LANGASTER, PA., April 29, 1890. Prohibiting Prohibition.

the United States supreme court, so judges dissenting, decides that the ser of Congress to regulate commerce ween the states prevents a state from sing, under its laws, packages of incleating beverages that have been ought into it from other states. This practically a prohibition of state pro-sition and compels the Prohibitionists shange their field of labor and to seek persuade Congress to permit the verages. We understand from the nal and state legislation may acaplish this prohibition, but that the at of Congress is needful under its itutional power to regulate comros between the states. There is no denial on any side of this alleve that it is conceded that intoximay be imported into a state which rbids their sale ; but the contention is at after the liquor has entered the tate, the authority of the state sale. We understand the supreme art to say that this may not be, since mmodity that may be lawfully taken to a state may be lawfully sold there, the power to take it in would be coless and there would be practical colai of the authority of Congress over

It is settled that liquor may be taken to a state that prohibits its sale and ay be sold there in the original packunder federal authority despite the prohibition. We understand how-that the federal authority covers ly the one sale in the original package; that the importer must sell directly the consumer and the buyer must y not sell it again ; a situation that is vorable to the vending of liquor in tiles but adverse to its sale in barrels.

We are not sure that the supreme dsion has this limitation, as it not distinctly stated, but it is a fair forence from the argument made and If that the case called for. Kegs of beer ent into Iowa by an Illinois brewer had see seized by the state officer, and the nestion before the court was whether had been done lawfully. The first ourt to guess said no, the second yes ad the supreme court has followed with

It is a question upon which there is banty of room for two opinions. Conregulates interstate commerce and se state regulates the conduct of its copie. The powers collide where ree brings into the state that hich it considers deleterious to its peo-The authority of Congress to force rt declares, is of doubtful propriety a its exercise. If the people of a state may lawfully prohibit the manufacture of intoxicating beverages in its territory, it seems that its importation should be forbidden with like lawfulness, nd that congressional power should not balk the state in its government of its people. It seems to be an unreasonable situation that is secured by this decision, in that the manufacturers of liquor ntside a state are given greater privieges than its own manufacturers can have; and further that in a matter of domestic policy the federal power nul-lifies that of the state.

Effect the Samoan Settlement.

Mileatoa, deposed and kidnapped by the Germans and restored by the influence of the United States, has signed as king of Samoa the treaty for the settlement of the troubles of his country. It may be hoped that peace will be lasting and that the natives and foreigners will develop a vigorous little commonwealth in those beautiful islands. The United states should be certain of friends there or many a year, and in spite of severe criticisms of the final agreement with Germany there can be no doubt that our prestige in the Pacific has greatly increased by the Samoan affair. The evidence of lively sublic interest throughout the United States in the events transpiring so far away and so slightly affecting us individuals must have impressed eigners with respect for our national spirit. The English are said to move as a nation only when John Bull feels his pocket touched, but no slur of the kind could in any way be applied to America's course in Samoa. There it was the evarice of Germans that brought on the rouble, and America, with trifling interests but much honor at stake, called halt. If, with a navy absurdly feeble and over a matter of no commercial value, this nation is ready to go to extremes for the maintenance of national faith and to check aggressions; the feeble powers of the world may believe that America is a friend worth having, and great advantages in commercial treaties should be within our grasp.

The Mississippi. It seems strange that in this age the question of the best way of overcoming the overflow of the Mississippi should se a matter of doubt. It would seem that the earth had suffered enough from river floods in its history to have ascured by this time the best soluion of the problem of controlling them, and yet we have the yearly demonstration of the inefficacy of the costly en-gineering of the Mississippi; and we listen to a debate in the Federal conate in which there is still a avoring the levee system, which has proven so grossly inefficient, and the other advocating the creation of addisional outlets, only to be confronted by the declaration of their opponents that such outlets would certainly result in the still further shallowing of the great

The idea of the levee is to confine the iver within the river bed, and trust to the deepening of the channel by the river does not deepen sufficiently to be kept within its banks, and its present disastrous overflow demonstrates beyond a peradventure that something else must be done than has been done to execute the idea, or it must be abandoned in favor of the simple expedient of open-ing flood channels for the water. We believe that the plan of Mr. Eads, who constructed the jettles at the mouth of the river, called for the construction of works at points along the river which would increase its current and deepen its channel; and that it contemplated eventually the sinking of the river bed so that the levees might be dispensed with. Such a re-sult if it can be had is certainly one devoutly to be hoped for. It would put the river in a bed deep enough to carry off its floods and within natural banks that cannot be broken through. There is urgent need that the engineering science of the country shall settle the question of the proper plan and for Con-gress to appropriate the money to exc-cute it.

The timber fires in South Jersey have destroyed over fifty thousand dollars worth of fine trees, and although the rain has extinguished the flames the farmers are afraid that they will soon break out again, as there is little doubt of their incendiary origin. Timber thieves who steal the wood for sale have been threatened with shooting, and it is supposed that these desperate characters fired the timber in revenge. This sounds like a very mean sort of revenge, but it is not half so mean as the conduct of some electric linemen, who have girdled and killed fine trees in this county without the least provocation.

ABOUT this time expect to find in all the newspapers cynical, and possibly witty, re-marks about the spring poet. This has been so firmly established as a regular phenomena that the poet has been snuffed out or snowed under, and is rarely heard from save in burlesque form.

At the colored Methodist conference in session in Baltimore, Bishop Brown observed that the colored man ought to vote as he prays, and if he does not vote he ought to be put out of the church. This sentiment was received with applause, and yet a great many of his hearers practically do not vote, but allow themselves to be voted by blindly giving their allegiance to a party that arrogantly claims their ballots. Judging from campmeeting and revival scenes the colored vote would be a very lively element in politics if the colored brother should follow Bishop Brown's advice and vote as he prays. A vote so guided would be pretty sure to drop the right way every time. Though they may fall from grace be tween revivals, the brethren usually come up to the scratch when properly appealed to, and a colored political experience meeting would be a highly interesting event. It is time that there was a declaration of independence from Republicanism and resentment shown to the foolish claim that the colored ballot must be Republican because given under a Republitalk about Democratic control of the Southern colored vote, but the Northern negroes have been more firmly controlled by an unfair and illogical appeal to their grati-

THE Missouri branch of the Farmers' Alliance is making arrangements to store and hold grain until they can get their own price for it. This measure may be necessary to meet the cvil effects of the speculative operations of grain brokers, but it is a policy that needs to be kept well under control, or it will run away with a great deal of money. A grain corner managed by an alliance would be quite as bad for the country as one managed by brokers, for the effect of these operations on the foreign market is not at all pleasant. The price makes the Russian and Indian grain rush for the market. If properly cared for that market should be ours for many a day to come, for we have cheap water communication with Europe and a railway system unrivalled by any other nation, and with an intelligent farming population using the best machinery it ought to be any easy matter to supply the Old World with the ext a food it may need. Networks of steel rails in Russia and India may in time make those lands the more natural granaries of Europe, and we are foolishly hastening that day by a clumsy tariff and reckless grain speculations. The elevator experi-ence of the Missouri farmers may awaken them to the conditions prevailing abroad, so that they will appreciate the force of arguments for the development of our prosperity by the extension of foreign commerce, stimulating agriculture, manufacturing and trade.

OUR local Republican contest is exciting attention abroad. The Philadelphia Times, after noting quizzically the queer com-bination in the dance, says with a proper touch of seriousness: The one contest in Lancaster that attracts wide interest is the desperate effort of the jobbers of the soldiers' orphans' schools to defeat Representative Kauffman for senator It would be a reproach upon the intelli-gence and integrity of the Republicans of Lancaster to permit so worthy a man, thus assailed for the most patriotic and heroic public service, to be defeated by the efforts of those who stained the noblest charity of the state with cruelty and theft.

THE Philadelphia Inquirer says "the Examiner and INTELLIGENCER seem to be booming Mr. Myers" for Congress. There is no doubt that the Examiner is booming him. What the INTELLIGENCER says of Republican contests is matter for public information and not for the advantage of a particular candidate.

York Cigarmakers Striko.

Twenty-seven cigarmakers at Bayler's cigar factory, York, went on strike on Monday. The men were working for 15 cents per hundred on rolling jobs, and claiming that this is two cents less on every hundred than is paid in some of the other factories, and 8 cents less than is paid for the same work in other cities, they demanded that they be paid 17 cents per hundred. The advance was refused. They say the remaining forty-seven men will be out by the end of the week. York Cigarmakers Strike.
