An Inflated Statesman.

The Delaware Republican calls upon the party to halt the postmaster general in his attempt to commit it to a policy at variance with its principles and aims.

The party that has accepted, as one of its leaders, this inflated statesman fresh from haberdashery can not fairly complain if he falls to recognize that it has any principles and aims except those represented by profit and loss.

Wanamaker is postmaster general for value received in funds raised for the election of our president, and this humiliating fact quite overshadows the schemes of "designing scamps" referred to.

A cabinet officer is all the better for being a good business man, but he must first of all be a thoughtful, able and broad-minded student of government.

The "dark dabney" furnishes the most lurid news nowadays. The French are having lively times with the King of Dahomey, the English in the Transvaal are quarreling with the Boers and a Zensibar dispatch says the Germans under Wissmann have started to attack Beuan Heri.

Americans may not have the pleasure or misery of an acquaintance with Beuan, but on general principles they will wish the Germans success and hope for disaster to the slave trader.

The King of Uganda has taken a notion to turn Christian, but has not made up his mind as to the brand he likes best, and so missionaries of various denominations are quarreling for supremacy over his soul and dominions.

He is the man who celebrated his ascent to the throne by wholesale murder of missionaries. The proceedings of the French in Dahomey are given interest by the news that in a recent battle they slew several of the king's Amazon body guard.

The king has a standing army of troops enrolled for life, but it is a national custom for any husband who wishes to get rid of a bad tempered or uncooperative wife to present her to the king as a soldier of his famous Amazon body guard.

The garrison of the capital is composed almost exclusively of these female warriors, of whom there are said to be about six thousand. They are by no means an attractive lot, but one of the spectacles of the country is the war dance of these women armed with big spears and other discouraging African weapons.

The other spectacles of Dahomey seem to consist chiefly of the frequent killing of slaves to add dignity and interest to state occasions; and altogether it appears that a conquest of the land by the French is a thing to be eagerly desired in the interest of humanity and civilization.

At Paris all parties favor vigorous measures in Dahomey, but remembering the troubles of the Anim campaign many are opposed to carrying the war into the interior. Dahomey is a very pleasant land, and it seems strange that it has not been conquered long ago by some enterprising great power.

The climate is not deadly as at Laredo, like that of many parts of the African coast, the land is very fertile and the people intelligent although uncomfortable bloodthirsty. No half way measures will bring the Dahomeans to submission, and if France wants the prize she must expect to pay for it heavily.

Church Bosses.

The church bosses in our town do not all seem to be model bosses; and the fact is one to which we call attention without much trembling, notwithstanding the church boss idea that seems to pervade the church boss head—which is often empty enough to give room to any idea—that the newspaper ought not to say anything about him.

We do not look upon the subject with the church boss eyes; they are functionaries whose conduct is very clearly open to public criticism.

The bosses of St. James Episcopal church, called vestrymen, and five in number, are under the barrow of severe criticism from their congregation for oppressive and unwise use of their power.

those Methodist Episcopal bosses are presently worthy of denunciation. They may be saved by their great work; but there will be no mercy for them if they fall in it.

Docking Tails.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has a fair field for the exercise of its benevolence in the suppression of the fashion that has been revived in New York of docking horses' tails.

It has long been a practice there to cut the tail off square at the end of the caudal extension of the backbone; in which operation there was no cruelty as nothing was cut but the hair.

Now, however, the tail is severed close up to the body; and often times so little of a tail is left that a rabbit would not own it. It is the same fashion that prevailed years ago and that died out over a quarter of a century since.

There is nothing to recommend it save the avoidance of getting the lines under a horse's tail in single driving, but this can be otherwise avoided. It is a mere excuse for the practice as is evident from the fact that the docked horses are not usually driven singly in New York.

We have not noticed the revival of the fashion elsewhere, and we do not suppose that it will spread very far, notwithstanding its prevalence in New York. There is nothing to commend the practice in its beauty certainly.

The little bunches of hair that are shaken at the end of the backbone give a very ludicrous air to the rear end of the horse's anatomy, especially when the animal is big, as many of the New York beasts are.

The society for the protection of animals has our good wishes in its raid upon this folly. No one should drive a bob-tail horse in this generation, unless he can give a good reason for it. It may be a proper practice with a horse who objects when the reins pass under his tail, but the well-behaved horse should not be docked.

According to the researches of Dr. Regnard.

published in the archives of the Biological Society of Paris, boats at the bottom of very deep seas do not decompose, because the tremendous pressure will not permit the process.

He found that a pressure of six hundred atmospheres made decomposition impossible, and this is equivalent to a depth at sea of six thousand metres. If the conclusion is correct the depths of the sea may present strange spectacles.

The natives of Hayti, according to Dr. R. P. Crandall in the Medical Record, believe consumption to be both contagious and infectious, and dread it much more than smallpox or yellow fever.

A native who is believed to have consumption is avoided by his friends and prayed for by the priests, and when he dies "the entire contents of the room in which he died are either destroyed or thrown into some place set aside by the government for that purpose.

This sacrifice of property not only includes the furniture of the room, but articles of value, such as jewelry, gold and precious stones. This idea of destruction is carried to such an extent by some that the paper is sometimes removed from the walls, and the floors torn up, and if the house is small it is sometimes burned down.

Near Cape Haytien there is a marsh known as the "cemetery of horses," which the doctor has described. Scattered over its muddy depths, were innumerable household articles, furniture of all kinds, sewing-machines, pianos, book-cases, books, etc. Here and there also appeared the whitened skeletons of animals.

I asked of a native standing near the reason for this apparent waste of property. He informed me that the Chinese des Cheaux was a repository for the bodies of animals, and for every thing that was found in the room of one who had died from consumption. He said that nothing would induce a Haytien to even touch any thing that had been placed there. I found this to be strictly true, as on several occasions I observed natives sums of money to bring me articles of the cemetery, and was always refused with looks of horror and repugnance.

The doctor does not explain why some enterprising foreigner does not take advantage of this native dread and go into the business of exporting consumptive effects. Even if the Haytien variety of the disease has dangerous peculiarities, a point not admitted, the sewing machines, pianos and jewelry might at least be disinfected and sold in more intelligent communities.

The starving Indians of Dakota was the first cry, now it is the starving whites. It is said that the first months of the history of the new states should show them unable to sustain their scanty population, but the five thousand pioneers for whom Miss Barton asks assistance have not had time to lay by for a rainy day, or rather for frosty weather. The killing of a crop by frost leaves them without the necessities of life, because they have spent their surplus in founding homesteads. It is the history of all new states, although many of them pass through it in their territorial days.

PERSONAL.

Geo. P. Whitaker, the millionaire iron manufacturer, is very ill at his home at Principio Furnace, Md., with pneumonia. He was one time a member of the Maryland Legislature.

The Growing of a Chick.

A Frenchman who removed the shell on either side of an egg without touching the membrane, in patches about the size of the diameter of a pea, and snuggly fixed the opening with bits of glass, giving the following report of the wonderful experiment:

I placed the egg with the glass bull's eyes in an incubator run by clock work and revolving once each hour, so that I had the pleasure of looking through the glass at the change upon the inside at the end of every 60 minutes. No changes were noticeable until after the end of the twelfth hour when some of the membranes of the yolk and body of the chick made their appearance.

The heart appeared to beat at the end of the 24th hour and in 48 hours two vessels of looking through the glass, the pulsation being quite visible. At the fifth hour an air-bell of the heart appeared, much resembling a loose or folded piece of parchment, and at the end of seventy hours we distinguished wings and two bubbles for the brain, one part and bill and the two others for the feet and hind part of the head.

At the end of 138 hours the lungs and stomach had become visible, and four hours later the intestines, the liver, and the upper mandible could be distinguished. The almy matter of the brain began to take form and became more compact at the beginning of the 150th hour.

At the 150th hour the bill first opened and flesh began to appear on the breast. At the 194th the sternum appeared. At the 210th the ribs had begun to put out from the back; the bill was quite visible, as was also the gall bladder. At the beginning of the 220th hour the bill had become green, and the ribs had begun to put out from the moved had it been taken from the shell. Four hours more and feathers had commenced to shoot out and the skull to become grizzly.

At the 234th hour the eyes appeared, and two hours later the ribs were perfect. At the 331st hour the spleen drew up to the stomach and the wings to the chest. When the incubator had turned the egg 435 times the bill was frequently opening and closing, as if the chick was gasping for breath. When 431 hours had elapsed we heard the first cry of the little imprisoned bird. From that time forward he grew rapidly, and came out a full-fledged chick at the proper time.

HIS FINGER NAILS CAME OFF.

For a year I was afflicted with a horrible case of blood poisoning, and upwards of five months of that illness was unable to do work of any kind. My finger nails came off and my hair dropped out, leaving my head as clean as a billiard table. I tried every remedy, but the best local physicians and spent hundreds of dollars for medicines of different kinds, but without success. I then tried Dr. J. C. Taylor's Purge, and after taking a few bottles, I was cured. My finger nails came off and my hair dropped out, leaving my head as clean as a billiard table. Wanamaker's

Philadelphia, Monday, March 10, 1890. Shopping as an art is a tempting advertising topic, but we can't discuss it—at least to-day.

Men only buy things, women shop. Sociology may find in it a theme quite worthy. Ours to supply the shopping opportunity and point the way.

The finger-board to-day points to Challis. The new arrivals are here. In former seasons our advertising effervesced over Challis.

The enthusiasm is greater now. Past achievement fades in comparison with present success. The beauty of the new styles predicts even greater popularity for Challis.

The styles cannot be described. Criticism is not popular. Advertising is nothing if not popular. A dash of a few words and the rest is left for your personal visit.

The styles of the season have an abandon, a freedom, most unconventional, often intricate and involved, wild leaves and flowers wonderfully natural, odd colors and effects.

Whatever your particular bent in dress may be, classic Greek or Oriental, the Challis will give color and figure for your purpose.

The richest and choicest printings are 60 cents, the next 50 cents, and many more 37 1/2 cents. The cloths are all about the same, the differences are in style, the greatest novelties in the two highest grades.

A chorus of Silks claims recognition—Shanghai, Japanese, Lousiennes, Surahs, Gros-grains, Cachemires join in a demand for notice. You know they are here. That's enough for to-day. More anon.

Steel Spectacles, properly adjusted, $1, $1.50, and $2. Gold Spectacles, 8k, $3; 10k, $4.50; 14k, $5.50, and upward. No charge for examining your eyes.

Near Juniper street entrance. That famous Blanket. Pure wool filling, light cotton warp so hidden that you think of nothing but the wool. Six pounds, generous size—and the March out price, $5!

Near Women's Waiting Room. John Wanamaker. Dry Goods.
