AMCASTER, PA., April 23, 1890. A Lively House, Too. A Lively House, Too.
We had occasion very lately to say a Congress was really getting lively; indisement to the remark coming an interesting debate in the Sentimental Senator Vest discussed China and read some nice poetry about town. The contagion speedily spread the House, in which Mr. Allen, of Missippi, yesterday discussed Benjamin prison and his administration, illustration and his administration, illustration and his semestra also with a few his remarks also with a few saful lines of poetry describing the tion of the postmaster general to landay school, the vice president to ottle and the president to the baby; a the rest of the Washington d looked on and waited for the of these divers influences upon conduct of the administration ar Allen had warmed the Republiup, Mr. Cannon proceeded to read list of defaulting Southern state

The York Evening Post was read to of the bad men in Tammany I, and to give it the narrative of is in his individual speculations got to be too hot for the Republi who called upon the speaker pro to stop the denuncation of Quaying forbidden by the rule which deing forbidden by the rule which de-to the members of the House the rilege of speaking evil of senators. his rule is a natural one in bodies rule is a natural one in bodies alch seek to save the feelings of their re, but it is manifestly not in the bile interest when it is construed to bid the truth being spoken about air record as public functionaries, and present. Under its cover. Darlington, of the Chester diswas encouraged to say that it untrue that Mr. Quay had been iter as treasurer, and that he had best means of knowing it, because was on his bond. But there had never an allegation that Mr. Quay cost bondsmen anything or that there was acknowledged defalcation while he s treasurer, the statement being that need the public funds in his own sulations but put them back again on he left the office.

The been so common a practice in maylvania to thus use the treasury of during the many years that the treasury has served as the financial linear of the Republican party and alastay of the Republican party and a leaders, that it doubtless causes real price to these men that anyone hald make a fuss about so natural an tion. They think that when are smart enough to get the money the triennial change of treasurers, or take, they have done their whole to the state, and that it is nobody's s what meanwhile has been done h the money. THE secident to the Sound steame Puritan turns out to be much more serious than at first supposed, and while it increases confidence in the staunch qualities of the confidence in the staunch qualities of the great Sound steamers it strongly impresses the perils of Sound navigation. The hole knocked in her is thus described: "It began in a mild way about half way back from the bow to the wheel and deepened and broadened rapidly back to beyond midships. It was a torn and ragged indentation in the iros skin, 100 feet long, and broad and deep enough to have held half of a big hogshead laid round side in. For the most of the distance the plates were not torn away, but were broken and filled with holes. Further back the heavy iron was torn as if it had been paper and one jagged flap was hanging down while other pieces seemed to have been torn out altogether. Such a hole would have sent her to the bottom in a short time but for the fact that her hull was double." At six o'clock on summer evenings a procession of steamers summer evenings a procession of steamers of the various Sound lines leave New York, and it is a wonder that their thousands of passengers are so safely carried through the narrow passes.

COMPRESSED air motors for street railways and locomotives operated by com-pressed air for use in cities are elaborately described in consular reports from Paris, and it is held that they are thoroughly succossful and very economical. The motor does not require special track or overhead appliance; is almost noiseless, very light, safe and easily managed. "In crowded days or times of day the number of passengers may be easily augmented by the addition of one or two tenders or ordinary cars without a motor, thus making a short train." The locomotives which are particularly adapted for underground roads look like an ordinary French locomotive without the smokestack or tender and weigh from forty to fifty-five tons. The consuls in their comparisons of motors consider only horse railways and make no attempt to compare with the electric motor. Probably the French system would not be rapid enough for the demands of Ameri-

CUBAN advices Indicate that affairs on that island, as in Spain itself, are steadily drifting from bad to worse, but in Cuba there is evidence of exhausted patience on the part of the intelligent element of the population, and annexation to the United States has many bold advocates. In one Cuban paper, La Discussion, a Spaniard writes in reply to the protest that discussion of annexation is illegal. "The cession of Florida was not discussed, because at that time there was no Cortes and no liberty of the press. In 1865 the cession of Santo Domingo was discussed and realized, and in 1871 the cession of Chafarinas was dis-cussed and not realized. The Cortes, the king, can sell, give away or exchange the island of Cubs, if a minister or senator proposes and the Cortes authorizes it. Newspapers may counsel the minister, the senator or the representative in Congress city passenger railway of Harrisburg in-tends to use the storage battery system as soon as it is perfected. The Patriot sought information as to what advance was being made in the system, and found a very crooked street line in the village of Pullman, Illinois, running with p faction. In three and three-quarter miles there are twenty-two curves. The bed o the railway is laid in concrete, and is, without doubt, the finest road-bed possessed by any street rallway in this country. The rail is known as the girder railwhich has lately come into great favor with street car companies. Mr. Pullman tried horse power for his new road for two trips, but it was demonstrated at once that horse flesh could not stand those curves. Mr. Pullman was opposed to overhead electric wires. After negotiations with several electric motor companies a car was fitted up by the Detroit storage battery company. The INTELLIGENCER has often called attention to the storage battery system as requiring no poles or wires each car being perfectly independent. In Pullman the cars are "charged" at night when stored in the barn. "Connection is made with a dynamo, the operation taking five or six hours. The cars can be placed in different stations, miles apart, and still be 'charged' from one generating station. The storage battery can be used on any ordinary street car, but in constructing new cars eswhat stronger than ordinary cars. Long, easy riding cars, with flexible trucks, are being designed for electric motor equipment. The car now in use at Pullman scarcely differs from the ordinary street car, except that the truck has six wheels instead of four. Each car provided with batteries is capable of drawing two or three 'trailers.' An improvement which is said to be contemplated by street car managers is to have seats of all street cars in the centre of the cars, facing outward. In other words, the present seats are, in the coming street car, to be exactly reversed, so that rows of passengers may look through the windows into the street instead of facing
