

AFTER A FORTUNE.

HEIRS OF HUGH HAGEN SEEKING MONEY WILDED HIM MANY YEARS AGO.

Hugh Campbell Dies in This County in 1811 and Leaves His Estate to a Nephew—County Records Searched.

Samuel L. Isbell, attorney-at-law, came to Lancaster today to look up a fortune said to be held here by relatives who live in the South. The parties he represents made the following statement to him:

Hugh Campbell, a wealthy bachelor, died in this county about 1811, and left his entire estate to his nephew, Hugh Hagen. One of the provisions of his will left his real estate in charge of a committee of twelve, and if not claimed by the heirs of Hugh Hagen in five years, the real estate was to be sold and the proceeds invested in the same manner as his personal estate, and if the heirs of Hugh Hagen failed to claim the estate in 100 years from the date of his death his entire estate was to revert to the county or state.

Hugh Hagen was born in Ireland and came to America in 1750. He was raised by Campbell and apprenticed by him to a silversmith. After he had learned that trade he went to South Carolina, where he married a Miss Barrow. From there he removed to Madison, Kentucky, in 1778, and died about 1835. His heirs are now living in Union City, Tennessee, and Dalton, Georgia, and these are the heirs represented by Mr. Isbell.

He made a search of the register's office for the will of Hugh Campbell, but there is none on record. While Campbell lived in this county, Mr. Isbell is not sure where the will is recorded. It may be registered in the register's office of Chester county, and he proposes to make an examination of the papers on file in that county before his return to the South.

He also examined numerous old papers bearing upon the assessment of properties in this county about the time Hugh Campbell is supposed to have lived here, but could find nothing on record in Lancaster county to substantiate the claims of the heirs.

He also called upon a number of Hagens and Campbells to get information of the early history of that family in this county. The Hagens and Campbells are numerous in Martine and adjoining townships and Mr. Isbell will visit that section before he goes to his home.

MRS. TIERNY MAKES IT HOT.

Constable McKeever on His Bended Knees, Swears Never to Trouble Her Again.

What an exciting time at Dodgeville, Luzerne county, on Monday. Mrs. Patrick Tierney was behind in her rent. A constable, McKeever, came to her house to collect. She refused to pay, and the constable proceeded to sell the furniture. Landlord Toss was the only bidder. The constable, however, was not satisfied with the price, and he called on Mrs. Tierney. "Well, now, stop here. Nobody knows no law. Without a stove I and my children must suffer from the cold." The constable was not so lucky. Mrs. Tierney made a blow with the weapon at the constable, and in his effort to avoid it he dropped into a corner. The landlord's son then stepped in, but a well-directed blow of one of the stove lids brought him to the floor. Mrs. Tierney again turned her attention to Constable McKeever. The latter was still in the corner with uplifted hands appealed to the infuriated woman: "For God's sake, Mrs. Tierney, you would not kill an officer of the law?"

"Yes I will," roared, returned the woman, as she lunged like the sword of Damocles, over the officer's head. "You won't hurt me, but I will hurt you. You won't hurt me, but I will hurt you. You won't hurt me, but I will hurt you." The constable was not so lucky. Mrs. Tierney made a blow with the weapon at the constable, and in his effort to avoid it he dropped into a corner. The landlord's son then stepped in, but a well-directed blow of one of the stove lids brought him to the floor. Mrs. Tierney again turned her attention to Constable McKeever. The latter was still in the corner with uplifted hands appealed to the infuriated woman: "For God's sake, Mrs. Tierney, you would not kill an officer of the law?"

AN INSTALLATION.

Interesting Ceremonies at the Meeting of Washington Encampment.

I. O. O. F. Last evening the officers of Washington Encampment, No. 11, I. O. O. F., were installed by District Deputy G. P. W. F. Hambright, assisted by a number of past officers. There was quite a large attendance and among those present was a delegation of thirty members of Canton Lancaster, Patriarchs Militant, who looked very well in their handsome uniforms. They were in command of Captain J. O. Leachy. The officers were as follows: G. P. W. F. Hambright; first W. J. Folts; second W. George Muser; third W. K. Harman; fourth W. W. Y. Haldy; G. of tent, John Levergood and W. Smith.

DEATH OF REV. J. A. COOPER.

A Well Known Methodist Preacher Here Dies at Bird-in-Hand.

Rev. J. A. Cooper, a pastor of the Methodist church on the Bird-in-Hand circuit, died at his residence here on Tuesday afternoon at the age of 72 years. He was a native of Pennsylvania and had been a member of the Philadelphia conference some years ago and had several charges in Chester county before he was sent to the Bird-in-Hand circuit. He was serving the third year of his pastorate at the time of his death. The cause of death was enlargement of the heart.

A BORN TRIFLER.

William Pond, alias Block, alias Bligh, was arrested in Newark, for stealing a horse and wagon. In 1883 Pond was convicted of wholesale robbery and sentenced to nine years in state prison. He was pardoned two weeks ago and resumed his career of crime. In 1888 he married a girl, and furnished a house gorgeously stocked with stables with horses, cows and carriage—all stolen. He was a bigamist. His second wife, overcome by his disgrace, went West.

All Discharged.

On Tuesday afternoon Charles Breckenridge and George Lutz, who were charged with stealing a set of harness from E. M. Hartman, and John Quinn, charged with being accessories, had a hearing before Alderman Spurrier. Mr. Hartman was unable to identify positively the harness found in his possession, so that knocked the bottom out of all the cases. There was no evidence against the men charged with being accessories, and the whole lot were discharged.

Men Discharged For Drunkenness.

In accordance with the recent order of President Corbin, of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad company, four engineers and four firemen were discharged on Monday night Count Herbert Bismarck held a conference with Emperor William and insisted upon having his resignation accepted. The cause of death was enlargement of the heart.

A Glass Broken.

Charles Hess, a quite small boy, accidentally broke a large plate glass in the window of George B. Morrow, on East Orange street, yesterday afternoon, by throwing a stone through it. The glass was shattered.

GIVEN A GOLD-HEADED CANE.

W. T. Eberman Receives a Token of Esteem From the Fire Department.

Last evening the members of the city fire department had a gala time when they presented to W. T. Eberman, a member of the committee from the fire ward, with a beautiful gift. Mr. Eberman was a member of council for seven years, and since that time he has been one of the fire committee. He has always been a friend of the fire department members and has advocated everything that looked to their interests, so that the boys have a very warm feeling for him. Mr. Eberman, about retiring from council and the firemen decided to show their appreciation of his services before he left.

There was a meeting of the fire committee last evening at which the only business transacted was the approving of some bills. After the meeting Select Councilman Everts told Mr. Eberman that the committee intended to go to the home of Company No. 3, on East King street, to look at the piston of the engine which was broken. Mr. Eberman knew no better, and he went along with Mr. Everts, John Creasbaugh, George Fritsch, John E. Schum, who constitute the remainder of the committee with the exception of Joel D. Haldy, who was not present. After the committee had reached the engine house, the chief engineer summoned the members of the department by giving one tap on the bell. Among the other folks present were: Mayor Edgerly, ex-Councilman Geo. M. Berger, Councilman W. Parke Cummings and others. After everybody had assembled at 7 o'clock and the committee had fallen in line on one side of the room and the fire committee on the other. Chief Engineer Vondermuth then stepped forward and in a neat little speech presented Mr. Eberman with a beautiful cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

Mr. Eberman was so much surprised, yet gratified, at the turn affairs had taken that tears came into his eyes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he managed to make a short speech thanking the boys for the gift. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane. He stated that his object in assembling the fire department at the house was to present him with the cane as a token of esteem in which he and the fire committee were united. He said that Mr. Eberman was always a friend of the firemen when in need and they hoped that in the future he would take the same pride and interest in them that he had in the past. They did not want him to give up the good feeling that he had, and they hoped that he would visit the firemen as often as he could. The chief engineer then presented him with the cane.

THE FRIENDS OF TREES.

THEY GATHER TO FORM A BRANCH OF THE PENNSYLVANIA FORESTRY.

A Committee Appointed to Prepare a Constitution and By-Laws—Views of Lancasterians and Prof. Fernow.

The meeting called for Tuesday evening in the cricket room, for the purpose of forming a branch of the Pennsylvania Forestry association, was not largely attended, on account of the inclement weather.

It was called to order by Simon P. Eby. A. F. Hosteter was elected chairman and Frank R. Diffeender secretary. Mr. Eby, in stating the object of the gathering, referred to the importance of the work. There is plenty of it to be done around Lancaster. The object of the association is not that every member starts out to plant trees, but to create a sentiment and educate the people in forestry. It is not the intention to put all Lancaster county under forests, and when we have them never to cut them down, but to preserve timber in places for sanitary reasons and also to plant trees, not for timber, but for the preservation of the soil. Hundreds of tons of the soil of Lancaster county are annually carried away, and the subject is important in this aspect. The soil carried away, geologists tell us, took thousands of years to create, and yet the people see it going away and do nothing to prevent it. Get people who own land on the banks of streams to plant trees and save the soil. It is not the intention of the forestry association to plant all the wheat fields in the county with forests; only the waste lands. Trees along the Conestoga would prevent the earth washing into the creek, and do away with the dirt water Lancaster people have so often to drink. In conclusion Mr. Eby read the following letter:

Organizer of the Lancaster Forestry Branch: Gentlemen—After my recent experience among you, which was pleasant and profitable, I am very much interested in the success of your proposed forestry organization. Let me write therefore a few words of counsel, which may have some effect before you meet. I want to make sure that they shall be presented.

The beginning of your efforts should be to have a school for the people, and the importance to forge the iron while it is hot. That is to say, whatever you do in the way of propaganda, do it now and with all energy, for if you wait until the winter of your existence you arrange for meetings of your branch, perhaps in the house of some member—in the various towns of the county—some friends that are not yet fully interested.

The first effort of your organization should be to gather definite and tangible data regarding the condition of the woodslands in your county, with reference to water conditions especially, and also to fix the places where re-forestation is desirable, and to make a list of the places where this forestry work can be done by the individual members as they go, it will be easier to bring about action, because you are not waiting until the winter of your existence you arrange for meetings of your branch, perhaps in the house of some member—in the various towns of the county—some friends that are not yet fully interested.

Mr. Robertson watched him and saw him coolly strike a match on the wall and look about. Then he deliberately absented Mr. Robertson's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket. The burglar struck another match when Mr. Robertson jumped out of bed and grappled with him. The cold muzzle of a pistol was aimed at Mr. Robertson's forehead, and he was forced to get up. Mr. Robertson was less than a block away, getting into the residence of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar. Manuel was aroused before the burglar got into his room, though he gave him a good scolding. The burglar's gold watch and bracelet, which he carried in his pocket, were found in the room of John Manuel, another mason, and a warm friend of the burglar.

"GOOD" MR. TUTTILL.

He Was a Church Member and Considered a Respectable Citizen, But Frove to Be a Villain.

One of the most respected citizens of Mont Clair, N. J., has been James Tutthill, a boss mason. He arrived there from Fort Jervis five years ago. He was a member of the Mont Clair Congregational church, and won the respect of his fellow townsmen. He joined Excelsior Lodge No. 2, and several social clubs, and every one knew him and respected him. He never drank nor swore, was ever ready to help any one in need, and liked his friends by the score.

Now all this changed. Tutthill is a member in the Haywood street jail, Brooklyn, his handsome wife is locked up in jail at Newark, and their names excoriated by the same people who only a week ago were proud to be seen on the streets with them.

The eminently respectable Mr. Tutthill has been found out to be the reckless burglar who has been robbing the homes of the wealthy in Mont Clair, Glen Ridge, Bloomfield, Orange and surrounding towns, and his wife is suspected of being an accomplice.

Shortly after Tutthill's arrival in Mont Clair several bold burglaries were committed in rapid succession. The burglar was a man of about 35 years of age, of medium height, in which to find his plunder. As the burglar was always masked, no one could ever give a description of him. Tutthill was a member of the Mont Clair Congregational church, and won the respect of his fellow townsmen. He joined Excelsior Lodge No. 2, and several social clubs, and every one knew him and respected him. He never drank nor swore, was ever ready to help any one in need, and liked his friends by the score.

Now all this changed. Tutthill is a member in the Haywood street jail, Brooklyn, his handsome wife is locked up in jail at Newark, and their names excoriated by the same people who only a week ago were proud to be seen on the streets with them.

The eminently respectable Mr. Tutthill has been found out to be the reckless burglar who has been robbing the homes of the wealthy in Mont Clair, Glen Ridge, Bloomfield, Orange and surrounding towns, and his wife is suspected of being an accomplice.

Shortly after Tutthill's arrival in Mont Clair several bold burglaries were committed in rapid succession. The burglar was a man of about 35 years of age, of medium height, in which to find his plunder. As the burglar was always masked, no one could ever give a description of him. Tutthill was a member of the Mont Clair Congregational church, and won the respect of his fellow townsmen. He joined Excelsior Lodge No. 2, and several social clubs, and every one knew him and respected him. He never drank nor swore, was ever ready to help any one in need, and liked his friends by the score.

Now all this changed. Tutthill is a member in the Haywood street jail, Brooklyn, his handsome wife is locked up in jail at Newark, and their names excoriated by the same people who only a week ago were proud to be seen on the streets with them.

The eminently respectable Mr. Tutthill has been found out to be the reckless burglar who has been robbing the homes of the wealthy in Mont Clair, Glen Ridge, Bloomfield, Orange and surrounding towns, and his wife is suspected of being an accomplice.

Shortly after Tutthill's arrival in Mont Clair several bold burglaries were committed in rapid succession. The burglar was a man of about 35 years of age, of medium height, in which to find his plunder. As the burglar was always masked, no one could ever give a description of him. Tutthill was a member of the Mont Clair Congregational church, and won the respect of his fellow townsmen. He joined Excelsior Lodge No. 2, and several social clubs, and every one knew him and respected him. He never drank nor swore, was ever ready to help any one in need, and liked his friends by the score.

Now all this changed. Tutthill is a member in the Haywood street jail, Brooklyn, his handsome wife is locked up in jail at Newark, and their names excoriated by the same people who only a week ago were proud to be seen on the streets with them.

The eminently respectable