 7 o'clock, at the Franklin house, John H. Baumgardner, executor of J. Copland, will sell the well-known "Copland House," 125 and 127 North Queen street. The property has long been the principal restaurant in the city and is well worthy the attention of buyers.

The Lancaster public have a rich treat in store for them in the appearance at Fulton opera house on Thursday evening next, of the famous "Nellie Bly," who made the circuit of the globe in seventy-two days, surpassing even the daring imaginary feat of Jules Verne's hero. When Miss Bly passed through Lancaster on her return trip, thousands gathered at the station here to see the pincky little woman who had beaten the world's greatest record as a traveler. She will recount the incidents of her famous journey, and is sure to be replete with interest.
