Selecting a Candidate.
Mr. Bigler, who was the state candidate of the Democracy last year, expresses the wish to see a contest in the convention over the Democratic nomination for governor, in sign of the zeal and activity of the party; and it is a very sensible expression.

It is said that a serious difficulty in the way of the development of trade with Mexico and South America is the scarcity of drummers with the necessary qualifications for pushing American goods in those markets.

The vote in the House of Commons on Labouchere's motion to abolish hereditary representation in Parliament shows a very decided minority favoring such a measure, and when it is remembered that the members of the House are largely drawn from the wealthy or titled classes and that the average Englishman dearly loves a lord, the support of Labouchere's motion seems remarkable.

The sudden death of General Crook calls general attention to the arduous and scantily rewarded services of the army on the frontier in the glorious Indian campaigns. Crook, like Sheridan, fought the Indians before the war, and after making a splendid war record he turned his attention to that disheartening field of military activity, where the rascality and ruffianism of frontier desperadoes is continually bringing on petty warfare with brutal savages, and where "villains fatten by the brave man's labor."

The drift toward.
The Inquiry prints a communication from Blue Ball, noting the exodus of people from the eastern end of this county to Philadelphia and Reading. The correspondent says: "At least a dozen families from within a few miles of this place have gone to those two places, and many houses are standing empty for want of tenants. The cause of this drift from country to city is a true index of the depressed conditions of things in the rural districts everywhere."

The drift from country to city is easily noticeable in Lancaster itself, where in fair weather countrymen may be seen standing around the monument, courthouse and railroad stations, waiting for something to turn up. Dire necessity drives them to the city in hopes of better times, and arriving here the women and children find work in cotton factories or as domestic service, and the men start themselves up against a wall or lamp post. It is high time that some attention should be given to this very significant movement from country to city. The men who come in from the farms may be only the least energetic and industrious elements of the farming population, but their movement shows how things are going with the farmer and recalls Grover Cleveland's thoughtful remark: "It is a condition, not a theory, that confronts us." The farmer, therefore, should begin to consider whether they have not carried party allegiance to an absurd extreme in voting for the maintenance of a high tariff and the rule of a party whose war mission has long ended.

Concerning Mud.
When taxpayers take their Sunday walks there will be no great harm in a little deep thought on the mud they will find everywhere. It is very deep mud in some places, and if we were to undertake to locate them it might take several columns to do the subject justice. Perhaps it is wrong to call attention to this mud on Sunday, as thought in that line is apt to be accompanied by language more picturesque than proper when the taxpayer remembers that it cost forty-five thousand dollars to put the streets in their present remarkable condition. If he takes a drive now and then for business or pleasure he will not need to have his attention called to the atrocious condition of many of our streets, covered with a depth of mud only exceeded in some of the country roads.

Six Men Hunting For a Cowheeb.
Did I ever tell you how I had a party of six men hunting for a single cowheeb? said a civil engineer as he passed for a moment to light a cigar. "For two days I was fishing for cowheeb in the mud. There was nothing to indicate the line, and a few posts which had been sunk into the earth and which, on account of the rapid growth of underbrush, were not easy to find."

I had made my calculations correctly and knew the line was somewhere around. I was fishing for cowheeb in the mud. There was nothing to indicate the line, and a few posts which had been sunk into the earth and which, on account of the rapid growth of underbrush, were not easy to find."

days ago a strong stream of water was found and this seems to be the case of late whenever a hole is dug along that square. In one case so strong a stream was found that it was feared that it came from a broken city pipe, and the authorities were asked to investigate, but pooh-poohed the idea. A water motor was put in the hole and keeps down the level of the water, but the stream is still flowing. The holes and depressions along the half square by the station now filled in with stone may have been largely due to the action of water beneath the surface.

But to return to the mud; it may be found in a sticky, pasty state on a great many crossings, and if a phonograph report of the remarks of church gossips could be taken it would alarm not only the clergy, but the countenances of Lancaster. The snow shovel boys, who have made so little money this year, might clear a handsome sum by shoveling the mud from some of the crossings and asking a few cents from each of the passers-by. A fine sample of street crossing is at the corner of Prince and Orange streets, and the former highway has many interesting wastes of mud. It is rumored that a cab successfully passed through Mary street recently and there are some other streets where it is quite possible for a daring driver to get along. Cherry alley is a business thoroughfare of laboring men which deserves to be saved from mud. All this for forty-five thousand dollars!

It is said that a serious difficulty in the way of the development of trade with Mexico and South America is the scarcity of drummers with the necessary qualifications for pushing American goods in those markets. These men must be familiar with the customs and practices of the people, and know the language and country thoroughly. A New York company, known as the "American Export and Trading Company," has undertaken to overcome this by establishing agencies for the use of Northern merchants and manufacturers in Buenos Ayres and the City of Mexico. From these centres outposts will be established, and it is hoped that in this way trade may be captured from the Spanish and English merchants.

There is no such innumerable folly as that of the "North American" recommendation that languishes in the "Lancaster" when one looks at the "Lancaster" will be a blessing to every family, and a recommendation to the "Lancaster" will be a blessing to every family, and a recommendation to the "Lancaster" will be a blessing to every family.

But few of our citizens are aware of the large number and interesting character of our native sparrows. Similar for the most part in color, of a limited range in size, and generally resembling the English bird, they are, nevertheless, a most useful and interesting class of birds, and are so strongly inclined to associate with man as to have become almost inseparable from the habors of our cities and towns. They are, in fact, the most numerous and useful of birds, and are so strongly inclined to associate with man as to have become almost inseparable from the habors of our cities and towns.
